Gov. Lehman's Attack On Court Bill Spurs New Fight in Senate

N. Y. Governor's Letter to Senator Wagner Voices Alarm.

Highly 'Dangerous Precedent' Feared

Declares Bill Is Not in Best Interests of Country.

Court Bill Developments.

Gov. Lehman of New York in a letter yesterday to Senator Wagner called President Roosevelt's court reorganization bill a "greatly dangerous precedent."

Opponents of the bill returning to the Capital from the funeral of Senator Joseph T. Robinson hailed the letter as a "knockout blow" for the bill.

Senator J. Hamilton Lewis, party whip, appealed to Democrats to set aside differences and agree on a court plan as Senator George, of Georgia, carried the case of its opponents to the public in a radio address last night.

Calls Bill Dangerous.

By the Associated Press.

Albany, N. Y., July 19.—Differing with his old "chief," New York's Democratic Governor, Herbert H. Lehman, today called President Roosevelt's Supreme Court reorganization plan "a greatly dangerous precedent."

Later the Governor's secretary said "scores" of congratulatory telegrams were being received by the man whom Roosevelt, while himself Governor, called "my strong right arm." Lehman was lieutenant governor at the time.

In making public a letter to Democratic United States Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, asking him to "voice my opposition to the court bill," Lehman praised Roosevelt's "social program," but declared he was convinced enactment of the bill would not be in the best interest of the country." Text of the Governor's letter was as follows:

"I am writing to you as a citizen of the State of New York which you represent in the United States Senate to voice my opposition to the court bill and to express the hope that you will vote against it.

His Views Strengthened.

"The President is already familiar with my views with regard to the bill. Several months ago I wrote to him that I believe its enactment would not be in the best interests of the country. In the months that have passed since then my convictions have become strengthened.

"Like many others I have frequently felt keen disappointment that important legislative measures have been declared unconstitutional by a slim and unconvincing margin in the Supreme Court. And yet I believe that the orderly and deliberate processes of government should not be sacrificed merely to meet an immediate situation.

"From the broad standpoint of the public interest whatever immediate gain might be achieved through the proposed change in the court would, in my opinion, be far more than offset by a loss of confidence in the independence of the courts and in Government procedure.

"I have wholeheartedly supported most of the President's social program, both while he was Governor of New York and since he became President of the United States.

"His program, taken as a whole, has, in my opinion, represented the greatest step forward in social reform that any nation has undertaken for many years. I look forward to the opportunity of continuing to support his courageous leadership in matters that are in the interest of the social well-being of our people.

Sees Dangerous Precedent.

"This bill, however, I believe to be contrary to their interests. Its enactment would create a greatly dangerous precedent which could be availed of by future less well-intentioned administration for the purpose of oppression or for the curtailment of the constitutional rights of our citizens."

It's always fair weather when good fellows get together. At least, that was Tom McCarthy's observation of his unexpected meeting with some fellow Knights of the Road.

This particular episode took place along the road en route to the "bad lands" of South Dakota—and it's a mighty interesting story the Postilion tells today on Page 9.

'Jimmy' Walker Pays Roosevelt A 'Cordial' Visit

Sees President First Time Since Ouster Fight; Takes Wife Along.

By William V. Nessly.

Franklin D. Roosevelt and James J. Walker met again yesterday.

It was the first time they had spoken together since those turbulent days, five years ago when "Jimmie" Walker, Mayor and idol of New York, faced Gov. Franklin Roosevelt in the Hall of Governors at Albany, and for 12 days listened to demands that the Governor remove him from office. The hearing was the outgrowth of the Hostadter legislative committee's investigation conducted by Samuel Seabury.

Called Hearing Travesty.

Angered at the manner in which Mr. Roosevelt conducted the hearings, Mayor Walker, on September 1, 1932, suddenly resigned, issuing a statement terming the hearing "a travesty, a mock trial, a proceeding in comparison with which even the practice of a drumhead court-martial seemed liberal."

Ten days later he sailed for Europe, and thereby passed out of the Democratic political picture in which he had been probably the most colorful figure. While he was abroad, the Governor he had so severely criticized was elected President and the New Deal came into being.

Yesterday, Walker, much changed from the days when he was the wise-cracking, always-late toast of Broadway, appeared before the President as a private citizen presenting a project for a new privately financed railroad bridge across the Hudson River at New York City.

This time "Jimmie" was better than on time for the appointment—he was there 20 minutes ahead of the time set.

Accompanied by Mrs. Walker, the stunning former actress, Betty Compton, he had a 15-minute chat with the President on the bridge plans. What else, if anything, was mentioned was not disclosed.

"Politics?" he was asked.

"No," came back quickly. "He hasn't time and I am not in politics any more."

No More Mayoralty.

Asked about a suggestion that he might be made a candidate for mayor again, he said:

"I wouldn't run for mayor again if the public demanded it."

He is not committed to support anyone in the mayoralty race, he said, and doesn't expect to take part in the campaign.

The former mayor was all seriousness but as dynamic as ever—presenting the picture of a typical business man talking in the interest of a vast project—the bridge development would involve some $150,000,000, he said—and with lit-

Showers Likely Today to Follow Cooling Breezes

Showers were forecast as a possibility for today by the Weather Bureau as an aftermath of yesterday's cool northeast and east winds that broke the back of the heat wave, tumbling the mercury to 64 at 8 a. m. That was the lowest point recorded since July 4, when the thermometer registered 63.

Yesterday's high was 84 at 3:20 p. m. No commmensurable change in temperature was predicted for today.

Opponents Drop Plan to End Long-Drawn Battle Today.

Governor's Action Called 'Knockout'

Delegation Returning From Arkansas Is Aroused.

By Franklyn Waltman.

A Staff Correspondent.

The Congressional party which attended the funeral of Senator Joseph T. Robinson in Little Rock, Ark., returned to Washington aboard its special train shortly before last midnight.

Aboard Special Congressional Train En Route to Washington, July 19.—Opponents of the Supreme Court reorganization plan today hailed as the "knockout blow" Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's denunciation of that measure, as they sped toward Washington to commence the most tense week of political struggling that has taken place on Capitol Hill in several decades.

The proponents of the Court plan scoffed at the Lehman letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner as meaningless or maintained silence. But it was clear they were far from comfortable as they laid plans to keep their lines from wavering.

News of the Lehman letter, received when the train stopped at Chillicothe, Ohio, immediately became the all-absorbing topic of conversation among the 38 Senators, 23 House members and other high-ranking Democratic officials, including Vice President John N. Garner, Postmaster General James A. Farley and Under Secretary of Interior Charles O. West—the latter legislative liaison officer for the President.

This new development in the Supreme Court fight, coming with the unexpectedness of a bombshell, relegated to a secondary place for the day the keen struggle going on over the Senate leadership contest. It likewise disarranged plans which were being formulated for procedure in the Senate tomorrow.

Showdown Is Near.

For a time the leaders of the Senate opposition to the Court bill had favorably considered attempting to end that bitter and historic fight tomorrow, with a motion to recommit the bill to the Judiciary Committee. But after word was received regarding the Lehman letter, this plan was abandoned, but not without dissent on the part of some of the opponents, including the Republicans aboard. They believed that tomorrow was the strategic moment to strike.

The Democratic opposition leaders, however, did not want the Supreme Court fight to become intertwined with the Senate leadership battle. Thus they contended that nothing but routine business should be transacted in the Senate tomorrow, leaving the court battle to go over until after the Democratic caucus on the leadership Wednesday morning.

The feeling which inspired this

Marconi Is Dead at 63; Inventor of Wireless

Veteran Scientist Expires In Italy After Heart Attack.

By the Associated Press.

Rome, July 20 (Tuesday).—Guglielmo Marconi, inventor of the wireless, died suddenly last night of a heart attack at his home here.

During the early morning his family called the celebrated physicians, Prof. Cesare Frugoni and Dr. Attilio Pozzi, to the inventor's Padre Eart home. After a brief examination they pronounced Marconi dead of paralysis of the heart.

The world shrugged a skeptical shoulder and smiled tolerantly in 1895 when Guglielmo Marconi announced laconically:

"I have discovered how to telegraph without wires."

Yet within a decade ocean liners were keeping in touch with each other and with shore by means of "Marconigrams," and hundreds of lives had been saved by prompt response to the old distress signal of "PDQ."

And just as the Bell telephone followed the Morse telegraph, so wireless transmission of the human voice within a few years became a reality.

House Again Refuses D.C. Loan Power

Ignores Plea of Hazen Washington Faces Bankruptcy.

By James D. Secrest.

Ignoring warnings employes of the District will go payless unless Congress comes to its aid, the House yesterday refused to give the National Capital authority to obtain emergency loans from the Treasury in anticipation of taxes.

Even while the House was indulging in one of its customary sock-the-District contests, Melvin C. Hazen, chairman of the Board of Commissioners, warned the House and Senate District Committees the failure of Congress to enact tax legislation or to permit borrowing was driving the Capital toward "municipal insolvency."

Still hopeful of forestalling a fiscal crisis, Senator King, chairman of the Senate District Committee, said he will seek to call up in the Senate today or tomorrow a companion joint resolution to that rejected by the House.

Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, who failed to win the House over to the resolution under suspension of rules yesterday, stated he will try again next Monday, which is District day.

As the House has now twice refused to approve the resolution, however, there is little reason to believe it will change Monday.

The first time it struck the clause from the omnibus tax bill. Yesterday it voted down the resolution, 90 to 65, although an amendment had been attached permitting the Secretary of the Treasury to collect interest up to 3 per cent.

Aggravating the difficulty that usually confronts District legislation in the House yesterday was inter-committee jealousy that has been growing ever since the election of Representative Palmisano (Democrat), of Maryland, as chairman.

Japan Issues Ultimatum; Chinese Firm

Evacuation Is Refused Unless Tokyo Troops Also Leave.

By the Associated Press.

Nanking (Tuesday), July 20.—Japanese sources declared today China had replied to the virtual ultimatum to withdraw her troops from the battle area with a reiteration that no settlement would be acceptable unless Japanese troops also were withdrawn.

"The only terms acceptable to China for settlement of the crisis were contained in yesterday's note," Japanese said Wang Chung-hui, Chinese foreign minister, had told Shinrokuro Hidaka, the Japanese charge d'affaires.

Yesterday's note declared Japanese troop movements indicated the "clear intention of Japan to resort to force" and proposes the two countries agree to simultaneous withdrawal of their armed forces to the positions held before the clash west of Peiping July 7.

Urge Local Settlement.

Japanese said their representative had informed Wang in the two-hour conference that Tokyo desired the Nanking government not to interfere with a local settlement of the incident.

To that Wang was said to have replied China had no "objection to a local settlement as long as the Nanking government approves of it."

The Japanese army earlier issued a "last warning" to the Chinese central government together with the ultimatum to Chinese military commanders in the north.

The ultimatum, issued at Tientsin following reports of a new clash west of Peiping, threatened swift "independent action" unless attacks on Japanese soldiers ended by noon today and Chinese troops left the trouble zone.

The Japanese insisted on quick enforcement of an oral agreement made Sunday with Gen. Sung Cheb-yuan, commander of the Chinese Twenty-ninth Route Army,

200,000 Troops Battle Along 30-Mile Front; Madrid Defense Holds

Rebel Leader Shows His Increasing Favor for Don Juan.

By the Associated Press.

Salamanca, Spain, July 19.—Insurgent Generalissimo Francisco Franco gave assurances today to his royalist followers that the Spanish monarchy eventually may be restored.

In an interview in the royalist newspaper ABC of Seville, Franco made fewer conditions about a restoration than in his proclamation last spring uniting all the insurgent parties.

The insurgent leader showed increasing favor toward 24-year-old Prince Juan de Bourbon, third son of former King Alfonso, as successor to the throne his father was obliged to leave in 1931.

The insurgent leader indicated there was no hope, however, for a return of Alfonso himself when he said:

"If the moment for a restoration arrives the new monarchy ought to be very different from the one that fell . . . different in theory, in practice and—even though it is painful, we must face the facts—even as to the person of the monarch himself.

"He (the new monarch) would be a new link between the new order and the traditional glories of Spain."

Praises Young Prince.

"I have the highest opinion of the talents, discretion and understanding of Don Juan, who sought in the first days (of the civil war) to go to the front . . . I had to beg him to leave Spain.

"He asked a post in command of a warship as his rank and training warranted, but I could not grant his request. My responsibility was very great and I had a duty not to

PRINCE JUAN DE BOURBON.

Leftists Keep Key Points as Franco Shifts Force to Regain Salient.

Guns and Planes Massed for Clash

Rebels Moved Up From North; Loyal Airmen Have Edge.

By the Associated Press.

Madrid, July 19.—The greatest battle of the Spanish civil war raged through its fifth day today as the insurgents poured thousands of fresh troops against the government's newly won lines west of Madrid.

One hundred thousand men were believed to be fighting on each side. No longer was it a tactical struggle for position or a few miles of territory, but the bitter clash of two armies trying to destroy each other.

Generalissimo Franco hurled his greatest strength against the salient in the government lines at Brunete, 12 miles west of the capital. The insurgent drive evidently was designed to wipe out the government's recent gains, which, in a two-week offensive, had been driven far enough to constitute a grave peril to the insurgent forces besieging Madrid.

The battle roared over a 30-mile front. Hundreds of airplanes were aloft. The roar of artillery—hundreds of guns of from 3 to 10 inches—could be heard plainly in Madrid.

Smoke Over Battle Lines.

Over the 100-square-mile Brunete salient, captured by the government 10 days ago, hung a heavy curtain of smoke, broken by flashes of cannon and bursting air bombs.

Already the conflict was called "the battle for Madrid." Realizing the great danger to their Madrid front unless the government's wedge is wiped out, the insurgents had drawn men from their Bay of Biscay front as far away as Coruna in the northwest.

Government officers estimated the insurgents had not less than 150,000 men concentrated on the Madrid-Sierra front. They said at least 42,000 men had been sent to Sevilla La Nueva, Cerebros, Navalagamela and Boadilla del Monte, towns behind the insurgent lines facing Madrid.

In addition to thrusting at Brunete from the south, the insurgents were driving toward Villanueva del Pardillo from the east, but in spite of the fury of their attacks had been unable to recapture either of these vital points.

Scores of Planes Shot Down.

Violent air attacks were the most striking feature of the operations on both sides. Planes by the score savagely bombed enemy positions, while battles in the air were numerous in which 60 to 80 planes at a time fought over miles of territory, struggling desperately to establish supremacy in the air.

Scores of planes already have been shot down, but insurgent losses were reported larger than the government's. Now air squadrons were being thrown constantly into the struggle.

The amount of war material used up was described as staggering. Barrages of World War intensity were laid down by both sides. Infantry advances were possible only after a great weight of metal had been hurled on the objective.

Government officers expressed gratification over their army's attacking power, as shown in its capture of a strategic town in the Brunete sector.

The insurgents were said to be using the same tactics which enabled them to capture Bilbao last month, but the government resistance here was described as infinitely more powerful than on the Basque front.

Rebel Bomber Explodes.

Government observers said they counted 320 insurgent planes over a 30-mile area. It was too early to count losses and gains in a major air battle over Villafranca del Castillo.

One fleet of bombers tried to attack government positions in the Casa de Campo, just west of the city, but antiaircraft fire exploded one of the ships wih a roar heard over most of Madrid.

Government commanders took precautions against surprise attacks over the Guadarrama Mountains from Segovia, insurgent stronghold northwest of Madrid. Another possibility, they said, was a drive from El Escorial, further south, pointed along the road to Torrelodones and Las Rozas.

Although this would endanger the government position, military lead-

Sultan Prevents General Strike On D.C. Projects

Walkout Threatened on Treasury Painting Jobs Over Nation.

The strike picture in the National Capital underwent further changes yesterday, both rosy and dark hues being added:

A threatened general strike on all municipal projects here was headed off by Engineer Commissioner Dan I. Sultan following a noisy three-hour conference with union representatives and contractors.

Union painters paraded before the Internal Revenue Building waving flaming "unfair" banners to indicate that only non-union men were to wield brushes inside, and Bryce P. Holcombe, business agent of the Painters Union, announced that he would ask his international organization to order a walkout on Treasury jobs all over the country.

Woodward & Lothrop Trustee Dies at Tree Tops, Maryland Estate.

Luke I. Wilson, retired Chicago manufacturer of wearing apparel and a trustee of Woodward & Lothrop, died yesterday afternoon at his estate, Tree Tops, on the Rockville pike, near Bethesda, Md., one of the show places of suburban Montgomery County.

One of the wealthiest of Washington suburbanites and widely known in business circles both here and in his native Chicago, Mr. Wilson had been in failing health for several months. He was 65 years old.

Retiring, seldom in the public eye, Mr. Wilson's name was brought into the public prints in August of 1935, when he donated 40 acres from his estate to the use of the United States Public Health Service as a site for the erection of a research center.

Opposed by Neighbors.

Establishment of such a facility in Montgomery County whereon the Federal Government's famed "microbe hunters" might raise their own white mice and guinea pigs and where they might search for more life-saving serums, was opposed by a group of the county's citizens. The opposition died down, however, and while no buildings have yet been raised on the site, the ground has been prepared.

Mr. Wilson became interested in the life-saving role of research scientists at the National Institute of Health in Washington. Learning of the difficulties of obtaining animals

Ships Sent to Aid Cruiser Aground Off Bahama Isle

Four Coast Guard cutters, two patrol boats and a Navy tug last night were rushing to the aid of the light cruiser Omaha, aground off Castle Island Light at the entrance to Crooked Island Passage in the southeast Bahamas.

Capt. Howard B. Mecleary, commander of the Omaha, reported the Omaha ran aground early yesterday. He did not report the extent of damage and said the 7,050-ton light cruiser was in no immediate danger.

The Navy tug Patriot, which had been at Guantanamo Naval Base, Cuba, was sent to the aid of the stricken vessel as soon as her plight was reported, naval officers said. Coast Guard headquarters here said that four cutters and two patrol boats from Southeastern ports also had been dispatched. The Navy oiler Salinas, now fueling at Guantanamo, would leave soon to go to the assistance of the light cruiser, Navy officials said yesterday.

The Omaha, which has been in Central American waters, was relieved as flagship of the special squadron by the gunboat Charleston on July 16.

Rear Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard, announced yesterday that the Coast Guard cutters Unalga, Tampa, Marion and Mojave had been sent to the aid of the Omaha. The patrol boats Pandora and Vigilant also have been dispatched to the assistance of the grounded ship, he said.

Mother Sees Beltsville Baby Kidnaped, Hurried Off in Car; Trooper Finds Child Naked, Overpowers Woman at Berwyn

20-Month-Old Boy Is Returned Home Safe an Hour Later.

A 20-month-old baby boy, son of Norris Shane, employe of the Department of Agriculture, was kidnaped last night near his home in Beltsville, Md., but within an hour he was back in the arms of his frantic mother and State police had taken into custody a blonde woman about 40 years old as his kidnaper.

The woman, almost 6 feet tall and apparently demented, was held without charge at the Hyattsville Jail, where she was taken only after a terrific struggle with civilians and police.

About 7:30 p. m., the child, Philip Shane was playing near the street car crossing in Beltsville, not far from the Shane home with his sister, Joan, 7, and his brother Allan, 5, when a large new green sedan with a canvas top drew up to the curb.

The car was driven by a woman who was riding alone. She called to Philip who toddled over to the machine, climbed in and sat on the woman's lap. For several minutes the woman sat playing and talking with the child, then suddenly she slammed the door of the car and raced away.

The other Shane children stood at the curb, shrieking in terror. Their cries were so loud and so constant that their mother, Mrs. Alice Shane, who had told them to play quietly, knew something was wrong.

The Shane home is on a side street about a block from the Washington-Baltimore boulevard and Mrs. Shane reached the intersection in time to see the green sedan speeding toward Washington.

Her husband was at work, and Mrs. Shane ran back to the house and telephoned to the Maryland

Giantess Battles With Captor When She Is Overtaken.

State police Substation at Laurel and gave Sergt. Charles Durham a description of the woman, the machine and told him the direction taken.

Mrs. Esther Minocks, an entomologist, employed at the Department of Agriculture Research Center at Beltsville, followed the sedan until it stopped in front of a barber shop on the boulevard. She said the woman appeared to have difficulty in restarting the motor.

She obtained the license number of the car which bore one District tag on the rear, and gave the information to Mrs. Shane who relayed it to police.

Sergt. Durham speeded south on the Washington-Baltimore boulevard without bothering to stop at the home of the child in Beltsville. To this fact the Shanes probably owe return of their baby unharmed.

At a gas station in Berwyn, Durham noticed a car of the description used by the kidnaper. As he pulled into the station a naked child, the Shane baby, ran from the auto toward a garage. A second later the woman got out and ran after him. The woman was only partially dressed.

Sergt. Durham grabbed the woman. She put up a terrific struggle, clawing with her fingernails and biting. Two civilians, James Walker and Charles Shaw, both of Berwyn, witnessed the struggle and came to the officer's assistance.

Together they were barely able to force the woman into the police

Police Testify Strikers Beat Them in Riot

Coroner's Jury Studies 10 Deaths in Chicago Steel Clash.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Two policemen told a coroner's jury investigating the slaying of ten men in the Memorial Day steel strike riot they shot attackers after being knocked to the ground.

The officers' testimony concluded a day of dispute over the number of slain demonstrators shot in the back. A union physician said seven had been wounded in that manner. The coroner's pathologist, who examined the bodies, said only one had been shot from the rear.

Officers Walter P. Oakes, 46, said the crowd of marchers approached the police in front of the Republic Steel Corporation's plant in south Chicago, and threw a shower of missiles. Oakes said he was knocked down by a blow from a pick handle and looked up to see another man about to kick him in the face.

"I rolled over and fired five times in rapid succession directly at him," Oakes testified. "The man staggered and fell back."

Officer Lloyd C. Casey said three men attacked him and that he was knocked down after breaking his night stick on one. Then a man approached with a club to which a meat hook was attached, Casey said, and from his prone position he ordered the man to stop.

The officer said he fired a warning shot into the ground, and when the man continued toward him he fired a shot which bowled over the assailant.

Sen. Black Urges Check on Machine As Menace to Jobs

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Black (Democrat), Alabama, of the Senate Labor Committee, said yesterday tremendous increases in the productive capacity of men and machines make it advisable for the Government to keep close tab on technological progress in industry.

The Alabaman praised a proposal of the National Resources Committee for a group of agencies to report periodically on the effect of machines upon employment and the national economy.

President Roosevelt previously had approved the proposal, while John W. O'Leary, of Chicago, an executive officer of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, had declared the premise of the committee's report is "all wrong."

Black argued that, while new machines have created new industries and new jobs, the transition has been costly for workers affected by the change.

Gov. Lehman's Letter Opposing Court Plan Viewed as Evidence of Roosevelt Rout.

By Franklyn Waltman

A BOARD Special Congressional Train En Route to Washington.—In view of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's letter to Senator Robert F. Wagner, it should be obvious that the longer the Supreme Court fight is prolonged the greater the rout it will become for President Roosevelt and the Administration forces.

WALTMAN.

Gov. Lehman's letter indicated "several months ago" he privately undertook to plead with the President to abandon the Supreme Court fight. Mr. Roosevelt rejected that advice as well as similar advice given to him by many other close friends. So Gov. Lehman felt that Mr. Roosevelt's obstinacy—there is no other word for it—made it necessary for him to give public expression to his attitude.

The result has been to give further emphasis to the cleavage which Mr. Roosevelt has rent within his party—and this time the President cannot characterize the Lehman opposition as the work of reactionaries and "defeatist lawyers." Even though the Administration, after publication of the letter, commenced spreading word that Gov. Lehman has been "off the reservation" for several months, that he has a "private peeve," and that the President has refused to let him have all the relief money he wants, they cannot accuse Gov. Lehman of being a tool of the predatory interests or a hidebound conservative.

Oh, no, they cannot do that, because the country well remembers how the President's friends, led by Jim Farley, virtually got down on their knees at the Democratic convention at Philadelphia last June, and begged Gov. Lehman to be a candidate for reelection. The whole convention was organized into an amazing and unprecedented demonstration imploring Gov. Lehman to withdraw his statement that he proposed to retire from the Governorship.

Then and later it was impressed on Gov. Lehman that as a loyal Democrat he was needed by the President in order to help carry New York State. In view of what happened in the election, all that seems a little silly. Nevertheless, it took place, with hallelujahs going up to the effect that Herbert Lehman was as great a liberal as Franklin D. Roosevelt—and Gov. Lehman put aside his personal inclinations and acceded to the importunities of the President, Jim Farley and, indeed, the entire National Democratic Party.

So—unless the President wants the country to commence laughing or to regard him with amazement—he cannot dismiss the Lehman opposition with wise cracks about "defeatist lawyers" or "economic royalists." Nor can the Lehman letter be laughed off as evidence of pique because more relief money was not forthcoming for New York. Heaven knows that this Administration has never let a few millions of relief dollars stand in the way of silencing opposition or salving disturbed consciences.

Perhaps the most significant aspect of the Lehman letter is that it reveals how an outstanding Democratic leader of New Deal vintage and a close friend of the President really feels about the Supreme Court plan. If Gov. Lehman feels that way, some Senators are beginning to reason, is it not possible that many other leaders in the party feel likewise but have kept silent in the interest of party harmony? Who interest of party harmony? Last week it was Hatton Summers. This week it is Gov. Lehman. Who will speak out next?

Gov. Lehman in his letter said he informed the President, "several months ago," how he felt. The President apparently kept that a dead secret, because publication of the letter came as a terrific shock to most Capitol Hill Democrats—even though it was a pleasant shock to the court plan opponents.

On the Senate special train returning from the Robinson funeral, the news was first received with incredulity by both opponents and proponents. Several Senators were not convinced the news was genuine until they were shown excerpts of the text of the letter sent to the train by press associations. Only Jim Farley seemed to have any advance knowledge of the Lehman attitude.

As has been said in this place before, the entire fight over the court plan has been one series of Administration blunders. Let's enumerate only a few of the last week. It was a mistake for the President to withhold from his followers on Capitol Hill the knowledge that Gov. Lehman was seeking to have him abandon the bill. He let that blow strike them like a bombshell, throwing panic momentarily into their ranks.

One need spend only a day or two among Democrats of all stripes of belief to become convinced that the President's "Dear Alben" letter was another mistake. In the first place, it recognized Senator Barkley as having a priority claim on the vacant Senate leadership, thus enraging the friends of Senator Pat Harrison, many of whom are supporting the court bill. Secondly, that letter needlessly and without basis singled out the opponents of the bill to charge them with indecency. It made more rigid their opposition.

The President made a strategic error when he invited to the White House last Thursday night—a few hours after sending the "Dear Alben" letter—Senators Lewis B. Schwellenbach and Sherman Minton, along with Senators Pittman and Barkley, for a discussion of the situation. Mr. Roosevelt attempted to keep that meeting secret, but like all such things, it quickly leaked out.

Veteran Senators supporting the court bill, like Pat Harrison, who may be the next majority leader; James F. Byrnes and Henry Ashurst were not included in that conference to discuss the court fight and other legislative matters—as Barkley explained. But two first-term Senators were included Even the other first-term Senators resent that action.

And, finally the Administration blundered when it placed Assistant Attorney General Joseph B. Keenan, the personnel officer of the Justice Department and the liaison officer between Senate and White House in the court fight, aboard the Robinson funeral train. The only conceivably logical reason for Keenan boarding that train was to lobby for the court plan, and he did, with every Senator knowing he is the man who places the O. K. on candidates for appointments to the judiciary, district attorney and United States marshal posts. The fact that Keenan returned to Washington via air, instead of on the funeral train, was a tardy acknowledgement of the blunder already made.

The cards simply are not running Mr. Roosevelt's way. His followers are beginning to realize that he can make mistakes, and that after all he is no more infallible than they are. That is the real damage which Mr. Roosevelt's court fight is doing to him—destroying his prestige as a political genius.

Three in Small Boat Drowned in Storm

Mount Clemens, Mich., July 19 (AP).—The Macomb County sheriff's office reported tonight the apparent drowning of three young Detroiters in a rowboat accident on Lake St. Clair. The victims were Miss Margaret Mahon, 18; her brother, James, 22, and Miss Mary Rose Johnston, 21. Miss Mahon's body was recovered and Anchor Bay was dragged tonight for the other bodies. The party set out in a rowboat Friday night from a lake cottage and did not return. A squall blew up shortly afterward.

Chinese Crisis Involves World, Wang Asserts

Assails Japanese 'Design,' Says Nanking Is Ready to Negotiate.

Disturbance of the tranquillity of the whole world was forecast last night by Dr. C. T. Wang, Chinese Ambassador, should Japan "aggravate the situation and further infringe upon the territorial sovereignty of China."

In a statement on the critical North China situation the ambassador accused Japan of cherishing "a far-reaching territorial design on China," and said China was ready to settle differences with the Tokyo government on any of the pacific procedures known to international law and practice.

Meanwhile, State Department officials continued study of all available reports on the Chinese-Japanese threat. Secretary of State Hull has made it plain this country intends to pursue a separate and independent course in seeking to prevent further hostilities in the Far East.

"Territorial Design."

Dr. Wang's statement said:

"As I have had occasion to make known to the world, Japan cherishes a far-reaching territorial design on China. To realize her premeditated design, she has systematically employed the strategy of creating incidents in various parts of China. After an incident is thus made, there follows invariably a display of force and the insistence on her part in settling it locally. Her continental policy is, indeed, ambitious and comprehensive, but her means to that end is piecemeal.

"Since the Mukden outrage of September, 1931, Japan has persistently followed such a policy; the Shanghai incident of 1932 demonstrates to satiety that Japan desires to work out her scheme in China by degrees. During the Shanghai incident, we resisted vigorously and the negotiations undertaken by Mayor Wu of Shanghai were guided by the central government. Hence Japan did not secure as much as she otherwise would.

Urges Diplomatic Procedure.

"The Chinese government is perfectly aware of such a policy and therefore China insists that the Lukuochiao incident which happened on July 7 must be settled by the governments concerned through their regular diplomatic channels. On our part, we are ready to settle any or all of the differences with Japan by any of the pacific procedures known to international law and practice.

"The Chinese people are one in their attitude toward Japan. The whole nation is united in one thought that Japanese aggressions in China must be unrelentingly resisted even to the degree of supreme sacrifice. We sincerely hope that Japan will not aggravate the situation and further infringe upon the territorial sovereignty of China; otherwise it will not only mean chaos in the Far East, but inevitably it will lead to the disturbance of the tranquillity of the whole world."

Rep. Snell Announces He Will Push Inquiry Into Democratic Campaign Books' Sale.

FORMAL DEMAND that the House Rules Committee report out a resolution to investigate the sale of Democratic campaign books will be made within a few days by Representative Bertrand H. Snell, of New York, House minority leader.

Snell said yesterday he has become "impatient" with the "laggardly attitude" of the Rules Committee on the question. He said:

"I put my resolution in more than a week ago. I haven't heard a peep out of the committee.

"Meanwhile my desk has been flooded with mail indicating that the hi-jacking sale of these campaign books is still going on, with corporations forced to buy them in blocks or forfeit their Government contracts."

Snell put in his resolution a week ago last Saturday. In it he demanded appointment of a five-man committee to explore all aspects of the sales of the books, charging their sale was a "clear violation" of the Federal corrupt practices act.

SENATOR THEODORE G. BILBO wants to go back to his native Mississippi mighty bad, suh, but there are complications.

"I am crazy to go home," he admitted. "This is the hottest place this side of hell."

Not long ago he said something about cattle "stampeding" and he put Congress in the cattle class.

But Bilbo isn't going to start a stampede to adjourn, not he. Somehow he has the impression the President wouldn't want him to, until his program is enacted.

"And I want it understood," the Mississippian said, "that I'm an Administration man, from hell to breakfast."

ACCOMPANIED BY FERVENT hopes of its backers for early Senate action, a $24,877,00 bill authorizing construction of levees, flood walls and drainage structures along the lower Ohio Valley passed the House. Projects covered by the bill are "priority and emergency projects," said Chairman Whittington, of Mississippi, head of the House Flood Control Committee.

Army engineers would select the projects and communities would be required to provide necessary land and rights of way and pay damage costs.

No opposition was expressed on the House floor. However, Representative Jenkins (Democrat), Ohio, qualified his support with an assertion that many smaller cities would be unable to take advantage of the legislation and that "'ten times more money" is needed.

Whittington said a comprehensive flood control bill, embracing projects for the Ohio and other rivers, would be sought next session. He added President Roosevelt has asked that no action be taken on such a measure this year.

CHEROKEE INDIANS of western North Carolina will decide, by secret vote, if they will grant the National Park Service a right-of-way through their reservation for the Blue Ridge Parkway, if the Senate passes and President Roosevelt signs a bill, the work of Representative Weaver (Democrat), of North Carolina, passed by the House yesterday.

The park service wants the Indian land to construct a link of the parkway between Soco Gap, N. C., and the Great Smoky Mountains Park. Indians would receive lands in the park in exchange for the right-of-way.

Opposition to the proposed transfer was voiced by the American Indian Federation when Weaver's bill was before the House Public Lands Committee.

Lengthy hearing held up action on the measure and it was reported only after Weaver proposed the secret ballot.

The bill now goes to the Senate where another land trade bill is pending. Weaver announced he will ask Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, who introduced the Senate bill, to substitute the House measure when it comes up. The measure now before the Senate does not include the secret referendum provision.

A LOUISIANA DELEGATION argued before the River and Harbor Board today it would be feasible to establish flood control works in the Mermentau River basin.

Col. F. B. Wilby, New Orleans division engineers, turned down the $1,750,000 project on the ground it would not be in accord with the flood control act since its benefits would be only to the rice industry.

An appeal was taken to the board by Representative Rene L. DeRouen, Ville Platte, La.; W. B. Gregory, professor of engineering at Tulane University, and L. P. Elberson, Crowley, La., engineer.

They contended the flood control act was broad enough to cover the Mermentau project, which they said would be of benefit to 40,000 persons in the rice growing section.

The project, they explained, would permit advantageous use of flood waters in the rice areas by controlling its flow. The project, they said, would make it possible to flush the large White and Grand lakes of salt water which flows in from the Gulf during low water periods farther north.

Cherokees Hail Sacred Fires

Gore, Okla., July 19.—The blood of the lamb flowed today as the Kee-Too-Wahs danced the ancient stomp of the seven sacred fires, kindled a century ago before the Cherokee Indians began their trek along the "trail of tears" from Georgia.

Tribesmen eliminated the sacrifice of a white cockerel because the Indian Agency objected, but spilled the blood of two lambs, two calves and three shoats—for a barbecue.

At nightfall, after a day of feasting, games and listening to old men of the tribe retell the story of the Kee-Too-Wahs, the Cherokees saw the seven sacred fires, secreted in the hills, brought to the stomp ground near here by Kee-Too-Wah nighthawks.

Tribal legend has it that the Kee-Too-Wahs, secret society of the Cherokees, have kept these fires blazing continuously since 1829, when seven high priests of the tribe went upon a Georgia Mountain to pray.

In answer to their prayer, legend says, seven fires were miraculously kindled. These were kept burning as the tribesmen were prodded over the "trail of tears" to Oklahoma by bayonets of soldiers.

Tonight's dance is one of supplication to the fire gods. To be permitted to toss a stick of wood upon the eternal fires is considered a great distinction by the Cherokees and insures prosperity.

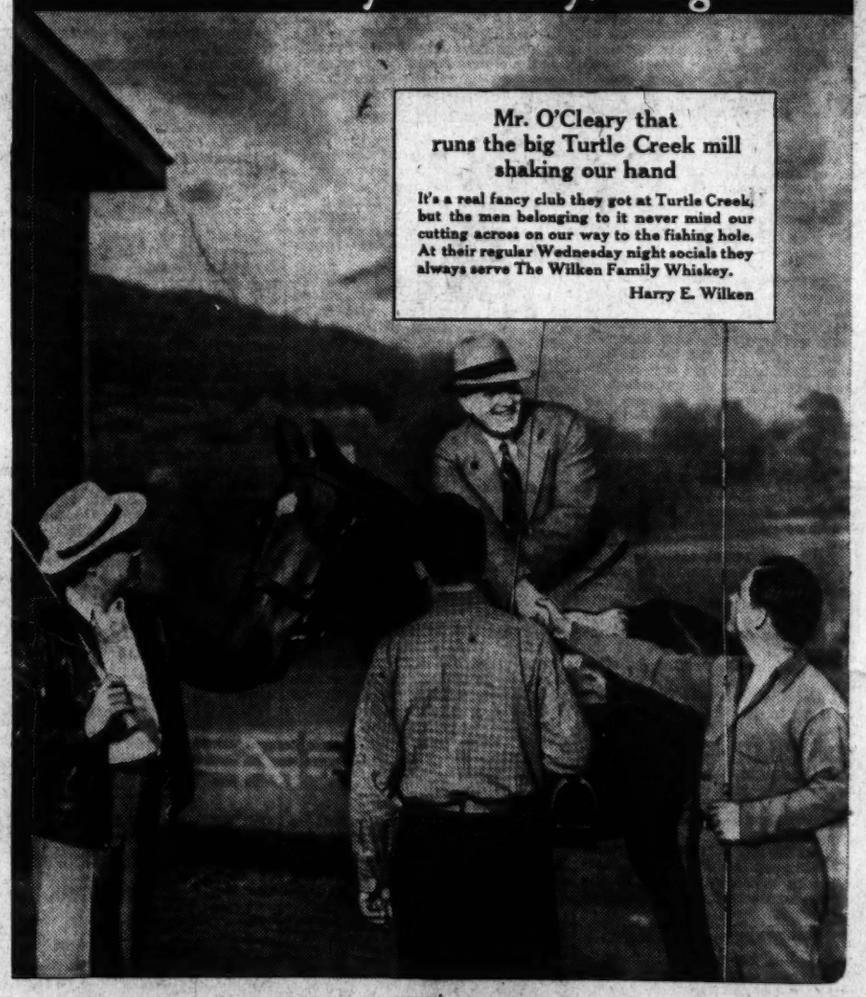
It's Our Family's Whiskey, Neighbor



Mr. O'Cleary that runs the big Turtle Creek mill shaking our hand

It's a real fancy club they got at Turtle Creek, but the men belonging to it never mind our cutting across on our way to the fishing hole. At their regular Wednesday night socials they always serve The Wilken Family Whiskey.

Harry E. Wilken

Real tony folks have taken up drinking Our Family's Whiskey now!

You can't hardly set your foot inside a store but what you hear folks asking for Our Family's Whiskey. But here's a funny thing. I never saw the real tony folks asking for it up until just lately. Tom says they couldn't help but of heard how this is the personal recipe of our Family and how we've been a family of distillers since way back in the early days. But Tom says maybe they had their mind set on paying a lot for their whiskey, and Our Family's Whiskey didn't cost them enough. Well anyways, they've caught on now—and I say the more the merrier!

Broun Denies Link to Russia, Assails Green

Calls A. F. of L. Chieftain 'Greatest Obstacle to Labor Movement.'

The deep-rooted schism within organized labor focused today on the American Newspaper Guild as William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, stood on record as charging Communist influences are leading the guild and Heywood Broun, president of the newspaper labor group, denied an alliance with Moscow.

Broun yesterday termed Green "the greatest single obstacle in the path of the labor movement." He added "the stone must be rolled away."

Broun, in a formal statement, said Green had raised the point that he was a Communist, but added the point was irrelevant, "but for the sake of the record, I might state that I am not a member of the Communist Party, although I warmly approve many points in the present legislative program of that party."

Broun "came knocking at the doors of the American Federation of Labor" about a year ago seeking a federation charter for the guild, Green said. The charter was granted, but, he went on, at the recent St. Louis convention of the guild, Broun, "inspired by some very astute Moscow-trained revolutionaries," took the guild into the John L. Lewis Committee for Industrial Organization.

"When I went to New York at Mr. Broun's invitation to present that charter, Mr. Broun, defender of 'free speech,' attempted to dictate my address. Failing in that, he proceeded to hurl invective in my presence; immediately I concluded my remarks, which were, in effect, a warning of where the Committee for Industrial Organization was attempting to lead the workers of America."

His Warning Ignored.

"That warning went unheeded, and a few weeks ago at St. Louis, at what was to have been a convention of an international union of the American Federation of Labor, Mr. Broun, inspired by some very astute Moscow-trained revolutionaries, took the guild into the C. I. O. He opened the membership to everyone in the newspaper plants from newsboys and charwomen to classified-ad takers, forgetting that before the guild existed there were unions of working newspaper men employed on labor publications and in the foreign-language press and there were affiliate unions in which newsboys, charwomen, office workers, et al. were perfectly free to join.

Broun Backed by Buck.

Cudgels were taken up on behalf of Heywood Broun by Robert M. Buck, head of the Washington Guild unit, in a statement yesterday.

Buck said he had opposed many of Broun's policies in the past, and added:

"Mr. Green, basing an attack against Heywood Broun on the action of a meeting of the Washington Newspaper Guild last Friday night, stated as an accusation against Broun, the following:

" 'He still feels that a union dominated by the rank and file of the editorial rooms of the American press could hold common aims with telephone operators, ad takers, carrier boys and what have you; and that the guild is in a position to carry one a fight for them when it is in reality in a death grapple with the American Publishers Association.'

Seeking Affiliations.

"The members of the Washington Newpaper Guild feel no superiority over workers in other than editorial offices in the newpaper industry, and it hopes that Mr. Green does not, notwithstanding the seeming implication of his words. The Washington Guild is actively engaged in helping to organize the workers mentioned by Mr. Green and is trying to organize them effectively in unions of their own with close affiliation in the guild, instead of within the same unit because, as Mr. Green says, it is not yet in a position to make their fight for them."

Fights Closed News Shops.

Detroit, July 19 (AP).—James G. Stahlman, president of the American Newspaper Publishers Association, told the National Editorial Association today that "the world has gone haywire," and called upon the press of America to "fulfill its high mission."

He asserted a "closed news and editorial shop" is "incompatible with, and inimical to, a free press," and invited the N. E. A., composed of editors and publishers of non-Metropolitan newspapers, to join with 12 other daily newspaper organizations in opposing such a movement.

Secretary Frank J. Coleman of the Central Labor Union announced last night that President William Green, of the American Federation of Labor, had authorized him to form an American Federation of Newspaper Correspondents here in the event the Newspaper Guild bolts the A. F. of L. to join John Lewis' C. I. O.

Hopes to Win Guild.

Coleman said that the forms were ready and that he was assured of applications from a majority of newspapermen now in the guild.

The Central Labor Union also endorsed the strike of painters on Federal buildings here.

Six men were nominated for the office of vice president at a meeting in Typographical Hall.

They were Charles B. McClosky, Frank S. Lerch, Charles E. Sands, George D. Wilson, Albert N. Dennis and D. R. Glass.

The office was made vacant by the resignation of Clyde M. Mills, whose work took him away from the city. The delegates last night also nominated three men for the office of trustee, a post made vacant by the resignation of Henry Rhine.

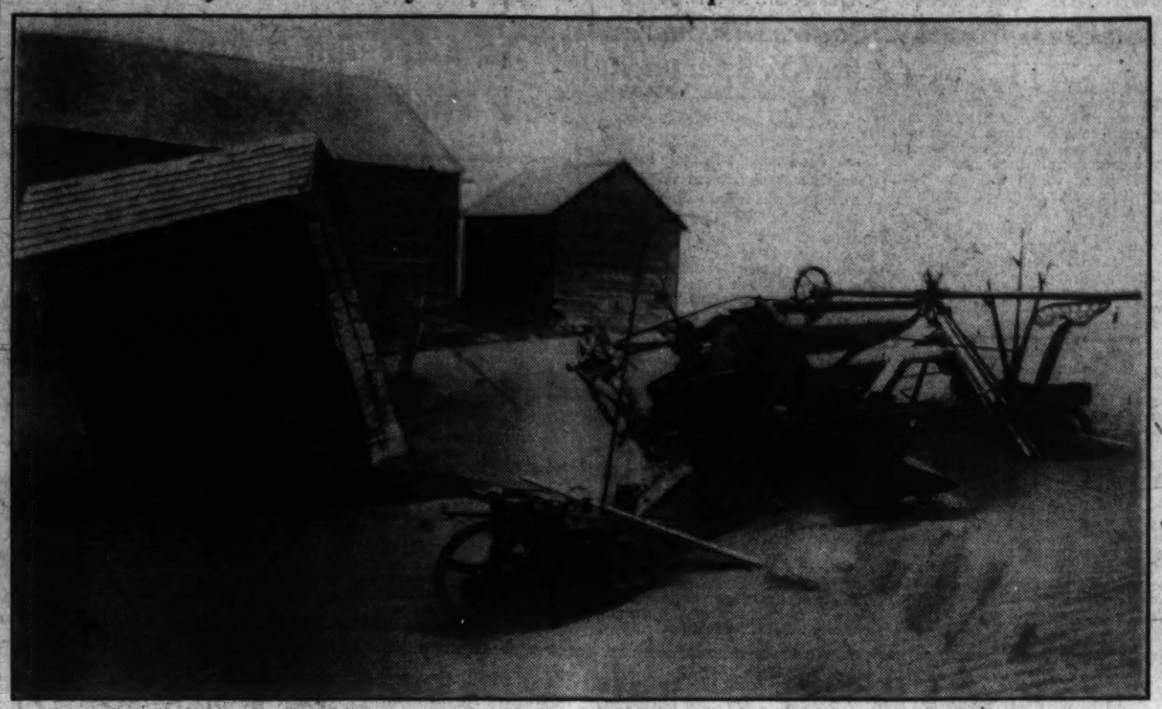
They were L. F. Clark, D. E. Dow and D. L. Ormes.

Jewelry Valued at $200 Is Stolen From Home

Elizabeth P. Hobbs, of 2517 Mozart place northwest, reported to police last night that a diamond ring and a gold wrist watch had been stolen from her apartment some time yesterday. The door to the apartment had been forced, she said, and a bureau drawer ransacked.

She set the value of the jewelry at $200.

Why Canada May Not Be Able to Export Wheat This Year



Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Rising wheat prices are to a great degree due to drought conditions such as these in Canada. This picture, made near Estevan, Saskatchewan, a few miles north of the North Dakota line, shows a binder almost covered with sand resting in a barnyard. There is no reason for the owner to dig it out, for he long since abandoned hopes for a crop this year.

Sultan Prevents General Strike On D.C. Projects

Walkout Threatened on Treasury Painting Jobs Over Nation.

ing and dyeing concerns last night voiced their desire for union representation for the purposes of collective bargaining in the first consent vote held in the District under the Wagner act.

In connection with the threatened general strike on municipal projects, Col. Sultan issued a stop order, the result of which will be to halt work on the Paul Junior High School and the Young School. The contract for the two jobs is held by John W. Hunt, who hires nonunion labor.

Reading the stop order to Hunt personally, Col. Sultan said that "charges have been made that you have been violating Department of Labor regulations and the law regarding wages."

Strike Canceled.

John Locher, secretary of the Building Trades Council, announced a "sympathy" strike at the Alice Deal and Eastern High School would be called off and that the union men who had been working there would go back this morning.

Union men asked Col. Sultan to issue a stop order against the Jeffress-Dyer Co., which has the contract for the Grimke School. However, Sultan said this would not be necessary because the Commissioners had not yet formally signed the contract. He warned Nelson T. Jeffress that his firm would proceed with the work at its own risk.

A new three-man board was set up by Col. Sultan toward the end of a four-hour debate, to investigate the charges made against the Hunt and Jeffress-Dyer firms by union contractors and union spokesmen. Union contractors and union officials battled shoulder to shoulder against the nonunion employers.

Hunt said it was true he had some nonunion men on his jobs but that the law did not require him to hire union men so long as he paid union wages. He said the least he paid any of his men was 60 cents an hour, and some received as high as $2 an hour.

To this the union allies charged he was using laborers for journeymen jobs, was "cutting corners" on costs, and was "violating the Bacon-Davis law," and other protective statutes for labor. Union spokesmen named numerous instances of what they called "law violations," which Col. Sultan upheld later by issuing the stop-order. "These cahrges must be investigated," he said.

Out of the welter of testimony, Col. Sultan drew this summation:

"This whole business seems to revolve around borderline problems of just where a journeyman's work begins and where a helper's work ends. Some sort of machinery should be set up to arbitrate these disputes."

Three on Board.

After some objection from the union allies, the Commissioner appointed the following three-man board:

Capt. H. S. Bishop, assistant engineer commissioner.

William H. Wahley, assistant corporation counsel.

Guy W. Pearson, chief clerk, engineer department.

They will begin immediately to hear descriptions of the proper duties of journeymen and apprentices, in such fields as steelwork, bricklaying, plastering, carpentry, etc. One of the examples cited, for instance, was that of steelworking. Union contractors pay $2 an hour, it was said, to anyone who handles steel after it is thrown off the delivery truck. They charged nonunion contractors were paying common labor wages to men who moved steel into buildings and carried it to the erectors.

"By using such practices," said Charles H. Tompkins, president of the Master Builders Association, "the nonunion contractor can save a great deal of money over the course of a big job, and thus is enabled to underbid union contractors. It's unfair competition."

Locher Consents Reluctantly.

John Locher, business agent for the Washington Building Trades Council, acquiesced to the proposal for an arbitration board only after stating:

"There used to be just such a board here in the District and our union filed complaint after complaint with them. They almost threw me out of the building. We never got any satisfaction."

Sultan replied that the new board would get to work at once, hear all testimony, and come to decisions expeditiously. If the disputants are dissatisfied with the findings they will be at liberty to appeal to the Department of Labor.

Locher indicated a threatened spread of the strike to other District work would not take place until the new board has a chance to demonstrate its ability and fairness.

Carl Schedler, attorney with the Labor Department, who sat in with the 35 disputants, said:

"If what has been said here today is true, then there very definitely has been a violation of the law. Any violation eliminates a contractor from bidding on Federal work for a period of three years."

Arthur Schoenthal, spokesman for the stonemasons' union, demanded a shake-up among local building inspectors. He said:

"The inspectors read the payroll sheets and O. K. them without bothering to find out whether the men are actually getting the pay shown. Some of these contractors in years past have been taking kickbacks from their workmen. They hire a certain clique of workers and keep them, and loan them to one another, workers who will work for less than the law requires as set forth in the contracts."

Sultan warned Nelson T. Jeffress that if he continues work on the Grimke School, he does so "at his own risk." Jeffress said he was willing to abide by the rulings of the United States Department of Labor, adding it was his understanding the department "gives full consideration to nonunion contractors."

Tompkins said members of his association "had given up bidding on D. C. business. There is discrimination here. We hear it from mechanics, from the unions and many sources, and if it's true, there's law violation." He explained his own firm, the Charles H. Tompkins Co., could bid as low as any contractor for jobs here, but could not get any awards. He said his belief was that he was being underbid by firms which did not hire workmen at the "prevailing" wage as required by law. The "prevailing" wage here is always the union scale.

Central Union Indorsement.

The Central Labor Union, with its 110,000 members here in Washington, last night heartily indorsed the painters strike after hearing it explained by Business Agent Holcombe.

As spokesman for the painters on walkout because of importation of nonunion men, Holcombe said he was in telephonic communication with the international office, and unless relief is given here he will appeal for a strike on all Treasury Department painting jobs.

Personally directing the pickets, he said that order would be maintained "unless we are interferred with, and then we would defend ourselves."

In all, two walkouts took place yesterday, at the Internal Revenue Building and the City Postoffice Building near Union Station. Picketing had not been ordered at the postoffice, but was expected by Holcombe to start early today.

Will Use Pickets.

Holcombe said he also would put pickets around the Apex Building, the Government Printing Office, the Archives Building, and the Treasury procurement division itself.

In the meantime, he intended conferring with the central labor body with a view to drawing off other craftsmen in a sympathy demonstration. This might have the effect of tying up all Federal construction in Washington.

The strike was precipitated when the Coons & Raptis Co., of Brooklyn, N. Y., contractors for the Post-office Building, and the William Wilson & Sons Co., of Atlanta, working on both buildings, brought nonunion men onto the jobs.

Holcombe said he intends complaining formally to the National Labor Relations Board that the Wagner act has been violated.

May Not Discriminate.

William Wilson, jr., contended that he asked the United States Employment Service for painters, without specifying union or nonunion, and that work on the Federal buildings was under way.

Acting Solicitor Gerard D. Reilly has ruled that the service could not comply with a specific demand for either nonunion men or men belonging to a given union. The Wagner act would be violated by either course, it was held. Should a contractor enter an agreement with a labor union, it would be regarded as an exception to the ruling. The service might then provide workers exclusively of that union.

The vote taken last night by employes of the cleaning and dyeing concerns was the culmination of a long-drawn-out strike, marked on occasions by violence.

Casting their votes in a makeshift cardboard box, placed in the lobby of the Garnett-Patterson Junior High School, 279 employes balloted secretly, 202 in favor of union representation and 77 against.

A total majority, however, does not apply to all of the 11 concerns, each company having a separate ballot form and regulated by the result of employes' vote in that particular plant. The two plants voting against representation by the Laundry Workers Cleaners and Dyers Internatoinal Union, Local No. 187, were: Aristo Cleaners & Dyers and Vogue Cleaners. Aristo employes voted 15 for the union and 20 against, with 2 challenged votes. The Vogue company voted 7 for the union and 18 against.

The election, conducted by Bennet F. Schauffler, regional director for the Fifth Region of the National Labor Relations Board, was held in the presence of five representatives of the board, six representatives of the union and nonunion employes, three representatives of the Women's Shopping League and six representatives of employers.

Employes were required to identify themselves before being permitted to cast their ballots and were recognized by plant watchers and checked on pay rolls.

Officials of the Labor Board did not open the challened votes pointing out they were of insufficient number to effect the outcome.

Disaster to Canadian Wheat Makes American Prices Soar

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Prolonged drought in western Canada, grain traders said today, has given the United States the best advantage over its traditional competitor for the world's wheat trade in years.

Private experts estimated the United States might have much more wheat to export than Canada—a reversal of the situation that has prevailed the last several years. Furthermore, sharp wheat price advances in recent weeks based on deterioration of the Canadian crop were estimated to have increased the value of winter wheat being harvested in the American Southwest by more than $120,000,000.

Rains last week over the three major grain-producing provinces—Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba—were believed to have broken the drought too late to benefit most of the wheat. However, the spread of rust in Manitoba appeared as a new menace to the Dominion's crop.

Recent private estimates of probable Canadian production ranged from 125,000,000 to 175,000,000 bushels, with the generally accepted figure in view of the rainfall close to the latter. Last year drought cut production to 212,000,000 bushels. A long-time average is well in excess of 300,000,000 bushels.

Reliable reports say much of the crop in southern Saskatchewan, where drought has produced the worst heat calamity on record, will make no commercial harvest at all. Normally, the province is the biggest producer.

Before last week's rains, the Canadian minister of agriculture estimated the Saskatchewan crop at 50,000,000 bushels. Alberta 65,000,000 and Manitoba 35,000,000. This would be the lowest total crop on record since Canada had anything like her present acreage sown to wheat. Since the rains, conditions have improved, particularly in Alberta, and reports today indicated some experts believe a crop of 75,000,000 bushels is possible in that province.

The Winnipeg market has led the advance of North American grain prices the last month. At the peak of $1.57 a bushel Saturday, highest in years, July wheat showed a gain of 42 cents a bushel in a month. July wheat in Chicago advanced about 24 cents in that time. Profit-taking has helped lower Winnipeg prices about 6 cents since the peak was reached Saturday.

Pedestrian Heaven In City of Future Is Exhibited Here

A city of the future where the pedestrian can walk without fear of sudden death and the motorist can always find a parking space was pictured before local officials yesterday in a series of slides shown at the District Building board room.

The model city was designed by Dr. Miller McClintock, Harvard University traffic expert, and Norman Bel Geddes, noted designer.

Their conception of the future showed highways where motorists may speed unimpeded and with vast parking lots occupying the first-floor space of all buildings. Pedestrians would walk along elevated sidewalks at the second-floor level and look into second-floor shop windows.

Among those who witnessed the designs were Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer, Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen and Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police. The showing was sponsored by the Shell Oil Co.

105 Stitches Used To Sew Man's Cuts

Edward Burgen, colored, of Alexandria, Va., after a cutting affray, required 105 stitches to close his wounds, none regarded as serious by Alexandria Hospital surgeons. Willie Ware, also colored, of the 500 block of North Royal street, Alexandria, is charged by police with the attack.

Rebecca Morris, colored, of the 500 block of North Columbus street, was also the victim of a cutting affray, 54 stitches being required for her wounds. No arrest has been made in this case.

Robert Eskridge, colored, 29, was arrested and charged with felonious assault with a knife on Viola Johnson, colored. The woman's wounds required nine stitches.

Scottsboro Trial Death Plea Waived

Decatur, Ala., July 19 (AP).—Possibility of death in the electric chair was dispelled from a "Scottsboro case" trial today for the first time in six years as the State waived a demand for capital punishment of Andy Wright.

Selection of a jury to try Wright, one of nine colored youths accused of mass attack on Mrs. Victoria Price, was started today.

The State agreed to ask only an imprisonment sentence, it was announced, following a conference between Samuel Leibowitz, chief of defense counsel, and Assistant Attorney General Thomas L. Lawson, prosecution head. Wright "was one of the younger" defendants in the case and "is not regarded by the State as a leader of the attacks," Lawson said.

Spanish War Recruiting Intensified by Loyalists

Amsterdam, July 19 (AP).—Police today charged increased activity in recruiting in The Netherlands for the Spanish government army since France suspended international control of her Spanish border. Officials said recruits were taken by bus to Paris, where a Communist committee arranges transportation to Spain.

Closed Bakery Sues 4 Unions For $300,000

Legal Action Brought Under Antitrust Laws Following Strike.

Relying on provisions of the Sherman and Clayton antitrust laws which permit recovery of triple damages for violations of antitrust provisions, Gundersheimer's, Inc., a bakery at 516 Second street northwest, yesterday filed suit in District Court against four unions and 137 members or officers for $300,000.

The bakery complained that its operations, dating back many years, had been brought to an abrupt halt July 7, when its union employes were called out on strike as a result of the company's refusal to cancel a contract with a Philadelphia union firm which has been supplying the local concern with some of its products.

Claiming it had an invested capital of $47,100 and did an annual business of about $75,000, the bakery ness of about $75,000, the bakery said it had always catered to the unions, employed only union help, and held contracts with the union for employment of union workers only.

Despite that, it was charged the company was notified it would have to cease purchasing some of its products from the Philadelphia concern, although the Pennsylvania products had aided in materially increasing the scale of locally manufactured goods by rounding out the firm's line.

Associations named as defendants were the Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America, International Brotherhood of Teamsters, Chauffeurs, Stablemen and Helpers of America, Bakery Salesmen's and Drivers' Union, No. 33, and Local Union, No. 118, Bakery and Confectionery Workers' International Union of America.

The suit alleged all were "sued in respect of a combination, conspiracy and agreement which plaintiff alleges was made and entered into . . . between them." The entire plant is now shut down, the complaint, filed by Attorneys Needham C. Turnage and Charles T. Clayton showed.

4 Stitches Close Wound in Heart, Knifed Man Lives

Henry Irvin, 32, 319 Clark street southeast, was alive last night though a knife gash in his heart has been closed with four stitches by a surgeon at Providence Hospital.

Furthermore, Dr. Fred Sanderson, the physican who performed the operation, said Irvin has a good chance to recover.

Hospital attendants said that brought in the gash in the heart had stopped circulation. The patient, they said, had no pulse.

Chain Gang Death Inquiry Pledged

Atlanta, July 19 (AP).—Representative E. L. Almand said today he and associates studying Georgia chain gangs under legislative authority will "thoroughly investigate" the death of a young white convict in an Atkinson County solitary confinement cell.

A coroner's jury returned a verdict last week that the prisoner, Ernest Locklear, died "by misadventure and misfortune caused by his own misconduct," and added "no one was directly or indirectly responsible."

The camp physician told the jury the youth possibly died from overexertion in an attempt to break out of the cell. Almand said he was advised Locklear died "after having been placed in a sweat box."

More Churchmen Arrested by Nazis

Berlin, July 19 (AP).—While the Rev. Martin Niemoeller, Protestant churchman, was awaiting trial, more Protestants who stubbornly refused to submit to Nazi church law were arrested yesterday as they were preparing to worship, it was disclosed tonight

Three pastors and 12 laymen were taken into custody.

Since the drive against the Protestant Confessional Church began in February, 139 Protestants have been arrested, 35 of whom are still in jail. In addition to 25 pastors forbidden to enter parishes, 24 others have been forbidden to speak in public.

First Lady Hired To Write Ads for Film 'Stella Dalas'

Hollywood, July 19 (U.P.).—Samuel Goldwyn announced tonight he has "hired" Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, to write movie ads for "Stella Dallas," a Goldwyn picture whcih will be released within a few weeks.

The announcement said the President's wife will work only on the "Stella Dallas" ballyhoo campaign.

The news leaked out in advance of the picture's preview showing here Thursday night. A studio spokesman said it had not been intended to release the announcement at this time.

Mrs. Roosevelt scorned a "ghost writer" and will write the entire series of advertisements herslef, the studio said.

Each advertisement will carry a headline, then Mrs. Roosevelt's "by-line." The advertisements will be carried in 12 national magazines as well as in newspapers. The amount Mrs. Roosevelt will receive as compensation was not disclosed.

Glass Condemns Fight on Van Nuys

By the Associated Press.

A White House visitor's prediction of future political difficulties for Senator Van Nuys, of Indiana, an opponent of the Roosevelt court bill, drew criticism yesterday from Senator Glass (Democrat), Virginia.

Glass refered to the statement of Gov. M. Clifford Townsend of Indiana, after a White House conference, that he did not believe the Indiana Democratic organization would support Van Nuys for renomination in 1938.

"I don't desire to project myself into Indiana politics," Glass commented, "but I have no hesitancy in saying that I would not have one particle of respect for any Governor of Virginia who would come to Washington and be guilty of such a performance."

2 Children Hurt In Freak Mishaps

Two colored children were seriously injured in freak accidents here yesterday.

Robert Ellis, 10, of 407 Oakdale street northwest, was in an undetermined condition at Gallinger Hospital suffering from a possible skull fracture. He was reported to have been struck by a seesaw while playing at Howard Playground, Fourth and W streets northwest.

Herlene Bailey, 6, of 1524 Thirteenth street northwest, was in critical condition at Children's Hospital from burns received when she backed into a lighted oil stove and set fire to her dress.

Md. Militia Parade Before Gen. Woodcock

First Infantry Is Praised Highly by Brigade Commander.

By Phillip Austensen.
A Staff Correspondent.

Camp Albert C. Ritchie, Cascade, Md., July 19.—Regimental parade in honor of Brig. Gen. Amos W. W. Woodcock, commanding the Fifty-eighth Brigade in camp here, was held today by the First Infantry, Maryland National Guard.

As Gen. Woodcock appeared on the field the band struck up "How Dry I Am," betokening remembrance that he formerly was prohibition administrator.

The regiment, commanded by Lieut. Col. Elmer F. Munshower, of Frederick, passed before its former executive officer so expertly and in such precision that Regular Army instructors attached to the brigade voiced praise from where they watched on the steps of the chateau.

Praise by Woodcock.

After the parade, Gen. Woodcock received the officers of the regiment at his quarters. Shaking hands with each, he said:

"I am proud of this regiment. I do not believe there is a finer regiment in the United States. I observed your at the parade Sunday and today and I believe that the State of Maryland is to be congratulated on having such a fine organization."

The First underwent a strenuous training program today. Headquarters companies of the regiment and battalions practiced radio and panel communication with airplanes of the Maryland air squadron flying overhead. Rifle companies underwent instruction in close and extended order and the machine gun and howitzer companies were trained in the handling of their respective pieces.

The Fifth Regiment performed a battalion maneuver that had been postponed from Friday.

Pistol Match Scheduled.

Interest is running high in a pistol match which is being arranged between Regular Army instructors and staff officers of the Fifty-eighth Brigade, to be shot in the next day or so.

The First Infantry will hold open house Sunday for visitors. A parade will be held at 3 p. m. in honor of the visitors.

The Service Company of Silver Spring will celebrate Montgomery County Day, an annual event, the same day. Capt. Ward W. Caddington, commanding, issued an invitation to all residents of the county to visit the camp Sunday and observe the two units from Montgomery County, the Service Company of Silver Spring and the Howitzer Company, of Kensington, commanded by Capt. Michael Pugh.

The Service Company today won the highest mention in camp area inspection.

Range work for the First will begin next Monday after the Fifth has left camp. The First hopes to better its record of last year when it won second place in the United States. The year before it won first place in the United States.

Outing Will Mark Battle of Bull Run

Arrangements are being made for the annual celebration of the battle of Bull Run on the anniversary of that historic event tomorrow. An all-day picnic will be held on the grounds beginning about 10:30 a. m., when Fred Myers will lecture about the battle.

At 2 p. m. Representative J. Ridley Mitchell, of Tennessee, will deliver the oration. Four members of the Washington Opera Guild, Evangeline Tully, Dorothea Cutting, Ida Wood and Thelma Hardy, will sing under the direction of Marie Morris.

State Senator John W. Rust, president of the Manassas Battlefield Association, and Mrs. Elizabeth C. Fred are in charge of arrangements.

Leader Calls on Business Women To Help Preserve Democracy

Now Fighting With Back to the Wall, Miss Williams Avers.

By the Associated Press.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 19.—The National Federation of Business and Professional Women was urged tonight by its president, Miss Charl Ormond Williams, of Washington, to devote its energies to preservation of democracy.

She observed democracy "as we know it" is little older than the steam engine and not an ancient institution; that it has not progressed steadily, but has received numerous setbacks, and now is encountering the greatest obstacles in its history.

"Democracy today," Miss Williams told the 1,200 convention delegates, "is fighting with its back to the wall, and its fate rests in the hands of a comparatively small number of people. No one nation on the face of the globe has so great a responsibility for the maintenance of this cherished institution than has the United States. . . ."

She said the federation was one of the few national groups which had undertaken a long-range plan of self-education fitting its members to "function intelligently as members of a democratic society."

"It would be agreeable," she observed, "to slide over in silence the danger abroad in the world, to forget the threat to democracy which lies behind the insecurity of average men and women in all countries, the stupendous inequalities of wealth, the sinister efficiency of modern armaments, the warlike maneuvers of foreign dictators, and the suggestion often made that it can happen here.

"Fortunately for democracy, and the people themselves, it will not run itself. Only through constant exercise of its principles is the fibre of democracy strenghtened. . . . The foes of democracy from the beginning have been greed and selfishness, apathy, ignorance and indifference."

Miss Williams said that defence of Democracy did not mean to fight against change, which she said was "bound to come."

"No group of individuals," she said, "is sufficiently powerful to hold back forever the desires of masses of our citizens for social security, better housing, for greater measure of social and economic democracy and world peace."

In her biennial report, Miss Williams announced the federation, after 18 years of organizing effort, now had clubs in all the 48 States. Rhode Island and Delaware women were the last to join in the movement, which was started by the Young Women's Christian Association. During the past two years membership has increased from 60,000 to 64,594, and the number of clubs from 1,458 to 1,505.

D. C. Lawyer Dies Serving Sentence In Baker Fraud

Lewisburg, Pa., July 19 (AP).—William Cameron Smith, a Washington attorney sentenced in the Baker estate mail fraud case, was found dead in bed in the hospital of the Federal Northeastern Penitentiary today.

Coroner William E. Roth, of Union County, said Smith died from natural causes. He said death was caused by a blood clot in the main artery near the heart.

Smith was admitted to the penitentiary last Wednesday to serve a sentence of a year and a day. New prisoners at the penitentiary are required to spend the first 30 days of their sentence in the hospital while undergoing physical examinations.

Plisco, in Court, Pleads Not Guilty

Abe Plisco, alias Dietz, pleaded not guilty before Justice Oscar Luhring in District Court yesterday, to a charge of conspiring with 31 others to violate the gaming laws of the District. He was released for trial under a $1,000 bond.

Plisco's arraignment had been held up for several days because of a misunderstanding as to the time when he was to appear. His attorney, Harry T. Whelan, stated last week Plisco was in nearby Virginia and would appear yesterday.

Plisco and 31 others are charged with maintaining a wire service from an office in the Albee Building through which they sent race track information to numerous establishments throughout the city. Federal agents tapped wires to obtain information upon which warrants were obtained and the office raided. The group will be tried early in the fall.

Girl's Killer Rushed Away From Crowd

Philadelphia, July 19 (AP).—Cesare Della Valle, 44, was arrested today charged with killing 16-year-old Augustina Massari. Police hurried the man from the Seventh and Carpenter Street Station and took him to the First Detective Division after a crowd of about 200 people gathered and threatened the prisoner. Lieut. Frank Mays said Valle admitted he shot the girl in her home last night, but refused to give a reason.

Tom Mix's Circus Will Open Monday

The Tom Mix Circus will open a three-day stand at the circus grounds at Twenty-fifth street and Benning road northeast next Monday, with the noted cowboy screen star featuring the program.

The show, which will give both afternoon and evening performances, includes in its cast the Hanneford family, English bareback riders; the Flying Arbaughs, Erma Ward, aerial trapeze artist; Max Gruber, European wild animal trainer; Ray Goody, tight-rope walker, and Frank Shepherd, veteran trapeze performer.

Fred Thompson, former director of the Mix Wild Westerns, produced the 1937 edition of the Mix circus and is responsible for many of its movie ideas. Chief of these is the "dancing horses" number, in which 75 (count 'em) former Hollywood girls, now equestriennes, revolve on horseback around the hippodrome track.

Couple's Battered Bodies Discovered In N.Y. Apartment

New Lork, July 19 (AP).—George Chinery and his wife, Ella, were found dead tonight in their second-floor Queens apartment under circumstances which led police investigators to believe they had been murdered.

Chinery's body lay in the bathroom. In the adjoining bedroom the body of his wife, clad only in underwear, was covered "from head to foot" with bruises, said Police Capt. James Smith.

Neighbors said they had heard nothing to indicate an attack. Pending examination by a medical examiner, police were unable to assign a specific instrument causing their deaths.

Mail addressed to the Chinerys dating from July 16 was found in their box.

Hindenburg Relics Arrive.

Hamburg, Germany, July 19 (AP).—Remnants of the metal framework of the dirigible Hindenburg were returned to Germany today from Lakehurst, N. J., where the giant ship crashed and burned May 6. The parts will be sent to the zepplin works at Frankfort-on-Main.

New Clash Brings Demand to Enforce Evacuation Pact With Sung.

which garrisons the Peiping-Tientsin region.

Gen. Sung was reported to have agreed to an immediate truce and withdrawal of his men. The Nanking government, however, has said it will not accept any agreement made with local Chinese officials.

More Japanese Arrive.

Despite the accord made with Gen. Sung, Japanese soldiers continued pouring into Tientsin. About 3,000 had arrived within 36 hours.

There were indications, too, that more were on the way. Japanese military authorities instructed the Japanese Wharfage Co., at Tangku, a port just east of Tientsin, to remove 7,000 tons of coal from the wharf by Thursday and to hold all lighters in readiness to carry Japanese troops at a moment's notice. They also inquired of foreign lighterage companies for similar facilities.

The Japanese, dominating Tientsin, enforced a strict mail censorship and stopped air mail service on the Chinese government's line out of Tientsin.

In Tokyo officials declared the movement of troops belonging to the central Chinese government into Hopei Province had violated the Ho-Umezu North China agreement of 1935 and constituted "agression" against Japan. The Japanese contend that agreement binds the Nanking government not to send any land or air forces into Hopei.

Japanese officials took a grave view of the refusal of the Nanking government to recognize the oral agreement reached at Tientsin Sunday.

In a note delivered to the Japanese Embassy and signed by Foreign Minister Chung-hui, China declared bluntly the dispatch of troops to the north was only a measure of self-defense against the greatly-augmented Japanese forces there.

The Chinese note was rejected and the Chinese were told to return a more acceptable communication.

All these developments, Tokyo authorities declared, greatly diminished hopes of achieving a local settlement of the crisis which has gripped the two powers since the night of July 7, when their forces clashed at Marco Polo Bridge, west of Peiping.

All night conferences were in progress at the war and navy offices, indicating Japan's preparations to cope with any development of the situation were going forward.

Even before the new fighting west of Peiping, Japan and China had exchanged accusations and protests over a clash between a Japanese scouting plane and Chinese troop trains on the Peiping-Hankow Railway nearly 200 miles south of Peiping. The Japanese pilot asserted he merely returned fire from the trains, of which he saw four moving northward.

Chinese Lodge Protest.

A Chinese protest asserted two Chinese soldiers had been killed and 20 wounded by the plane's machine gun, and that Japanese flights over the district in question violated China's sovereignty.

The Tokyo government continued to make public reports the Chinese government was moving large forces northward toward Peiping in violation of treaty undertakings. A foreign office spokesman produced an army map to support the account of big Nanking movements along the Peiping-Hankow Railway and also along the East-west Lunghai Railway, south of Hopei Province.

At least two central government divisions, he said, had advanced as far north as Paotingfu, 90 miles southwest of Peiping.

Marconi, Noted Inventor of Wireless, Succumbs of Heart Attack in Rome at 63

peals for aid when angry elements have wiped out material methods of communication with stricken communities, the Marconi invention has become one of the great boons of civilization.

Marconi, like Morse with the electric telegraph, turned laboratory discoveries of secluded scientists into practical use. The actual discovery of radio, from a purely scientific standpoint, goes back half a century before Marconi.

"Hertzian waves" were the immediate forerunners of the wireless transmission of code signals. They were named for Heinrich R. Hertz, a German physicist who, by experiments between 1885 and 1889, was the first to prove that electrical waves would radiate from any system from which electrical oscillation was produced.

Hertz thus gave life to a theory advanced by James C. Maxwell (1831-1879), a famous British physicist, who developed to a remarkable degree ideas evolved by Lord Kelvin. The latter, in 1853, had proved that discharge from a condenser is oscillatory, a theory evolved in 1842 by Joseph Henry, a professor of Princeton University.

If the father of Marconi had had his way, the problem of applying these laboratory cogitations and discoveries to commercial purposes would have been left to some one else, and in Marconi the world would have had instead a probably mediocre and unsung musician.

The father insisted that his son study music. Apparatus in the home attic which the youth had designed and made himself aroused the parental ire and he frequently threatened to pitch it all out the window, especially when the son proved anything but a success as a music student.

But like many another budding genius, young Marconi had a source of inspiration and practical help in his mother. Born Annie Jameson, of an Irish family, she had gone to Italy against the wishes of her parents to marry Guiseppe Marconi, a banker. She granted her son's wish to study physics and enrolled him with Prof. Vincenzo Rosa. She also helped him set up a workroom in the family villa in Pontecchio.

In the spring of 1895 the Marconi wireless system was born. The youthful inventor—he was only 21—had found that two rods placed upright in the earth at a determined distance from each other would radiate electric impulses in accord with the laws governing the Hertzian waves.

He had established his transmitter near the window of the barn. The receiver was several hundred feet away and out of sight.

Giuseppe Vornelli, the carpenter assistant, was at the receiving end armed with a rifle. If he saw a magnetic arm vibrate he was to fire the gun.

Marconi pressed the telegraph key thrice, sending three dots, the letter "S" of the Morse code. A second later he heard the shot and knew that wireless telegraphy had been started on its way to practicability.

Italy was so skeptical of the usefulness of the discovery that Signora Marconi took their son to England. There, with the aid of her relatives, he was granted the first patent for a practical system of wireless telegraphy, this being in 1896 when he was 22 years old.

Marconi's first wireless communication in England was between Penarth and Weston. Three years later he spanned the channel, establishing contact between England and France. Thereafter the British and Italian admiralties and the principal shipping companies adopted his system.

In 1901 messages were sent between Cornwall and St. Catherine's Isle of Wight, a distance of 183 miles. A few months later Marconi bridged the Atlantic, receiving signals transmitted 2,100 miles from Poldhu, Cornwall, to St. Johns, Newfoundland. That transmission, like the first one from the barn to the carpenter, consisted of the three dots of the letter "S."

Though the world had doubted at the start, it became vocal with praise when this feat was accomplished. Honors were showered upon him by scientific bodies and governments and newspaper columns on both sides of the Atlantic lauded the inventor.

Life saving and salvage of millions of tons of cargoes became of of frequent occurrence as distressed vessels summoned aid from sister craft. The first great example of this came on January 23, 1909, when the steamer Republic was sunk in a collision with the Italian steamer Florida off Nantucket in a fog. Only six lives were lost and several hundred others were saved because Jack Binns, the wireless operator, stuck to his key, sending out "PDQ" and giving the position of the stricken vessel.

It was soon after this event that "SOS" was substituted for the earlier call because it was easier to send its three dots, three dashes and three dots than to transmit the more complicated "PDQ" letters of the international code.

In April, 1916, the Titanic sank. More than a thousand survivors were landed in New York. They learned that Marconi was in the city, marched in a body to his hotel, cheered him and cried:

"We owe our lives to you."

Marconi was born in Bologna, Italy, April 25, 1874. He spent his youth in Bologna, Leghorn and Pisa, studying in the schools of those cities and also in the University of Bologna.

He married first Beatrice O'Brien, sister of Lord Inchiquin, at St. George's Church, London, in 1905. They had a son and two daughters. His wife obtained a divorce in 1924, taking advantage of the laws of the city of Fiume before it was annexed to Italy, where divorce is not permitted.

She had been a lady-in-waiting to the queen, but after her re-marriage to Marquis Liborio Marignol resigned her court post. The shadow on this union was removed later when Marconi obtained an annulment of the first marriage from the Vatican.

This permitted him to re-marry, and he took for his second wife in 1926 the Countess Cristina Bezzi-Scale.

The inventor lost his right eye as a result of an automobile accident in September, 1912.

In the World War he won international honors as a diplomat, and was one of the signers of the Italian peace treaties with Austria and Bulgaria. After the war he sold his home in Rome, purchased a yacht, re-named it "Electra" and spent much of his later years aboard the vessel, continuing his experiments.

He capped these in 1923 by perfecting long distance "beam wireless" by which radio signals are confined to one direction much in the manner that light is shot from a searchlight.

By it fog-bound ships may be kept off rocky shores and lonely aviators guided across trackless seas. It has also made short wave, long distance transmission more certain for both telegraph and telephone.

In March, 1930, Marconi was again in the public eye by transmission from his yacht in the port of Genoa, Italy, of an electric impulse which closed a circuit and lighted lamps in Sydney, Australia, to open an exposition there. At the same time he and others talked from the yacht's cabin with officials of Australia.

Marconi's life in the '30s was devoted largely to developing science under fascism. As president of the national council of research, to which post he was named by Mussolini in 1928, he guided that body into control of virtually all scientific investigation in Italy. When League of Nations' sanctions were applied to Italy because of the Ethiopian war of 1935-36, the council was in the first line trenches of the economic battle. In 1930 Il Duce also made him president of the Royal Academy of Italy.

In the summer of 1935, when the Ethiopian war impended, wide interest was aroused by rumors that Marconi had worked out an invention of great military value. He explained his apparatus to King Victor Emmanuel and demonstrated it to Mussolini and high army officers at Fort Braschi, near Rome.

The nature of this device was not revealed. Some of Marconi's friends believed it was an application of microwave communication to army needs.

He personally supervised installation of the powerful Vatican radio station and it was inaugurated February 12, 1931, with the first radio address ever made by a Pope, and Marconi making the introductory address. At the same time he became a member of the pontifical scientific academy.

In July, 1930, the inventor became the father of a daughter. She was baptized Elena by Cardinal Eugenio Pacelli, papal secretary of state. Queen Elena of Italy was the godmother.

In December, 1934, he fell seriously ill from fatigue and was in a London nursing home until late in January, 1935.

The next September he went to Brazil to inaugurate a broadcasting station. He was made an honorary citizen of Rio de Janeiro and received a degree from the university of the Brazilian capital.

He was in Brazil when the Ethiopian war started early in October and he sailed for home, bent on going to Africa to help in the radio communications of the army, but his shaky health prevented.

2 Facing Pardon In Mail Robberies Long Kept Hope

Cleveland, July 19 (AP).—Fulfillment of their "faith in the Federal Government" was foreseen tonight by Anthony "Tony" Labrizetta, 34, and George Sargent, 39, both of Akron, who were twice convicted in the $135,000 mail truck robbery at Warren more than two years ago and sentenced to 25 years in prison.

After 27 months in jail they awaited Presidential action on Attorney General Cummings' recommendation that they be given Executive pardons—and pondered how long the process might take.

"I feel pretty good about it," Sargent grinned. "I've had a lot of faith in the Federal Government and thought a Federal investigation would show we weren't connected with the robbery."

The slightly built Labrizetta, who has been in the jail's hospital ward during the entire 27 months, echoed his words."

Recommendation for their release was made last Saturday at Washington after U. S. District Attorney Emerich B. Freed, Cleveland, revealed to Cummings that Alvin Karpis and Harry Campbell, now serving life sentences at Alcatraz Prison, told postal inspectors Labrizetta and Sargent were innocent.

Britain Protests Ship Capture.

London, July 19 (AP).—Capture of two British freighters by Spanish insurgent warships blockading Bay of Biscay ports drew protests today from the British foreign office.

Foreign Secretary Anthony Eden told the House of Commons that Generalissimo Franco had been notified he would be held responsible for any damages to the merchantman Molton, captured last Wednesday by the cruiser Almirante Cervera.

The admiralty admitted the ship was inside Spanish territorial waters trying to reach Santander.

Two British warships were known to have steamed from their temporary base at St. Jean de Luz, France, shortly after the capture Saturday of the Candleston Castle, also in Spanish territorial waters near Santander, but the admiralty declined to admit the two events were connected.

The Candleston Castle, formerly the Seven Seas Spray, was last reported en route to Ferrol under guard of insurgent warships. Its captain wirelessed his owners saying the crew of 32 was safe, but evidently was unable to tell his whereabouts.

Hitler Wins Same Rights as Il Duce In Rebel Treaty

Berlin, July 19 (AP).—Reichsfuehrer Hitler won trade equality with Premier Mussolini today in insurgent Spain through a treaty signed with Spanish Generalissimo Francisco Franco.

Through a most-favored-nation clause effective August 1, 1937, every trade advantage Franco accords Italy, in recompense for assistance given the insurgents or otherwise, will be shared by Germany.

Nazi officials expressed gratification over the new pact. Reports had circulated in some quarters that Mussolini had obtained more generous concessions than Germany.

Piccard Plans New Stratosphere Test

Rochester, Minn., July 19 (AP).—Dr. Jean Piccard gave thought tonight to improvements on his multi-balloon aircraft, with a flight into the stratosphere considered a possibility.

Encouraged by his six-hour experimental ascension Sunday, Dr. Piccard said he would plan construction of a huge craft, lifted by 2,000 balloons, as soon as he found a sponsor for a stratosphere flight.

The take-off, he asserted, would come about a year after financial backing was assured. The Swiss scientist sought to avoid the hazard of fire, which burned through the duraluminum open gondola and destroyed his instruments after he landed in a deep gully near Lansing, Iowa, 110 miles from here.

Serbs Clubbed In Yugoslavia Religious Row

By the Associated Press.

Belgrade, Yugoslavia, July 19.—Police struck down two Serbian religious leaders today in a near riot during an attempted parade of members of the Serbian Orthodox church.

A censorship was imposed on outgoing news for three hours, police were held in readiness and a Parliament session was disrupted by a deputy shouting: "The police are attacking Serbian priests."

Police yesterday had banned a parade in which several hundred clergymen and laymen were to participate. They held it would be a demonstration against ratifying the Yugoslav concordat with the Vatican, but the churchmen asserted it was merely a sign of their hope for recovery of the sick patrlarch of the Serbian Orthodox church.

That church has announced it will punish any of its members in Parliament who votes for the concordat, signed in 1935, but never ratified. The church says it gives "unequally high power to the Catholic church in the field of education and politics."

Foresters in Md. Gather Support

Baltimore, July 19 (AP).—State Forester F. W. Besley issued a "call to arms" today to persons and organizations interested in protecting trees along the highways of the State.

Besley made his call in a statement in which he reviewed the work done by the State forestry department in preserving trees and discussed its controversy with the State roads commission.

Attorney General Herbert R. O'Conor recently ruled that the roads commission had "exclusive jurisdiction" over trees within the right of way of State highways and did not have to get permission for their removal.

put in danger a life that some day may be very precious.

"I must bear in mind furthermore that there are two divisions of Spaniards in this war . . . and if, some time, a king becomes the head of state he must come in the role of peacemaker and not be listed in the ranks of the conquerors."

The royalists, a considerable strength in the insurgent ranks, were jubilant. They said the declaration would unify feeling among important insurgent leaders that popular Don Juan is the man to reunite Spain and eliminate the strife that has marked Spanish republicanism since Alfonso XIII left the country.

They regard the interview as Franco's most definite pledge for a monarchy possible under existing conditions.

Franco also spoke glowingly of many others of Spain's aristocracy who have supported the insurgent cause.

Besides going far beyond any previous expression in favor of monarchy, Franco implied again that he would not consider the withdrawal of foreign fighters from his armies.

He added that the insurgent regime's relations with the Vatican, "while not exactly official, are cordial, as befits a nation as deeply Catholic as ours."

The generalissimo said that under his regime there will be "absolute suppression" of the "class struggle" provoked by republican officials. Strikes and lockouts will be eliminated and a labor arbitration tribunal will be maintained.

"We will dignify work and establish respect for production," he said.

The insurgents, their leader said, declined to accept as volunteers 6,000 Irish and many thousand Italians at the beginning of the war. But, he went on, when the government brought 30,000 international volunteers to the Madrid front and used Soviet generals, "there was no reason whatsoever we should not accept volunteers."

Virginia Slayer To Get Sanity Test

Richmond, Va., July 19 (AP).—Gov. Peery said today that Silvia E. Huffman, sentenced to die July 30 for the murder of W. H. Riddle, Augusta County filling station operator, would be examined between now and the execution date by the State board of mental hygiene.

The Governor received a petition Friday from a group of Huffman's neighbors requesting the death sentence be commuted to commitment in an asylum. The petition stated Huffman was "mentally and morally unsound."

Fight to Finish On Robinson's Successor Near

Senate Vacancy May Not Be Filled Till Election in September.

By the Associated Press.

Little Rock, Ark., July 19.—Party leaders squared off today for a finish fight over selection of a Democratic candidate to succeed the late Senator Joseph T. Robinson.

The current vacancy has created two issues:

Whether the Governor shall make an immediate temporary appointment of a Senator to serve until a special general election can be held, or leave the seat vacant pending the election, tentatively set for September 14.

Whether the Democratic nominee who will enter the special election shall be nominated by the State Democratic committee, or be selected in a special party primary.

Showdown Nears.

The question of a temporary appointment holds special significance in the national political situation, in view of the close division in the Senate both in the matter of selecting a new majority leader, and in disposition of the President's court reorganization bill. Both leadership and court controversies may reach the showdown stage this week.

In Arkansas, the breach between party men widened hourly over the issue of a State committee nomination or a wide open primary in advance of the September election.

The committee will settle the controversy at a special session here Friday. Both friends and opponents of the present State administration conceded a commanding position to 42-year-old Gov. Carl E. Bailey, friendly to Roosevelt and generally expected to make the Senate race.

Business and professional leaders advocating a primary opened headquarters in a downtown hotel. They announced they were sponsoring no candidate, but believed the question should be decided "by the people."

Bailey Is Silent.

Bailey, whose only public statement since Robinson's death was that Postmaster General Farley had conferred with him relative to a temporary appointment, continued to maintain silence on the nomination vs. primary battle.

Former Gov. Tom J. Terral and Chancellor A. L. Hutchins threw themselves into the fight for a primary. Terral unsuccessfully opposed Bailey in the 1936 primary. Hutchins actively supported Bailey then.

Mentioned for the temporary appointment, if one is made, were Brooks Hays, Democratic national committeeman; Lamar Williamson, Monticello attorney, and State Senator Richard R. Thompson, Eureka Springs.

Mrs. M. E. Kemper Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Marion Elizabeth Kemper, 34, who died Sunday at her home, 5615 Grove street, after a two months' illness, will be held today at 10 a. m. at the Church of the Blessed Sacrament, Chevy Chase Circle. Interment will be in Mount Olivet Cemetery.

The wife of Edward C. Kemper, executive secretary of the American Institute of Architects, Mrs. Kemper was a native of Washington and lived here most of her life.

Besides her husband, Mrs. Kemper is survived by her mother, Mrs. Beatrice von Buban, widow of the late Curt Walker von Buban, Washington civil engineer, and three sisters, the Misses Emily, Clothilde and Elsie von Buban, all of Washington.

Flier Dismantles Ship After Landing in Park

Baltimore, July 19 (AP).—C. B. Fenwick, jr., who landed his plane in Crowded Patterson Park after the motor went dead, dismantled the craft today and removed it to his home where he will have room to fly it.

Fenwick was half a mile up over the City Hall yesterday when his engine stalled. A policeman who saw him gliding to the field cleared crowds from a spot large enough for a landing.

In 1919 an Army pilot, landing in the park as part of a recruiting drive, plunged into a crowd and killed three children.

House Refuses District Power Of Borrowing

Ignores Hazen's Plea of Bankruptcy in Denying Treasury Loans.

crat), of Indiana, took the floor to plead for police and firemen who may miss their pay days.

The tide of opposition to the resolution began when Representative Thompson (Democrat), of Illinois, demanded a record on the resolution called up by Palmisano and thereby precipitated 40 minutes' debate.

"Why should the Federal Treasuary advance money to the District any more than it should lend money to Chicago or Philadelphia?" he asked.

Bates interrupted with an observation every city in the country save Washington may borrow money in anticipation of tax returns. "And that's all the District wants to do," he added.

Thompson then launched into a general criticism of the people of the District "for not helping themselves" and the Commissioners for being critical of Congress.

Cites "Insubordination."

"I think it's insubordination for the Commissioners to endemn, criticize and worry about the way Congress may handle District legislation," he said.

Representative McFarlane (Democrat), of Texas, interrupted with the remark that what the Commissioners needed is "enough spine to raise the tax rate on real and personal property."

After a quorum call had been made on motion of Representative Mapes (Republican), of Michigan, Representative Bigelow (Democrat), of Ohio, a member of the District Committee, took the floor to propound his single tax theories.

He urged the realty tax rate be raised at once to $2.20 to offset the deficit.

"What is the District going to do for money in the meantime?" asked Shafer.

The most amazing example of the lack of knowledge about District affairs in the House came, however, when Representative Thurston (Republican), of Iowa, took the floor and suggested that the committee produce, in lieu of the borrowing resolution, a series of tax bills.

"I'm sure that the House would pass them under unanimous consent," he said.

He then suggested taxes on income, on inheritance, on autos and on gasoline.

Not a member arose to remind him the House had passed a local tax bill about a month ago.

Shafer, a few minutes later, however, told the House "Congress can't lose" by passing the resolution as the Commissioners would "go to jail" if they didn't provide funds to repay the Federal loans.

"A good many men are talking on this bill who don't pay attention to District affairs," he said, "and they don't know what they're talking about."

Dies Hits "Lobbyists."

Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, author of the chain store tax passed by the House but discarded by the Senate District Committee, complained against the "lobbyists" who persuaded the Senate committee to eliminate it.

"Until the people of the District are willing to pay taxes in accordance with their ability to pay, like citizens of the States," he said, "I'm not going to give them any borrowing or other power."

Dies did not recall he had taken the lead in the House revolt which forced the District Committee to drop the income tax after it had been reported.

Palmisano, in making two pleas for passage of the resolution, stated Chairman Collins, of the House sub-committee on appropriations, favored the legislation.

Hazen's letter to Senator King and Palmisano was the second distress signal from the District Building within a week.

Stating the situation was so serious that another appeal was merited, Hazen said:

"Funds will be available for the payment of employes of the District government and for contractual obligations and other expenses until the early part of August.

"With the depletion of funds at that time, these employes will be stranded without salary payments and contractual and other obligations cannot be met."

The Commissioner suggested the borrowing resolution be passed at once with an amendment fixing the realty rate at the $1.70 decreed by the House and extending the fall tax payments until October 31.

He emphasized it was important that the omnibus tax bill not be dropped even should the borrowing authoirty be granted by Congress. In such an event, he pointed out, the deficit would be doubled in the fiscal year 1939 and the burden of raising revenue to repay the Federal Government would fall solely on the city's property towners.

As it takes the assessor's office at least 45 days to prepare tax vouchers and ledgers, the letter stated, the extension in tax payments was necessary because of the tardiness of the tax bill.

The tax assessor is now unable to act, in view of the conflicting House and Senate proposals, "unless the Commissioners immediately fix an inordinate tax rate of $2.10, which they are strenuously opposed to doing and which they do not feel in all justice and decency Congress would expect them to do."

tle thought of the gay days of his administration.

How was he received by the President?

"As cordially as anyone could expect to be received," he replied.

How did he explain being so early for the appointment?

"I'm under new management," he smiled, with a glance at the new Mrs. Walker.

Smiles With Him.

Beside him as he talked with the newspapermen who surrounded him, Mrs. Walker kept her eyes intently upon him. Hardly ever did she glance away from his face. If he smiled, her dimples flashed. She took no further part in the interview.

She was clad in a black and white print dress with white metal buckle at the waist, and a white collar, and carried a pocketbook matching the dress. White gloves reached half way to her elbows. A bit of her black, waved hair was disclosed under an upturned navy straw hat edged with white.

Walker, trimly groomed, in gray suit of fine weave, with dark tie, black shoes and jaunty panama, finally was asked if he had heard of Gov. Herbert Lehman's letter to Senator Wagner, New York, opposing the court bill.

"Gov. Lehman against the court bill?" he asked in apparent amazement. Then, after puzzling over the news for several moments, he turned and took Mrs. Walker by the arm.

"Let's get out of this town," he said. "You never can tell what the weather's going to be."

'Awful Examples' In Art Placed on Exhibit at Munich

Munich, July 19 (AP).—The Nazi regime tonight placed on show 300 "awful examples" of painting and a dozen pieces of sculpture designed to cure the German people of any taste for "degenerate" pre-Hitler art.

It was Propaganda Minister Paul Joseph Goebbels' "chamber of horrors," part of the Nazi campaign to eradicate all vestiges of what Chancellor Hitler himself called the old "degenerated" era influenced by Jewish critics and art dealers.

One of the artists represented was George Grosz, famed for his bitter, satirical pictures, who left Germany shortly before Hitler came to power to seek a home in the United States. Grosz, a veteran of the World War, had been in trouble for vigorous antimilitarist pictures before he emigrated. Another was Prof. Gieb, whose statue representing Christ in a gas mask was on display.

Wrestler's Wife Charges Cruelty, Sues for Divorce

An amateur wrestler who practised his holds upon his wife, to her "great pain and suffering," was named defendant in a suit for limited divorce yesterday when Mrs. Kathleen Bell, 907 Fifteenth street northwest, alleged her husband, Harry Thomas Bell, a Government employe, had been entirely too realistic in his workouts.

Mrs. Bell alleged "the defendant is an amateur wrestler and has continually physically abused the plaintiff by twisting her arms, legs and body and otherwise subjecting plaintiff to various holds . . . One day, she complained, he twisted her arm, threw her on a couch and pressed his knee in her chest.

Through Attorney Francis W. Taylor the wife said the couple was married June 6, 1936. She left him last Saturday, the suit disclosed.

Boat Victim's Body Is Hunted in Vain

Harbor police last night continued a so far futile search for the body of Woodrow G. Cronk, 24, of 4603 Illinois avenue northwest, who drowned in the Potomac yesterday.

Cronk, the only male member of a gay boating party who could not swim, disappeared after a motor launch exploded near the Highway Bridge Sunday. He drowned because he relinquished his life preserver to the father of a young girl that the latter might save his daughter.

Cronk was the last member of the party of nine to leave the boat after it exploded and caught fire.

The other members of the party who were saved were Robert L. Hollowell, 33; his brother, W. Dennis Hollowell, 31; his daughter, Mary Ellen, 4; his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Hollowell, 59, and 56, and his sister-in-law, Miss Charlsie Heritage, 20, all of 4603 Illinois avenue northwest, Miss Edna Heritage, 15, Winston-Salem, N. A Loss To Journalism.

The passing of Oliver Owen Kuhn will be mourned not only by his many friends and by his associates on the Washington Star, but by the entire newspaper fraternity as well.

Throughout his busy career Mr. Kuhn demonstrated a fine journalistic sense. His "nose for news," particularly in his early years as a correspondent, was famous. But perhaps his greatest contribution may be found in the national radio forum which he originated and had conducted for the past eight years. This early gesture of co-operation between newspapers and the radio in the business of keeping the public informed has had its good effect in guiding the development of cordial relations between these two important institutions.

Away from his desk, Mr. Kuhn demonstrated a similar capacity for constructive effort. Montgomery County, where he made his home, has profited appreciably by his active participation in its affairs over a number of years. The Civic Federation, through which citizens of the county have made themselves articulate, was formed under his supervision, while the Bethesda Fire Department and the Alta Vista Community League also claim him as sponsor.

In sum, Mr. Kuhn was a man of vision and ability ever eager to apply these qualities toward a fulfillment of his responsibilities as a citizen. His outlook and achievements are a credit to the newspaper profession in which he achieved so large a measure of success.

Northwest Sesquicentennial.

Perhaps the greatest single accomplishment of the interim government which, sitting in New York, attempted to direct the course of the American colonies immediately following their successful revolution against England was the passage of the Northwest Ordinance of 1787. By it, the vast area northwest of the Ohio River was brought under regulation. This stimulated another westward-sweeping flow of humanity which, leaving this time a wake of wagon ruts rather than sea foam, laid the foundations for today's tremendous development of North America.

The immediate cause for the adoption of the ordinance was the demand of the victorious soldiers of the Revolution who scorned the virtually worthless currency they were offered for back pay. Instead, they held out for land grants in the West. An influence in their favor was the Quebec act by which the British Parliament ten years earlier had ordered the region west of the Alleghanies assigned to the Province of Quebec, thus extending its boundaries south to the Ohio. Moreover, besides this sentimental desire to reclaim the area for America, there were the shrewd calculations of a Massachusetts group which purchased three million acres on the Muskingum River for commercial exploitation.

In any event, by the spring of 1788 an advance party of 47 men had begun to build the town of Marietta, now a part of Ohio, where this year and next the sesquicentennial of the opening of the West will be commemorated. They had supporting them the knowledge that Congress would appoint a governor, secretary and three judges to rule the domain until it should achieve a population of 5,000 free men of full age. At this point, an assembly consisting of a governor, council and elected house of representatives was assured them. Whenever any section reported a population of 60,000, it was to be admitted as a State on an equal footing with the original 13, but with the restriction that not less than three nor more than five such new States might be formed in the region. Thus was established the formula by which all the States and Territories were carved out of the West.

This was not the plan Jefferson had visualized. In 1784, when the question of opening the region had first been proposed, he drew up a scheme which provided for 14 or more new States situated both north and south of the Ohio. He even designated the names for them. There was to have been a "Washington" and a "Saratoga," while the forest region west and south of Lake Superior was to have been known as "Sylvania" and the plains country "Metropotamia" (Mother of Rivers). Complete legal codes were also laid down for the new area until its sections should have achieved statehood. But the plan was finally discarded, primarily because of its over-elaborateness. The pioneers who were even then pushing into Kentucky and Tennessee and Ohio needed no such detailed instructions on how to carve their destinies. Like their fathers, they wanted only self-government and the less of that the better. The taste still persists in some of their sons today.

An Echo From Albany.

Gov. Lehman's letter to Senator Wagner constitutes a most effective reply to President Roosevelt's letter of last week to Senator Barkley. The President boldly proclaimed that "the overwhelming majority" of the people and of Congress "were in accord" with his objectives in proposing enlargement of the Supreme Court. But even Mr. Roosevelt's close friend and adviser who succeeded him as Governor of New York has added his voice to the chorus of protest against the Administration's judiciary bill.

Dramatic though it is, there is nothing strange in Gov. Lehman's action. He has reflected the traditional attitude of New York. There is ample evidence in the speeches of former Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt to indicate that he would have taken the same course if any President had attempted to pack the Supreme Court while he was chief executive at Albany. It may be fairly said, therefore, that the Governor's letter respresents the President's viewpoint when he was still in a position to see the woods instead of the trees immediately around him.

The Governor's letter is the more impressive, however, because he wrote to his Senator as a mere citizen of New York. Since the judiciary bill would affect only the Federal courts, Gov. Lehman was under no obligation to make his attitude known. But as a citizen of the United States who has a vital interest in preserving the independence of our highest courts he felt impelled to resist enactment of a bill that would "create a greatly dangerous precedent."

In one other respect Gov. Lehman's letter is significant. He opposes the court bill because he believes that "the orderly and deliberate processes of government should not be sacrificed merely to meet an immediate situation." That, of course, is the basis on which virtually all well-informed opponents of the bill have taken their stand. They refuse to let expediency take the place of fundamental principles of democracy.

Yet advocates of the new-blood-in-the-courts theory utterly ignore this vital weakness in their proposal. Several months ago Gov. Lehman wrote to the President, explaining his opposition to the bill. Many other advisers have done likewise. Yet the President blithely maintains that the objective of his bill is desirable and that the means of attaining it is of little consequence. That casual attitude toward elementary principles of democracy inevitably arouse deep-seated opposition within the ranks of his own party.

Gov. Lehman's letter is another striking indication of the extent to which this issue is dividing the Administration's most ardent supporters. Nor can it be said that the split is separating the conservatives and liberals into opposite camps. Numerous liberals who are whole-heartedly in sympathy with the chief aims of the New Deal, as is Gov. Lehman, are bitterly opposed to breaking down the tradition of judicial independence in a scramble to achieve those objectives over night. It is their influence which will defeat the bill. For every fresh effort of the Administration to force the measure through brings a further stiffening in their determination not to let it pass.

Minorities In Upper Silesia.

Until Thursday of last week, the German minority in Polish Upper Silesia and the Polish minority in German Upper Silesia did enjoy at least a modicum of protection.

The Polish-German convention of 1922, an indirect offshoot of the Versailles Treaty and a direct consequence of the partitioning of Upper Silesia, never worked with complete success. As a matter of fact, many of its provisions concerning the protection of minorities were honored only in the breach. During this period, and more notably during the past few years, the Germanization of German Upper Silesia and the Polonization of Polish Upper Silesia have gone on apace.

Now, with the expiration of the 1922 convention, existing minority rights may disappear altogether on both sides of the border. Despite German pleas that the minority provisions be continued through a treaty arrangement, Poland has refused to make any commitments.

Anxious to remain on friendly terms with its eastern neighbor, Germany is not likely to take strong measures to compel the Warsaw government to modify this stand. There has been some talk of retaliatory measures to be directed against the Poles in German Upper Silesia unless the German element across the border is let alone. But, under existing circumstances, no such action is likely.

This policy is reflected in the temperate comments of the regimented German press which, in general, is soft-pedaling the plight of the German element in Upper Silesia. Some newspapers point out, however, that while the minority regulations of 1922 have lapsed, Poland is, nevertheless, under moral obligation to live up to the pledges concerning minorities which it made at the very beginning of its revived national existence.

That is true. But such moral obligations are likely to weigh as lightly with the Warsaw authorities as they have with so many other nations of Europe that have minorities within their borders. Everywhere minority rights have been under attack. With the war psychosis in the Old World still flourishing, this distressing situation is likely to grow worse rather than better.

The end of the 1922 convention is soon to be followed by legislation looking toward the partitioning of the big estates in Polish Upper Silesia. A majority of these are now owned by Germans. Other measures are aimed at elimination of German as a language enjoying parity with Polish in the law courts and local administration.

It is not surprising, then, that a great exodus of Polish and German minorities is taking place. For this situation Germany holds Poland responsible. Yet Germany's own hands are anything but clean. Hardly a moment elapsed after the expiration of the 1922 convention before the Nuremberg code of racial laws was applied to German Upper Silesia, thus setting in motion an additional exodus of "non-Aryans." Bad as the situation is for Jews in Poland, many of the Jews of German Upper Silesia apparently prefer conditions across the line to those now faced at home.

Under the circumstances, German protests at the ill-treatment of fellow Teutons in Poland is a case of the pot calling the kettle black. But there is scant comfort in this for the innocent folk on both sides of the line who are now faced by the necessity of pulling up stakes or remaining to suffer persecution.

Good Advice On Labor Strife.

The advice given Catholic employers and workingmen by Dr. John R. Fitzpatrick during the memorial services here for the late James Cardinal Gibbons may well be extended to all industrial leaders and union chiefs. The need for strong leadership "toward an intelligent solution of the current strife between labor and capital" has been especially apparent in recent months. It is unquestionably one of the foremost problems confronting the United States as well as other countries.

As dean of the law school of Columbus University, Dr. Fitzpatrick has the real advantage of speaking from an impartial viewpoint. His primary concern is not to advance unionism nor to increase the profits of employers. Rather his chief interest lies in the general public welfare and the preservation of democracy. Consequently, his appeal to employers to bargain co-operatively with their employes, and to labor unions to abandon irresponsible tactics, is a valuable contribution to the current demand for common sense in the adjustment of labor disputes.

Particularly impressive was Dr. Fitzpatrick's warning against class hatred. "This great Nation of ours," he said, "has been plunged into a bitter civil war, with class lined up against class, with ignorance and intolerance gripping the souls of men passionate with greed and lust for power. To date the only result of this class warfare has been a tragic waste of the country's resources." If class hatred is cultivated by those who should be seeking industrial co-operation, the losses already incurred are likely to be infinitesimal in comparison with the future cost of industrial strife.

The dean's denunciation of employers who are attempting to wreck the Wagner Act was also in line with widespread public opinion. It should be remembered, however, that in the recent steel strike the unions resorted to coercion instead of the Wagner Act. No doubt that partly accounts for Dr. Fitzpatrick's warning that Government regulation "is in store" for labor unions "unless immediate steps are taken to check irresponsible labor leaders and their lieutenants."

Since Dr. Fitzpatrick is a strong believer in the principles behind the national labor relations law, and since that measure proved entirely ineffective in the last major strike, he might well have considered the desirability of amending it. Nothing could be lost by requiring labor organizations to meet the standards of fair conduct which Dr. Fitzpatrick urges them to assume voluntarily. And, if the law thus impartially imposed obligations upon both employers and employes, the recalcitrant minority of employers would be deprived of the last vestige of excuse for refusing to bargain with organized labor.

Scales Of Justice.

Sometimes it is a monkey wrench that gets into the machinery and sometimes it is a fish, but they are equally effective in messing things up.

When the air-cooling system of the Department of Justice Building got out of kilter the other day neither Attorney General Cummings' thinkers nor Chief Hoover's sleuths could reason the thing out nor ferret out the culprit. It took a modest chap in overalls to turn the trick. He found a fish in the machinery; a fish that got away from the Tidal Basin to make history. It is always the fish that gets away which makes history.

Not all the truly great receive recognition, however. The fame of the fish that swallowed Jonah goes thundering down the ages, while one little gudgeon that made an army of Government employes sweat rates less than a one-line head in a metropolitan daily.

Such discrimination appears particularly unjust when we realize that the gudgeon's intentions may have been much more elevating and kindly than those of the whale. It's one thought may have been to give Justice some new scales.

During his first term of office the President vetoed 221 bills passed by Congress. And yet Congress made no suggestions about packing the White House

Nonunionist Complaint.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not fair for unions to chase every Government painting job in Washington. Nonunion painters are human. Many served overseas in the World War, have families to care for, but did not pay $150 to join the painters' union.

There are only 2,225,000 A. F. of L. members in the United States and 43,000,000 men and women voted last election, so they alone did not elect the President. Why can't they be half-way human and let a nonunion man make a living? Often union men drop boards, bolts and bricks down on nonunion men to scare them. They will work on an open shop job, but won't let a nonunion man work on a closed shop job.

The treatment of nonunion mechanics at Greenbelt, a Government project, too, was a crime.

Interior's Clippings.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is to be hoped that some of the "bright young men" looking to future commentaries of this period of political history have kept the clippings emanating from the Interior Department regarding the uprightness of everything done within that department, usually with emphasis on the, well, not so upright others of this great United States.

The latest, regarding the separation of Mr. Gholston from the PWA because of a "mistaken sense of loyalty" is just too, too sweet. To think that all this time he could have been doing these things and they, innocents, know nothing about it! Somewhere back in our school days, or perhaps it was Sunday school days, we learned something about "He that protesteth too much, etc.," and one wonders if perhaps, like the moving-picture stars, the publicity department believe it themselves and therefore have lost that awareness of whom enough is enough.

May I add that we miss Mr. Pegler and hope that he is just vacationing. (He is.—Editor.)

Norman Thomas, Socialist.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In The Post, issue of July 13, appeared a letter signed "De Leonite" complaining that I was careless in the handling of facts when I stated that "Norman Thomas, Socialist, is for the C. I. O. as the route the Socialist Labor Party must take." I wish to humbly apologize to the Socialist Labor Party for making it appear that Norman Thomas was spokesman for their organization.

I should have stated, "Norman Thomas, Socialist, is for the C. I. O. as the route a labor party must take." We both agree that Franklin D. Roosevelt, Norman Thomas and the Communists support the C. I. O. and that was the point I desired to bring out.

Word To McCarthy.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: If he is not careful, Tom McCarthy is going to show up some of the pet theories of the New Deal. They have maintained that "conditions" are responsible for unemployment and lack of opportunity. Some people cling to the old-fashioned idea that it is up to the individual to make his own opportunities and then make good.

Sixteen years ago I was in Kansas under much the same conditions, except I had no job of any kind. My experiences were much the same as his.

GARRET E. VAN METER.

On "Segregation."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your issue of July 18 Mr. E. B. Henderson suggests that sports may bring about better race relations. He uses the term "segregation" in reference to colored people in and about Washington City. This term has been continually used without considering that "gravitation" is at the bottom of most supposed segregation.

Segregation did not produce Harlem, in New York. Nor did segregation make Eutaw place, Baltimore, what it is. People of like tastes invariably seek each other. Religion, race instincts, grades of culture—each and all have their pull. Jerusalem today has its Arab quarter, its Jewish quarter and its Christian quarter—but from gravitation, not segregation. When any colored people find more at-homeness with other than their own race they will gravitate to where they belong; but that must be because a corresponding demand to pull from another race responds to this demand.

To force the assimilation, or whatever the combination may be called, means race antagonism such as we are having today in many nations of the earth. If people would cease talking about "segregation" and learn to adjust themselves to the spirit of the country in which they live we should have less talk about "persecution" and segregation and racial differences.

Certainly the sporting world will not cure the supposed evil of racial antagonism. There is but one cure, and it has a dual activity: Religion plus education should bring about whatever result is desirable. I have no doubt they will. But force—never.

Reply To "Dido."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: "Dido," whose writing indicates that by her hero worship she is prepared to follow the example of the Queen of Carthage of the same name and throw herself on the funeral pyre of her hero, doesn't like the idea of me telling the countryside that there are plenty of folks in this neck of the woods that don't like the idea of making an exclusive highway out of the 80-foot wide Washington-Baltimore boulevard for the President on his trips Saturday afternoons down to his private yacht.

"Dido" has a kind of limited viewpoint when she observes that I alone was "inconvenienced!" At least 1,000 more motorists became part of the traffic jam described, an uncalled for occurrence at the peak of Saturday afternoon travel with as wide a road as described.

I had my country, my family, my home, my car, and the other things "Dido" described, long before Mr. Roosevelt became a national figure, and I expect to have them long after he departs from the Washington picture. There are thousands of folks in this country that lost all those things when "Dido's" hero closed all the national banks in the United States—information which no doubt will be a terrible surprise to the "until death do us part" worshiper!

Written, surprisingly as it may seem, by a lad that never voted anything but a Democratic ticket, but who won't do it again until the party returns to the fundamental principles of American government.

CHARLES COTTON.

Washington, July 17.

"Unnecessary" Court Bill.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: During the last presidential campaign I wrote a letter to The Post defending Mr. Roosevelt and criticizing an editorial which appeared in your paper. At that time I stated that if I thought he planned to tamper with the Supreme Court I would vote against him. To me, his court bill is surprising and unnecessary.

It is wrong for three reasons: It does not guarantee the attainment of his objectives; it interferes with the freedom of thought and independence of the court, and it complicates rather than simplifies the judicial structure and makes more uncertain the speedy rendition of just decisions. One particular justice can still hold the balance of power whether there are 11 or 15 on the bench.

Your editorial on the President's letter in The Post of July 17 is both fair and temperate. The President is mistaken in saying that the people approved of judicial reform. They knew nothing of it. The subject was carefully avoided until after the election. I have heartily approved of Mr. Roosevelt's objectives and have been enthusiastically in favor of most of his recommendations. However, as one who likes to think of herself as a liberal, I want to say that the President is now departing from true liberalism and is paving the way for serious trouble. It seems to me that the real test of liberalism is to be able to accept defeat in a tolerant spirit when the whole sequence of events is against you. In this respect, Mr. Roosevelt sadly missed fire in his letter to Senator Barkley.

In conclusion, I want to express my appreciation of Mr. Morley's articles on "Europe Today." They show a keen insight into the difficulties Europe is now facing and the last two articles sum up the situation in a careful and impartial analysis. These articles have been of great benefit to the average reader. May you continue to give the public such splendid material!

Mrs. Roosevelt's Broadcasts.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Perhaps Representative Fish has forgotten that the Bible says, "Judge not lest ye be judged."

Does he think any true American has any respect for a man who for a little political prestige tries to belittle Mrs. Roosevelt for her good deed in donating the money she earned from her broadcasting program to charity? How many of his wealthy friends would go to the trouble, study and worry in getting up a broadcasting program and give all the profits to charity?

He should know her program is interesting and appreciated and worthy of the amount paid. Otherwise the sponsors would not have continued her broadcasting for so long a time.

Owner-Drivers' Care.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With reference to taxicab liability insurance, I think Frank G. Campbell's plan is ideal but I am anxious to know how the companies view such a plan. It would be a life saver for the owner-driver but I feel certain the companies would object to it because they would like to see the little fellows out.

If the owner-driver wants to keep his only means of livelihood, he must pay out $30 a month additional which will be a great hardship. Why should the owner-driver (whom I believe to be the most careful driver as naturally he not only wishes to protect his passengers but save expense of repairing damaged fenders, etc.) be forced to put out $30 a month while company drivers are put to little additional expense? It is usually the renter-driver who is more reckless as he does not have to pay for the upkeep of the taxi.

The public should realize that the owner-driver has many reasons for being the most careful driver in the city, and should think long before putting him out of business just to help companies to form a monopoly.

Appreciation.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Maj. Holland L. Robb, general chairman of the convention committee; Mr. Wotier, president of the Washington branch; Col. Edmund L. Daley, president of the national branch of the Third Division, and Mrs. Fred L. Walker, general chairman of the ladies auxiliary of the Washington branch, as well as all the members of the Third (Marne) Division have asked me to express our thanks to The Post in helping us get together the largest assemblage we have ever had. Much of it is due to your paper.

We certainly appreciate friendly co-operation of this kind.

The Post Impressionist

Sunshine, Not Silver.

SEVERAL hundred years ago there was a rumor that rich deposits of silver ore abounded somewhere in the hills of Virginia. The rumor may still be in existence for rumors have been known to be even longer lived than that.

What a rumor it was to cheer a man who was surrounded by debt and steadily increasing family expenditures! The man was Christoph von Graffenried, son of Baron Graffenried, and at the time bailiff of Iverton, in Switzerland. Not only had his lavish entertainments been too expensive for his purse, but there was a possibility of his office ending in 1708. It was from a former citizen of Bern, Franz Louis Michel, that he heard about the fine rich silver mines Michel is supposed to have discovered and found in Virginia.

According to reports, Christoph is supposed to have been happy neither personally or politically. Always of an adventurous disposition, the idea of seeking his fortune in the new world appealed to him. In his journal, he speaks of the "fine lands" Michel told him about, "how cheap they were . . . what liberty, what great good and increasing trade, what rich mines and other advantages," existed there. He decided to go to America.

After leaving Switzerland, in 1708, he went first to Holland where arrangements were made with 12 German miners to come to America when they were sent for. The plan was to work the mines for Michel's and Christoph's own profit as quietly as possible. Michel's maps and directions were to be followed. Christoph next went to London where John Lawson who had traveled in the New World confirmed what Michel had told him.

It was not the first time Christoph had been in England—another time, in his adventurous youth he had been presented to King Charles and enjoyed the "society of courtiers." He had also fallen in love. The lady was of good birth, a niece of the Duke of Buckingham, but her family was poor. It was necessary for the suitor to supply wealth and position. Christoph had a plan to buy a vacant commission as cornet in the British army, but when he wrote to Switzerland regarding it, the family said "Come home!"

Sons must have been more dutiful in those days, because Christoph started home. However, he stopped on the way, in France, and lingered there for a year. It was a year of tremendous social success. He finally reached Switzerland where he must have been admonished to "settle down," for he soon announced his intention of marrying. It is not improbable that the family arranged the match.

Legend has it at the time of the marriage that Anton, Christoph's father, was so penurious that the bridegroom had to lend him money with which to buy presents and had to hire the carriage himself. However, family disagreements were not new to Christoph, the eldest of the children. They had started at the age of 7, when he ran away from school to escape the heavy fines the teacher imposed for his failure to speak Latin. Then there was the time he was withdrawn from school at Heidelberg, when his father heard rumors of a duel.

After Christoph reached America, his troubles and vicissitudes continued. It wasn't until 1710 that he reached the place where the deposits of silver were supposed to be. The particular place is about 50 miles from Washington, out Route 28, through Silver Spring, Rockville and Barnesville. Just before you reach there you'll see one of the ubiquitous road plaques which reads:

SUGAR LOAF MOUNTAIN.

So called in 1710 by a Swiss nobleman, Baron Graffenreid, who ascended it in search of silver mines with Martin Chartier, a remarkable Frenchman, married to a Shawnee Indian wife, who lived near the mouth of the Monocacy River.

Needless to say, the silver was never found. The savages who roamed about and knew the ground well, assured Christoph at the time that there was no mineral there. He was reluctantly forced to agree with them, but not, however, until he had made another trip back to Europe. Michel's map was incorrect.

The adventure did not become a mountain of disappointment, though. Instead, it became a memory of beauty. Writing of it in his journal, Christoph said, "I believe there is no more beautiful site in the world."

The present owner of the mountain, Col. Gordon Strong, must undoubtedly agree with Baron Graffenreid for he lives there most of the year in a handsome house which commands a superb view of the surrounding country, and he shares his beauty with the public. Motorists will find well kept roads and legible signs directing them to the top, where convenient picnic tables and generous parking space is provided.

Jefferson Airport?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with pleasure and relief in your interesting daily paper that a safe flying field has at last been decided on. I would like to suggest that the name of the new airport be a tribute to that great American statesman, Thomas Jefferson.

It is with great pleasure that I suggest that the name of the new airport be: "The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Airport." E. A.

Tom McCarthy

Fellow Wayfarers on the Road.

SIOUX CITY, IOWA, July 17.—When you're on the road, there are a lot of incidents, emotions and dramas which don't quite fit into the pattern of normal, everyday life. One of those was the time when I arrived in Falls City, Nebraska, at two in the morning. I circled the city looking for a place to sleep and, as I walked, I became conscious that a police squad car was trailing me a half a block to the rear.

TOM McCARTHY.

The policemen never spoke to me, nor even drew abreast of me, but after a half an hour of the game, I gave up and crossed the city line into the country.

Another incident I don't think I'll forget probably has no significance, but it lighted the night momently with a flare of weird drama, when I was sleeping along with 75 others on the wide and sloping lawns of the high school at Twentieth and Dodge streets in Omaha.

On hot nights, hundreds of men, women and children repair to the high school lawn to sleep. The night I spent there was a cold one, for summertime, and the grassy slope was populated with nearly a hundred homeless men. Undisturbed by police, the homeless and unemployed, the tramps and the drifters stretched out under makeshift coverings of old coats, burlap sacks and newspapers.

Suddenly the quiet was broken by the hysteric scream of a drink-crazed bum.

"Somebody stole my hat!" he shouted, lurching to his feet, "who'll help me find it? They came by on a bicycle! Stole my hat."

Shouting, he stumbled around reclining forms, finally staggered off into the darkness pursuing his delusion.

His disappearance around the corner of the high school building was accompanied by the throaty laughter of the reclining tramps. It is a weird thing to hear the mass laughter of homeless men, shattering the night quiet of a city square.

• • • •

THERE IS ALWAYS room for wondering about where they come from, those strange drifters you find on the road. My curiosity was only partially satisfied in the instance of a family group which I met just outside of Council Bluffs, Iowa.

Endeavoring to hitch a ride, I noted their approach down the road. There were three of them: two boys and a girl. I judged the boys to be 14 and 12, and my judgment proved to be faulty. I judged the girl to be about 18, and was wrong again.

They weren't carrying any luggage, and the boys didn't even have sweaters as protection against the cool nights. The girl, wearing slacks and a sweater, carried a faded rose-colored coat and a small package wrapped in brown paper.

As they passed, their greeting was friendly. The youngest of the boys, a fair-haired youngster with a fine head and a girlishly, delicate face, asked where I was going. I told him I was heading for Sioux City, and that seemed to delight all of them. We had something in common. They were going there, too. They seemed like nice friendly children and I guess they were.

A little later, I caught a ride on a truck, and as the driver approached the children he stopped and allowed them to climb into the back. When, after 30 miles or so he let us out, the children thanked me profusely for the ride, which they thought I'd obtained for them. They promised to get me a ride, if they caught one first.

I was a little gruff with them I'm afraid, for I didn't fancy involving myself in what I thought might be a case of runaway children. They didn't seem to mind the fact that I was a bit gruff and that I went on ahead of them.

• • • •

LATER, as I stood beside the road at Onawa, Iowa, I regretted that I hadn't found out more about them. I wondered what such nice children were doing on the road. The thought had no more than time to formulate, when they hove into sight, the boys riding the back of a truck, the girl riding in the front seat with the driver.

I waved as they came near, never thinking they would remember their promise to get me a ride. The truck stopped and I clambered into the back.

"Isn't this lucky?" the older boy asked. "He's going right into Sioux City. The older boy had blond hair, close-set eyes, and a small forehead which seemed to come toward a point above his short tip-tilted nose.

"We told you we'd get you a ride," the younger boy said.

I made myself comfortable in the truck and thanked them for their thoughtfulness.

"You boys come far?" I asked.

"Pretty far," the younger boy said.

"We've been traveling for two weeks, and have gone all the way to Abilene, Kansas," the blond boy boasted.

"But aren't you children pretty young to be traveling so far?"

My question was answered by laughter from both boys.

"I'll bet you think that's our sister in the front seat," the younger boy said.

"Well, it's not," the older boy informed. "It's our mother and she's 32!"

"How old are you boys?" I asked.

"I'm 16 and he's 15," the blond boy said, "and we're both in high school."

I asked them if they lived in Sioux City and when they said they did, I asked them where their father was that they were tramping about like this.

"His father's up in Minnesota," the older boy said, "and we don't know where mine is."

"Ma's been divorced," the younger boy assured.

I asked them if they lived alone in Sioux City and they informed me that they lived with their grandmother, two more brothers and a sister.

• • • •

WE STARTED OUT on this trip with $2," the younger boy said.

"Do you know how much we've got now?" the older boy asked.

I could hardly keep pace with the revelations and, when I learned they were returning with 38 dollars, I weakly asked how they were doing it.

"Ah, everybody pities us, "the younger boy said. "We don't have to pay for meals or nothing."

"Who gives you the money?"

"Everybody!" the blond boy threw up his arms in a magnificent gesture, "Truck drivers! Farmers! Store keepers! Everybody! Ma, just tells them she's looking for work, and they give us money, and a place to sleep," he continued.

"You can get along, if you know how," the young boy said confidently.

"They all feel sorry for you, eh?"

"That's it, except some of these truck drivers. They take a liking to Ma," the blond boy said.

"But I guess we're old enough to protect her." The younger boy endeavored to screw his delicate face into a vicious frown, as he delivered himself of this reflection.

"What are you traveling around for?" I asked them.

"We went up to see some of Ma's relatives in Kansas," the blond boy answered.

"They're Cheskies," the other added, starting to laugh. "Cheskies," I was informed, were Czecho-Slovaks.

"Is that the only reason you went on the trip?"

"No, Ma likes to travel," said the older boy.

The younger boy with the girlish face told me that they were all going up to Minnesota in a few days to see his father. He had never seen his father.

They were nice kids. They had kept themselves quite clean on their trip, though they told me their shirts had only been washed once in two weeks. They didn't smoke when I offered them a cigarette and proudly informed me, "We don't even drink coffee!" They didn't swear very much, and the younger boy volunteered that he liked school. They were both going into first year high.

When the truck stopped in Sioux City, "Ma" and the driver, went into a beer parlor, while the kids waited outside and I drifted off, down into town.

Stabilization Program Enters Brazilian Chapter, Easing Gold Surplus Here Slightly And Brightening Latin America's Outlook.

By Herbert M. BRATTER.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

SECRETARY MORGENTHAU recently remarked that "we are weaving a pattern—very carefully—perfectly consistent." The pattern apparently is international exchange stability. With a prop applied here and there, as opportunity presents, the Secretary is working to perfect a monetary structure less unstable than the present.

The Mexican peso, the Chinese yuan, the franc and now the milreis—each has been the individual subject of Treasury support at one time or another. Following by only a few days the conclusion of an agreement for the sale of gold to China, it was only natural that the State and Treasury departments' announcements describing in general terms the results of conversations with Brazil's finance minister should have suggested that the two developments may not be unrelated. In fact, the Treasury's currency agreements with China and Brazil have two features in common. They both make a limited quantity of American gold available, and they both in effect set up a "line of credit," the object being the maintenance of exchange stability.

But the two agreements also have points of dissimilarity. Chief of these is the fact that in Brazil's case up to $60,000,000 of gold will be sold, apparently upon payment out of Brazil's dollar balances held in banks here. China, on the contrary, pays not in dollars, but in silver bullion at the rate of 45 cents an ounce.

This difference should be noted well. The dollars Brazil pays are full value dollars. The silver China hands over is arbitrarily valued at 45 cents per ounce, an artificial price maintained by the United States Treasury. The silver, moreover, is quite useless to us. Thus, in addition to 11-3 billion dollars of silver in monetary use, we have over $376,000,000 worth (cost value) of the bullion lying idle in the Treasury.

Mission From Brazil Had Three Objectives.

IN COMING to this country, the Brazilians had in mind three important objectives: (1) stabilizing the Brazilian milreis within a certain range; (2) establishing a central bank, and (3) readjusting Brazil's dollar bonds held in this country. The latter question is still under discussion in New York. Under a unilateral agreement of 1934, Brazil undertook to make partial paymment on Brazilian loans outstanding here. This arrangement is scheduled to expire next March. Hence the present conversations with bondholders' representatives.

Incidental to the mission's visit to Washington, the Brazilian finance minister, Souza Costa, and Secretary Hull reviewed the Brazilian-American trade agreement of 1935 and discussed its prospects. Declaring their intention of continunig the agreement in force, both governments now undertake to protect its "principles and benefits against outside competition that is directly subsidized by governments."

To put the matter in plain English, Washington has been conscious of a steady expansion in Germany's trade with Brazil ever since the announcement of the German-Brazilian compensation arrangement or "modus vivendi" of June, 1936. Under this arrangement, which has been strongly supported by Mr. Souza Costa, the proceeds of Brazilian exports to Germany are earmarked or set aside for the purchase of German goods exclusively. Since the Reich government directly subsidizes German exporters, Brazil is able to buy more cheaply in Germany than elsewhere. Moreover, for a time Germany offered a higher price for Brazilian cotton than was elsewhere obtainable.

Compensation Pact Affects Other Nations.

NATURALLY this compensation agreement has worked to the detriment of other nations' trade with Brazil. The Brazilian government has, for example, purchased German coal for the government railways and the Brazilian Lloyd, to the loss of British coal producers; and it has bought German office equipment, to the disadvantage of American manufacturers.

Before the World War, Germany was strong in Brazil's import trade. Many important trading firms were of German origin. It was natural that Germany should seek to recover some of the ground lost to this country during the war. Stimulated by the above-mentioned agreement and by long credit terms, Germany's share of Brazil's trade is now larger than ever.

In 1936 Brazil's imports from Germany exceeded those from the United States. From 14 per cent of Brazil's total imports in 1934, Germany's share rose to 23.5 per cent last year, whereas our share during this recovery period actually declined from 23.6 per cent to 22.2 per cent. Comparing the first quarter of 1937 with that of last year, the story is similar. Our part in Brazil's imports declined from nearly 24 per cent to 21 per cent while Germany's rose from 23 to 26 per cent, and England's rose from 9 to 12½ per cent.

From these figures it does not necessarily follow, however, that Germany's exports to Brazil can increase indefinitely, regardless of the present agreement. Germany is hard pressed for materials necessary to armament and economic self-sufficiency. There is doubtless a limit to the amount of production for export which the German government will at present countenance. Some decline in Germany's share of Brazilian trade might therefore occur for reasons unrelated to the Hull-Souza conversations.

Two Committees Will Foster Bilateral Trade.

UNDER THE new arrangement, two independent Brazilian-American committees of businessmen will be set up, one here and one in Rio de Janeiro. They are intended to advise the two governments on means of fostering the bilateral trade. It is hoped in Washington that these committees will prove more effective from our standpoint than the one set up in Brazil following the German-Brazilian "modus vivendi" of 1936.

The United States, it may be noted in pasing, is Brazil's most important market. We buy about 39 per cent of Brazil's exports, chiefly in the form of coffee, cocoa, hides and skins, carnauba wax, Brazil nuts and cocoanut oil (babassu). For the past year or two we have taken fairly important amounts of cottonseed oil as well. It is to Brazil's interest to preserve the American market.

Brazil's apparent desire for American monetary aid in holding the milreis fluctuations within narrow limits jibes with the Administration's wishes to approach currency stabilization through bi-lateral negotiations instead of the "international conference" method. Thus, Mexico's suggestion for a general Pan-American monetary conference is making little headway.

The sale of gold to Brazil as a sort of stabilization fund is a step away from the Treasury's gold-sterilization worries, although only a minute one. The $60,000,000 involved is of course small when compared with our $1,183,000,000 of a sterilized metal and our total holdings of $12,414,000,000.

Central Bank Proposal Urged By British Expert.

THE PROPOSAL for a Brazilian central bank "to assist in the maintenance of the stability of the currency" was made as long ago as 1931, when Sir Otto Niemeyer—England's "Kemmerer"—visited the country at the government's invitation. Sir Otto suggested that the bank have a reserve—to be built up by means of a foreign loan—equal to 30 per cent of the note issue, and to be in gold or "foreign gold exchange at all times convertible on demand into a fixed amount of exportable gold." While not all students of Brazil's finances may agree that a central bank for that country is necessary, the present Brazilian government is desirous of setting up such an institution, if the means can be found.

In this respect our Treasury has been willing to co-operate. Perhaps it is hoped that, in addition to its prestige value, the new central bank will be able gradually to ease the present exchange control and assist the South American government in straightening its tangled finances. From Brazil's standpoint, Sir Otto's injunction — just quoted above — and our Treasury's uncertain "24-hour basis" account for the desire to convert dollar balances into gold earmarked under Brazil's name. If this were not done, there would always be the risk of a change in American policy.

Prior to last week's agreement Brazil's gold stock had an estimated value of about $28,000,000 or roughly 11 per cent of the outstanding note issue. The sale here of $60,000,000 of gold to Brazil under the new agreement would give that country approximately the 30 per cent coverage recommended by Sir Otto Niemeyer, and this would suffice unless the note issue later expanded.

Whether we shall derive any substantial benefit from the Brazil mission's visit, only time can tell. As yet, it appears, the agreement's details have still to be worked out by the two treasuries. But it is certain that the example of Mexico and Brazil will eventually be followed by other Latin American nations.

Japan's Aim

By

'—To Enhance The Imperial Power.'

IN THE DANGEROUS game at present being played in North China, the odds at the moment would seem to be very largely on the side of Japan.

The presumption is that the number of Japanese troops already in the Peiping-Tientsin area is large enough to exert considerable pressure on the local Chinese armies and overwhelm them if necessary. Should reinforcements be sent by Nanking, it would be a relatively simple matter for Japan to increase its North China force several fold by the dispatch of units now stationed in Manchukuo, Korea and Japan proper.

In part this has already been done although not yet on a large scale. Nor, with Japanese in control of practically every strategic point between the Great Wall and the old capital and astride every mile of railroad could such a movement of troops be blocked.

THE DANGER exists, of course, that the Nanking government will not capitulate this time as it has been forced to capitulate so often in the past to Japanese pressure.

The growth of nationalist sentiment in China is a phenomenon the extent and importance of which cannot safely be discounted. Indeed, it is this very circumstance that old lines of cleavage in China are beginning to disappear which helps explain why Japan should have chosen this particular moment to resume its advance on the Asiatic mainland.

In the calculations of the Japanese high command further delay in forcing a showdown on the North China issue might prove fatal. For with each passing month the strength of Nanking may grow and the unification of China become an increasing reality.

Certainly for the first time in years Chiang Kai-shek, generalissimo of Nanking's armies, is under no compulsion to waste his government's substance on futile campaigns against obstreperous war lords and the elusive Reds. Since the Sian kidnaping episode of last December, a modus vivendi has been worked out whereby Nanking and the Red armies may work together instead of continuing to fly at each other's throat as in the past.

UNDER THE CIRCUMSTANCES, the pressure from China on Japan to evacuate the important area between the Yellow River and the Great Wall is bound to increase unless an effective blow is dealt China's unity before Nanking is sufficiently strong to challenge the island empire.

Japan's present strategy is, therefore, understandable. Rather than permit a showdown to arise at some time in the future when internal and external circumstances may favor China, the Japanese militarists have apparently decided to force the issue at a moment when the international situation is not particularly favorable to China and when China's newfound unity has not yet become thoroughly consolidated.

The only real risk Japan faces is that of having to fight a prolonged war. In such a war the Japanese might win every battle and yet lose the conflict. It came perilously close to doing just that in 1904-1905 when, after an unbroken series of successes over Russia, the Japanese exchequer was just about bankrupted.

Had Russia then been able to hold out a while longer, the victory of Togo at Tsushima Straits and of Nogi at Port Arthur as well as the other resplendent victories won by the legions of the Mikado over the levies of the czar might have proved meaningless.

FORTUNATELY for Japan the test was avoided. With a revolutionary situation developing within its borders, Russia was forced to sue for peace. Yet Japan's own weakness was such that it had to content itself with less than the Japanese people expected it would gain.

There was no indemnity from Russia to ease the back-breaking burden that the cost of waging war had imposed on the Japanese and the news of the Portsmouth treaty was followed by riots in the streets of Japanese cities.

It is no doubt part of Japan's present calculations that no prolonged war with China will be necessary. In the first place China is without allies. The European powers are busy at home. Russia, too, is in no position to help Nanking pull the North China chestnuts out of the fire and the United States, while expressing its concern over the situation, is hardly likely to do anything.

At least so the Japanese calculate. Indeed, the language of Secretary Hull's statement, whose every syllable constitutes a veiled denunciation of Japan's past policies and present intentions, is being translated by Japanese propaganda into a document friendly and favorable to the island empire.

SECONDLY, so far as the Peiping-Tientsin area is concerned, the Chinese government, should it decide to fight rather than submit to Japan's terms, would be in the disadvantageous position of having to take the offensive.

It is paradoxical, of course, that a Chinese attempt to defend Chinese territory against encroachment could be regarded as coming within the category of an offensive movement. Yet, from the standpoint of military strategy, that is precisely what it would be since the Japanese have during recent years thoroughly entrenched themselves in the area in question.

But, most important of all, there is the probability, as the Japanese see it, that aside from a few face-saving gestures of non-compliance with the demands of the Kwantung army and certain tentative military moves in the direction of the north, Chiang Kai-shek will do nothing.

The Japanese appear convinced that the strong words Chiang has been employing regarding the North China situation are intended to cover an ultimate retreat, the responsibility for which will be placed at the door of the Chinese officials in the Peiping-Tientsin area.

Thus Chiang will "save face" by standing up against the Japanese and also save his army from demolition while Japan, on the other hand, will win its immediate objective of forcing out all remaining troops from Hopei and Chahar provinces.

It will not be content with that. "We are determined," said War Minister Sugiyama at a meeting of 800 retired generals in Tokyo, "to enhance the imperial power and influence by decisive measures." But that imperial power continuously needs enhancing, so Japan's success at this time would in all certainty lead to further aggressions in the future.

It is a recognition of this fact that is in part behind the stiffer attitude being displayed by Nanking. Japan's appetite, it is clear, grows with the eating. And because Nanking, whether for face-saving purposes alone or out of desperation, is showing fight, the Japanese are moving more cautiously in North China than they have hitherto. A prolonged war—even with China—is far from their desire.

Tammany Call Is Accepted by Sen. Copeland

Pledges Anti-New Deal Stand in Campaign for New York Mayor.

By Sidney Olson.

Senator Royal S. Copeland (Democrat), of New York, yesterday definitely ended Tammany's months-long search for a New York City mayoralty candidate by accepting the invitation of Tammany Chief James J. Dooling to run.

Copeland will not resign from the Senate to run. He said he would accept the support of "all parties, all groups and all individuals who think they want me as mayor."

The bland, gray-haired physician, opponent of the President's court bill and much other New Deal legislation, cannily sidestepped a straight-out fight with Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia on the LaGuardia administration by pledging himself to run on an anti-New Deal platform.

Copeland is known to like LaGuardia personally, and observers said his move to make the fight on the issue of the New Deal was exceptionally smart politics, as LaGuardia's administration has been one of the most efficient in New York's history, according to New York sources.

Mayor's Race Confused.

The mayoralty situation is still extremely confused. LaGuardia is the candidate of a Republican-Fusion bloc. Copeland will be the candidate of only Tammany.

The other four Democratic sectors of the city, unanimous against Copeland's candidacy and controlling a greater number of voters, have made Grover Whalen, fashion-plate chief of the 1939 World's Fair, merchant and former police commissioner, their candidate. Yesterday they added strength to that ticket by taking Frank J. Taylor, city controller, as Whalen's running mate.

An independent Democratic candate, whom Tammany refused to indorse, is Manhattan Borough President Samuel Levy. Frank J. Prial, Taylor's only real opponent, has agreed to run with Levy.

Further Tangle Possible.

The party situation, thus badly split, will be further entangled if LaGuardia decides to enter the Democratic primaries and Copeland decides to enter the Republican primaries.

Copeland said yesterday:

"The question of the New Deal ought not to enter into a local campaign, but it has been put there by those who oppose me on the theory I am anti-New Deal. Consequently this seems to be the issue. If it is to be the issue, the natural candidate of the New Dealers would be Mr. LaGuardia and he should be handed the nomination on a silver platter. It would seem to me to be quite unnecessary to enter another New Dealer in the race."

James Roosevelt Suspends Drive

Boston, July 19 (AP).—James Roosevelt today announced suspension of his job-finding campaign to take up the slack created by the Works Progress Administration layoffs when Albert N. Murray, president of the Associated Industries of Massachusetts, informed him his organization was working on a plan to return the unemployed to work.

The announcement was made after a two-hour executive session of young Roosevelt's organizing committee.

P. A. O'Connell, president of the Boston Retail Trade Board, was elected chairman of the committee, which, Roosevelt said, would remain in existence but would take no action pending the success or failure of the Associated Industries' plan.

Poles Identify Victim of Bomb

Warsaw, July 19 (AP).—A man who attempted to assassinate Col. Adam Koc, leader of the Polish nationalist movement, was identified by police today as Wyociech Bieganey, 29, a workman of Ponzan Province.

The motive for his effort to kill Col. Koc at his villa late last night in the little village of Swidry, near Warsaw, was not established.

Bieganey was mutilated almost beyond identification by what police said was a premature explosion of his powerful time bomb in the garden of the villa.

Rail Action Authorized For Trust Co. by I. C. C.

The Interstate Commerce Commission authorized the Marine Midland Trust Co., New York City, yesterday to intervene in the application of trustees of the Chicago, Rock Island & Pacific Railway for authority to issue certificates of indebtedness.

The commission said the trust company would intervene as trustee under the indenture of February 23, 1911, securing the first mortgage 4½ per cent gold bonds of the St. Paul & Kansas City Short Line Railroad.

House of Lords Passes Liberalized Divorce Bill

London, July 19 (AP).—The much-debated British divorce bill was returned to the House of Commons today, stamped with approval of the House of Lords. The lower house, which originated the measure, must consider amendments.

Parliamentary passage of the bill would give the British Isles the first change in divorce law since 1857. Under its provisions the present sole ground of adultery would be broadened to include: After three years' of marriage, the grounds of desertion, cruelty and insanity.

Red Leaders Assailed For Poor Propaganda

Moscow, July 19 (AP).—The Communist Party newspaper Pravda took provincial Communist leaders to task today for lax propaganda efforts because thousands of Russians still were unaware of the two Soviet flights from Moscow to the United States.

The newspaper declared "lack of adequate propaganda among the people tends to weaken the party's influence over them."

Than which there is no creature means;
And frequents Young Men's Republican Clubs.

IV.

Here you see the tall giraffe,
Its neck makes nine necks and a half;
How wonderful such necks must be
For all around tall snoopery!

Its neck can conquer easily
Most anybody's privacy;
It is the envy, so they say,
Of all official U. S. A.

V.

This is the lion,
It seems to thrive
On eating human Beings alive.

It's vicious, mean
And so unsunny
You'd almost think
That it had money.

VI.

This is a tiger,
It loves raw meat
And eats right off your Hands . . . and feet!

Its teeth are sharp,
Its habits gory;
Quite clearly it's

VII.

Behold the gorilla,
Common in this clime,
Mr. Roosevelt's time).

VIII.

This is a cage of monkeys;
Don't get 'em mixed with donkeys;
And anybody who says they're the same
Is a Liberty Leaguer. For shame!
For shame!

IX.

Here we have some trained seals,
They juggle lamps and ride high wheels;
They dearly love to play and sway
And they do as they're told on election day.

X.

And you're another
If you're a foe

XI.

Here is a wildcat—
What makes him wild?
Maine and Vermont for

XII.

Within this cage is a kangaroo;
It proves the sit-down strike's nothing new;
It has the eagle's place today
As the popular symbol of the U. S. A.

XIII.

Here you see the elephant,
Which often lives one hundred years,
But after it is seventy

Soviet Fliers Plan Search for Island

Yakutsk, Siberia, July 19 (AP).—Two Soviet flying explorers prepared today to search the Arctic for a mystery island marked on maps as Sannikoff Land.

They are Pilot Chervitchny and Navigator Shtedenko, who came to this eastern Siberian city from Krasnoyarsk, in south central Siberia, in the plane N-10.

They said they would fly northward in an attempt to find the island north of Siberia which the Russian explorer Sannikoff said he sighted years ago but which nobody else has reported seeing. The island is supposed to lie north of the Liakoff Islands, also called New Siberia.

Friend Denies Putnam Plans Yacht Search

Navy Vessels End Hunt as Earhart Death Theory Is Accepted.

By the Associated Press.

Honolulu, July 19.—Disappearance of Amelia Earhart and her navigator in the equatorial Pacific 17 days ago was written off as one of aviation's mysteries tonight.

Navy officers were convinced the 39-year-old aviatrix and Frederick J. Noonan perished on their 2,570-mile flight from New Guinea to tiny Howland Island July 2.

United States Navy ships, some of which had joined the search a few hours after Miss Earhart radioed a last, confusing message at 3:14 p. m. (E. S. T.) July 2, abandoned headed homeward, their hunt at sunset yesterday and George Palmer Putnam, husband of the 39-year-old woman flier, was in seclusion at his Los Angeles home, but his close friend, Paul Mantz, said he was satisfied the Navy had done everything possible.

Mantz denied reports Putnam planned to charter a yacht and search the Howland area of the Pacific.

Mantz, who was technical adviser to Miss Earhart on her projected around-the-world flight, said:

"Mr. Putnam has not even considered such a plan. No one, even if he had $10,000,000 to spend, could do a more thorough job than has been done by the Navy."

Navy surface and air craft covered more than 250,000 square miles of ocean and lonely South Sea island groups.

The aircraft carrier Lexington, which sent fighting planes over thousands of miles of the area, was ordered to steam for San Diego, the base it left July 5 to join the search. Previously the battleship Colorado, the mine sweeper Swan and the Coast Guard cutter Itasca were withdrawn and ordered to return here.

New York Shares Quake Spotlight With East Indies

New York, July 19 (AP).—New York is pretty sore about unfair competition in the earthquake business.

It had the third quake in its history (the fishes somewhere off Long Island gots the worst of it) last night, but another terrestrial shakeup 9,000 miles away in the East Indies stole the show.

The New York quake consisted of brief tremors just before midnight. The East Indies one started about 45 minutes before and lasted about 50 minutes.

Meanwhile, a "very severe" earthquake, beginning at 2:43 p. m., was registered today on the Fordham University seismograph. The Rev. Father Joseph Lynch, seismologist at the university, estimated the shock was about 2,700 miles from New York, probably off the coast of South America.

Strike Closes WPAY, Ohio Broadcast Station

Portsmouth, Ohio, July 19 (AP).—Radio Station WPAY went off the air today when eight employes walked out in a strike against the discharge of six workers.

Paul Wagner, chairman of the American Radio and Telegraphists Union, a Committee for Industrial Organization affiliate, issued a statement saying that the six were discharged because of union affiliations.

Walther League Meets.

Detroit, July 19 (AP).—Approximately 3,000 young Lutherans, here for the international convention of the Walther League, were urged by their president, Walter E. Helmke, of Fort Wayne, Ind., today to let "no outside exigencies interfere with the work of the church."

The Constitution

By William Lyon Phelps

There is a new book by Burton J. Hendrick, called "Bulwark of the Republic." It is published by Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

Now here is a work that ought to be read by every voter who knows how to read, and by all others who are old enough to read with intelligence. Especially should every boy and girl in our public high schools read this book.

• • • •

The United States Constitution was adopted in the convention in the year 1787, after two years was accepted by a majority of the States, and on this foundation the United States began its course in 1789. Thus the year 1937 is the 150th anniversary, and we cannot emphasize too strongly what it is we are celebrating.

Dr. Hendrick is well known as a historian and biographer, for an earlier work was crowned with the Pulitzer Prize. He has scholarship, sobriety of intellect, judicial poise, critical penetration, impartiality and to all these necessary qualifications he has added the grace of an admirable literary style.

This book is serious, as befits the subject; but it is never dull. And such a book was never more needed than at this moment.

It is a fine, tall volume, well printed, and like nearly all books, unnecessarily heavy in weight.

• • • •

Nothing in it pleases me more than the account of Daniel Webster's speech in 1850. No public man has ever received more venomous abuse from his constituents than Webster received for that speech. He foresaw what the result would be for him, and it probably shortened his life. But he regarded this as the greatest speech of his career; and more than any other one speech or article, it helped to save the United States.

MARY HAWORTH'S MAIL

Cordial at First, Man's Family Now "Cuts" Woman of 30 Whom He Loves and Wishes to Marry; He's 25.

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am woman of 30, seriously interested in a young man of 25. We have been going together for three years. He has told me many times how much he loves me and on several occasions has proposed marriage. But here is the problem: My family approves of him altogether, but his family objects to the match on the theory that there is too much difference in our ages.

* * * *

In the early stages of our friendship, before we became seriously interested in each other, his family was particularly cordial to me. They had me to dinners, parties and for week-end visits. Now that they realize he wants to marry me, they are doing everything to break up the relationship. They have even stopped speaking to me.

* * * *

In order to keep peace in his family, I have asked him to stop seeing me. This he refuses to do, declaring he would rather leave home and family than give me up. He is financially able to support a wife, and my income is equal to his. Tell me, Mary Haworth, what is your honest opinion? Should I marry him? It seems a simple decision to make, but I am unable to make it. Thanking you, I am, sincerely,

UNDECIDED.

What To Believe.

DEAR UNDECIDED: It is my opinion that you can well afford to ignore the attitude of the young man's family if he himself is as genuinely unmoved by it as he professes to be. I realize, of course, that one is entering marriage with a certain handicap to overcome when one is not cordially received by one's circle of in-laws. But such a handicap is automatically minimized when one's marriage partner firmly and purposefully dedicates his whole allegiance to his mate, and leaves the burden his family to accept and adjust themselves to his choice; if, in other words, he makes it entirely clear that "this is my deliberate, permanent choice, and you can tawe it or leave it."

* * * *

It depends entirely on the individuals concerned whether or not five years' difference in chronological age (with the seniority on the woman's side) is to be construed as a potential liability. In some instances, that five years' difference would be a distant asset, for it would have invested the woman with just those qualities of mind and spirit which the man might seek in vain in younger girls. Nearly everyone of us can point to some happily married couple of our acquaintance who took such a difference in age blithely in their stride and achieved an exemplary relationship.

* * * *

I believe a woman who marries a man slightly younger than herself can turn the age difference to advantage, if she accepts it as a challenge to keep herself always young and vital in appearance and interests, without giving way to neurotic fretting about her presumable handicap. It is only a handicap if she establishes it as such in her own mind. I believe the average man nowadays looks to his wife to be a combination wife, mother, sweetheart, comrade and financial partner; and, finding these qualities embodied in one personable woman, gives to her his completely devoted and dependent loyalty. I think a woman of 30 is equipped by experience to play this role more satisfactorily and effectively than is a girl of 25 or less.

* * * *

I believe a woman who is slightly older than a man should carefully analyze the nature of her attraction for him, and conduct herself accordingly. If your suitor looks to you for superior strength, guidance, mothering, understanding, and consolation, supply him these things in never-failing abundance. If, on the other hand, he has learned to love you simply because, in spite of your seniority, you seem to him the most delightfully appealing, charming, responsive and attractive-looking girl he has ever met, forget the age difference and be his "best girl," so to speak.

* * * *

To sum up, therefore: Marry the man if he is indeed willing to "leave home and family" for you; and if you have the intuition and intelligence to decipher what is your fundamental attraction for him so that you may either discount or turn to profit that five years' difference in ages. M. H.

Advice for "Faith."

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am interested in the letter from "Faith," your 18-year-old correspondent of July 15, who asks how to go about making boy and girl friends her own age. Your advice to her was sound, but I would like to go a step further, as her case appeals to me very much. Nothing helps a girl so much as good background, pleasant parents and a home in which to entertain nicely. But, contrarily, nothing makes her so unpopular among her contemporaries, as parents who are too much in the foreground. Yet she admits her "only close companions" are her parents.

* * * *

Does father sit in the living room, joining the conversation, when her young friends call? Does mother say: "I think I'll come along," when someone asks daughter to go for a walk? When someone asks to speak with her on the telephone do her parents ask: "Who's calling?" instead of saying cheerfully, "Yes, indeed?" Is sh seen everywhere in their company?

* * * *

A girl of 18 should go out alone, if necessary, rather than with her parents. Eighteen-year-olds for the most part feel very superior to their parents, and they will also feel superior to a girl constantly seen with her parents. Even the finest, most congenial, most understanding parent is regarded by his offspring's contemporaries as another "old fogy" who "cramps their style" and smothers their "wise cracks."

* * * *

Furthermore, an 18-year-old girl is certainly entitled to an allowance. When I was 18 I was earning $25 a week, all for myself and did it make me feel good! Since her parents deny "Faith" the right to work, and expect her to help mother with the housework, I say they are obligated to give her enough pocket money to keep up with her friends. Food, shelter, and clothing, no matter how generously provided, are not sufficient to make an 18-year-old welcome with "the crowd."

* * * *

Unless her parents are very stupid or extremely selfish, they ought to realize that the price of membership in a club, such as the "Y," and pocket money for herself, is her due in exchange for the inalienable human right to work and earn for herself. If they are too poor to give her club memberships and a modest allowance, then she should be paid the amount they would give a servant for helping in the home. If they won't do this, I advise her to break the bonds of childish dependence and get out and fend for herself, before her fighting spirit is broken. Sincerely.

R. B. W.

Turbans Inspired By Eiffel Tower

Paris (AP).—"Eiffel Tower" turbans are a new millinery tribute to the Paris Exposition.

They have close-fitting cap-like bases from which they tower up to a slim top wrapped with ribbon tied in a coquettish bow. Agnes is showing these in felt. A few she trims with fur. Black Persian lamb coils around one, which is tied at the top with red velvet ribbon.

Felt cloche hats made with slide fasteners spiralled around them from brim edge to crown top, can be opened along the fastening. Then they come apart looking like the one-piece apple peelings of childhood's days, and can be conveniently folded up for vacation packing.

Other sportswear felts have their wide front brims turned straight up in halo form, and their pointed or cone-shaped crowns trimmed with contrasting ribbon. Purple ribbon bands green felt, red ribbon bands blue.

For Mid-Season—Light-Weight Suede; Soft Toes

Here are the correct shoes to accompany your midsummer black silk jerseys and satins—as cool, comfortable and smart as your midseason frocks. They are light in weight and "air-cooled" by numerous small perforations. The conventional box tip has been discarded, as a pleasing transition from the toeless sandals of summer.

A cleverly designed glove-like sandal (left), with grosgrain ribbon bands as a dramatic contrast. Note side straps and buckle. The classic opera pump (below), with pinhole perforation design and braiding. A high-cut oxford (lower left) to accompany more casual midseason clothes; as cool and kind to your feet as a beach shoe.

Today's HEALTH TALK

By Dr. Logan Clendening.

Sunshine for Health.

THESE SUMMER days should be of great benefit to the individual who is neither sick nor well—the generally under par person. He or she has a hard time in the winter—indoor life, short days of little sunshine, overheated houses, colds—all take their toll.

Now you can throw physic to the dogs and open the doors and windows, and, what is still better, leave the house entirely.

In different countries the treatment of disease is conditioned by national customs, and to a certain extent by natural resources. In France and Italy, as summer comes on, the people flock to the watering resorts with which those countries are so richly endowed—to take the waters or to bathe in the medicated springs. Even more, they congregate at the seaside, nowhere very far away, and where, in that climate, the sea is warm and enticing.

In the Scandanavian and German countries good health is coupled inevitably with exercise in the open air—with gymnastic clubs, walking clubs, bicycling clubs, turnvereins, mountain climbing tours on foot through the forests and hills. And for those who are under par, especially those with arthritis or chronic rheumatism, this is combined with massage and applications of heat and light.

In America we have been in the past perhaps too inclined to depend on drugs for treatment. That is why I say throw physic to the dogs. Take a leaf from our neighbors and depend on physical means of treatment.

True we have become more diet conscious in the past few years—a healthy tendency if diet is substituted for drugs.

In exercise I think we depend a little too much on games. Our nervous temperaments cannot be content to use the body except in the form of a contest. Frequently this means too strenuous exercise for a short time, especially for the person whose whole system is run down. Even worse, it brings with it nervous excitement, the stimulus to win, which is itself fatiguing. Compare the tense faces of the tennis or polo player with the color and restful look of a group of young athletes in a field going through routine and communal exercises which involve all the muscles of the body systematically.

Even worse is the tendency we are developing to let the experts hold the contest for us while we go and look on. An afternoon at the ball game is a poor substitute for a long walk or a bicycle jaunt in the country with a group of sympathetic companions.

Special baths have been recognized from the earliest times as conducing to health. I am informed that the Aztecs in Mexico probably had special steam baths. At least architectural remains have been interpreted in that way. Buildings were constructed so that in one room large stones could be heated and water poured over them. The steam thus generated was conducted through a hole in the wall to a closed chamber where the patients took what we now call Turkish baths. The Romans were probably the greatest hot bathers the world has ever seen.

We have all these resources of physical therapy at hand—sunshine, fresh air, mountains, lakes, seas and springs. Let us employ them sensibly and with mental calm.

New Soft-Toed Shoe for Milady Makes Its Bow for Fall Wear

By Ethel Ehlen.
The Post's Fishing Editor.

THE SOFT-TOED shoe has just made its appearance as a smart and comfortable transition from summer to fall. Fashioned of light weight suede, without the usual box toe, and "air colled" with numerous perforations, it is ideal to accompany the popular black silk jersey and satin frocks that are being selected by fastidious women now for mid-season wear.

If you have been wearing toeless and backless shoes for general wear and the beach, and dread the idea of donning conventional shoes again after all htis foot decollette, these comfortable new-styled shoes, should prove a comforting accessory. Another interesting thing about them—the soft toe is flattering to the foot and has a tendency to make the feet appear smaller and shorter.

This new foot comfort can be adapted to all mid-season costumes, since the styles are so varied; ranging from opera pumps and glove-fitting sandals to the more tailored oxford ties. The colors too are varied—black, brown, rust, green. Aside from the featherweight suede, these boxless toes are appearing also in light weight salf. Either the suede or calf are as smart and appropriate for fall wear as they are for mid-summer, accompanying mid-season frocks and fall suits and frocks with equal fashion correctness and comfort.

A WOMAN'S NEW YORK

By Alice Hughes

New York, July 19.

WITHIN eight hours after their return to the town on the good ship Normandie our 48-super-colossal dancing Rockettes were back at work on their home stage at the Radio City Music Hall. They had completed a hurried visit to perform at the Paris exposition as guests of the French government, and were undoubtedly the most excited visitors to the French capital since foreign exchange went to pieces several years ago.

ALICE HUGHES.

These 48 shapely little girls are among my favorite "kids" in New York, and on the afternoon of their arrival I rushed backstage of the Music Hall to get a first-hand report on their trip.

Most of these children were still so excited about it all that they were inclined to dither, so I went for my information to their handsome and clever captain, Amelia Sherman, who watches the details of their costumes and checks their infrequent mistakes on the stage.

"The kids behaved perfectly and had an elegant time," Amelia told me, "though they seemed to feel that they were a little too closely chaperoned. But we had lots of parties, and the four numbers we did at the International Dance Exhibition were wildly received. The Frenchmen all stood up and yelled what seems to be their favorite adjective, 'formidable.' This seems to be their most expressive word."

This was a wonderful experience for these young girls, none of whom had ever been abroad before. Though they are acknowledged to be the foremost precision dancers in the world, it is interesting to recall that this type of concerted hoofing was originated in England by the late dancing master, John Tiller. But as I remember his girls, they were mere automatons, whereas our Rockettes' work is filled with beauty and personality. As the kids did their 16 minutes in Paris, 10,000 Frenchmen stood up and yelled "formidable." And as we remembered from the old song, not even 50,000,000 Frenchmen can be wrong.

* * * *

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—The hot weather is taking a fearful poke at the handful of shows still running on Broadway. One of those still displaying great strength is that masterpiece of cattiness, "The Women," with 40 girls in the cast, and no males back of the curtain-line but the stagehands. I just learned today that plans are already on foot for a complete set of new costumes for fall, so that the girls will have fresh outfits in the latest styles. John Hambleton, who designed the original clothes, is already in Paris for the great fashion openings, preparatory to whipping up the fresh toggery . . .

* * * *

Holding the fashion thought, we are going to have an interesting book on this matter in less than a year. Elizabeth Hawes, one of our most interesting clothes creators, has signed a contract to write a book on American fashion which will include the story of her rise to designing prominence. Well, if Liz can write as colorfully as she sews up dresses, the tome will be one for all our shelves . . .

* * * *

The only people in New York who seem to approve warmly of the new Marlene Dietrich movie, "Knight Without Armor," were the newspaper critics. The rest of us seemed able to take it or let it pass, often the latter. Somehow the Potsdam Peach didn't even seem to look quite as spectacular as usual.

Tap Dance to Popularity

TAP DANCING'S a good recipe for popularity. You'll be invited everywhere when the word spreads that your lively taps pep up a party.

And you needn't spill the secret that you learned your clever steps at home from simple diagrams.

It's easy. There are only six tap steps to learn. Combine these six steps in various ways—to different rhythms—and presto! you've a dozen fascinating dances for your stock in trade.

For the straight tap: 1, raise the right foot a few inches from the floor; 2, strike the ball of the foot against the floor by stamping directly downward. Be careful that the heel does not touch the floor. Practice with the left foot, too.

For the heel tap: 1, raise the right foot upward; 2, strike the heel sharply against the floor with the toe raised. Practice this same movement with the left foot.

Tap dancing is grand for keeping your figure young and trim. To make clear, ringing taps, you must keep your weight balanced evenly over the balls of the feet so you learn to carry yourself more gracefully.

Send 15 cents for our booklet, "Tap Dancing and New Variations in Social Dances," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

CHEESE AND CHERRY TARTLETS

Cover the outside of 4 patty pans with cheese paste, bake 12 minutes at 450 F. and remove from tins. Put ¾ cup cheery juice in saucepan, add 2 tablespoons sugar mixed with 1 tablespoon cornstarch and stir until boiling point is reached and mixture is thick. Cook 10 minutes over hot water and cool slightly. Fill sheels with stoned cherries, cover with thickened juice and chill. Top with arose of cream cheese or whipped cream and sprinkle with chopped pecans.

CHERRY JUICE.

Cook stones from 1 pound cherries with 1-3 clup sugar and ¾ cup water for 5 minutes and strain or use juice from canned stoned cherries.

CHEESE PASTE.

Sift 1 cup flour with ½ teaspoon salt and ½ teaspoon baking powder. Mix 6 tablespoons salad oil and 2 tablespoons ice water, add to flour, mix well and knead until smooth. Roll out and sprinkle with grated cheese mixed with a few grains cayenne, fold in 3 layers, repeat twice, roll thin and use as desired.

Wedding Ring Claim Altered By Remarriage

Widow Should Leave Off First Husband's Gift When Engaged.

By Margaret Wallace

SECOND marriages present certain problems of etiquette, among them the question of wedding rings. One correspondent writes as follows:

"Is it ever proper for a widow, when she remarries, to continue to wear the wedding ring given her by her late husband? My daughter does not object to my second marriage, but she objects very much to my taking off the engagement ring and wedding ring given to me by her father. She will not even consent to my changing them to another finger. My fiance has presented me with a large engagement ring and will, of course, give me a wedding ring. It would seem ridiculous to me to wear two engagement rings and two wedding rings. Since my engagement has been announced, my mother considers that it would be better taste for me to remove my wedding ring and to wear the engagement ring my late husband gave me on another finger. When should a widow take off her wedding ring?"

It is not considered good form for a widow who has announced her intention to marry again to wear the wedding ring given her by her late husband. It is proper to wear the engagement ring just as any other jewelry that may be in the possession of the widow. The engagement ring, however, should never be worn on the engagement finger after the approaching second marriage is made public. It would be very bad form and very ridiculous for a widow to wear two wedding rings and two engagement rings. No matter how badly the daughter may feel, this widow should conform to the tenets of good form in this regard.

After the death of her husband a woman may continue to wear her rings for the period of her mourning or continually during her life unless she remarries or becomes engaged.

A divorce, of course, removes her wedding ring and engagement ring as soon as she decides to sue for a divorce. A woman who is separated from her husband and has children may want to wear her wedding ring. While she may not be adhering strictly to the rules of good form, every one will concede she has a right to such protection.

QUERY—I was married with the wedding ring of my husband's mother, which is an heirloom in the family. We are divorced now and my husband's mother has asked me for the ring. I want to keep it because of its value. Would it be proper for me to do so?

ANSWER—It would be proper for this woman to keep the ring and she would be within her rights. But it would be a generous consideration to an older woman who evidently has sentiment attached to the ring to return it.

QUERY—I want a circle of diamonds for my wedding ring. My fiance likes a plain gold ring because of its significance. Who has the right to choose the wedding ring?

ANSWER—The groom, of course, has the right to choose the wedding ring. It is a gift he makes to his bride as a symbol of their marriage. It is considered good form for the groom to consult the bride's taste before choosing the wedding ring.

PLEASANT HOMES

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

THE LITTLE GIRL with braids down her back is a busy little body. With her paper dolls and her school books and her clubs . . . oh yes, she's always involved in a club meeting of some kind with the other children of the neighborhood. And she likes everything to be very right and proper.

"I need a studio," she recently informed her mother, when her room came up for some redecorations.

Her mother blinked one or two, then thought it over. Well, why not, she decided. The little girl with braids down her back used her room for study and for entertaining her little friends, so why keep it so bedroomy?

So the walls were repainted in light green, and curtains of green and white wide striped percale were hung at the windows. A deeper green denim spread was made for the daybed (which was substituted for the small iron bed formerly used here) and cushions of the striped percale were added. A linoleum floor in red gave the room a bright and youthful air, while slip covers for two small easy chairs were of Scotch plaid gingham. A maple flat top desk was added with a ladder back chair to go with it and a maple book case to stand in nearby reach. A chest of drawers with a mirror above it did for a dresser and the closet was decked out in plaid wall paper and red closet bags and boxes.

The little girl with braids added pictures of her own choosing. Her mother provided three frames of uniform sizes to be hung in a row over the daybed and a pair of frames to go on either side of the double windows. These were so fixed that the little girl could change the pictures in them to suit her fancy, as she took great pride in collecting prints and clippings to frame for her "studio."

Washingtonians Report Summer Resort Gayety

Parties Crowd Calendar From Bar Harbor to White Sulphur; Italian Envoy Is Entertained at Newport.

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

While Washington society is in the dog days, word comes from here, there and just about everywhere that mountain and beach resorts have never had a gayer season, and that parties morning, noon and night are keeping many vacationing residents from resting even as much as they do here in winter when the social season is crowded.

Dispatches from Newport, Narragansett Pier and Bar Harbor report the summer colony in each resort enjoyed a whirl of activity the last week-end, and letters from Saratoga Springs indicate never before has there been such a round of parties as are now on schedule.

The Minister of Rumania, Charles A. Davila—reputed to be one of the most popular of the colonists at Newport—entertained at dinner Friday evening in honor of the Italian Ambassador and Donna de Suvich, who have been spending a few days at the Muenchinger King. The Suviches are due back in Washington today. The Rumanian Minister, according to present plans, will remain in Newport until August 10, when he will sail for Europe to spend several weeks.

Tennis Week Under Way At White Sulphur Springs

The annual West Virginia State Open tennis championship matches, starting yesterday at the Greenbirer Golf and Tennis Club, will make this one of the biggest weeks of the season at White Sulphur Springs. Tennis week is always an exciting one, and to make it even more so this year, there is to be a "tennis dance" tomorrow night at Kate's Mountain Lodge. The week will wind up with another dance at the lodge Saturday night.

For the last few days hay-ride barbecues have been the most popular entertainments for summer colonists, but these will give way to tennis events the next few days. The first week in August polo will have the spotlight, with games scheduled for every Friday and Saturday through the month.

Hot Springs, Va., is another resort where partying continues at a lively clip right through the dog days. Over the week-end the social calendar was more than filled with formal and informal get-togethers. One of the high lights of the season was the birthday dinner on Saturday evening for Miss Mildred Dunn, eldest daughter of Col. and Mrs. William McKee Dunn, of Washington and Gramercy Farm, Hot Springs. Hostesses for the affair were Patricia and Anne Dilworth, daughters of Mrs. Brockie Dilworth, of Philadelphia. One of the most colorful events of the summer will be the Bath County Horse Show, scheduled for August 5 and 6—a show that draws a number of Washingtonians each year.

Chief Justice, Mrs. Hughes Support Summer Theater

Social events in New Hampshire resorts seem to center largely around summer theaters. Up in Whitefield, N. H., for instance, the Forty-Niners of the Chase Barn Theater has been gathering notables to its performance all summer. One of its most successful matinee performances was given Saturday afternoon, when the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes were in the audience. Mrs. Hughes is on the list of patronesses for the Forty-Niners.

Every ship bound for Europe continues to carry its share of noted Americans—although mid-July is generally regarded as an off-season for sailing. Among those aboard when the Bremen nosed out of New York Harbor shortly after midnight Saturday were Pierce Butler, jr., son of Justice Pierce Butler of the Supreme Court, accompanied by the former's wife and their children, Pierce Butler 3d and Mary Butler.

Letters from former residents of the Capital indicate motor traveling through New England and Canada is better than ever this year. Dr. Carl F. Arnold, one time assistant general counsel of the Federal Communications Commission, and his wife, Olga Moore, novelist and short-story writer, are now motoring in Canada after visiting friends in New York and then proceeding at a leisurely pace through the Berkshires and the Green Mountains.

Some time this week they will arrive in Chicago to spend a few days before going on to Laramie, Wyo., where Dr. Arnold will resume his duties as dean of the law school, University of Wyoming.

A note from Mrs. Oscar R. Rand, wife of Capt. Rand, U. S. A., who was transferred from Washington to the Philippines early in the spring, indicates social activity at the Manila post goes merrily along despite the tropical heat.

The American colony there enjoys a constant round of luncheons, dinners and dances season in and season out; but the servant situation, even on an island where servants are not considered a luxury, seems to be something of a problem. With a cook, a chauffeur and a houseboy to train along American lines, new hostesses have their hands full, writes Mrs. Rand.

Moore—Hauber.

Dr. and Mrs. Samuel Broders Moore, of Alexandria, announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Inez Gwynne Moore, to John Francis Hauber, the son of Mrs. John Peter Hauber and the late Mr. Hauber, of Washington. The wedding will take place the latter part of August.

Birth Announced.

Lieut. and Mrs. Merrill K. Clementson announce the birth yesterday of a son, William Tewkesbury Clementson, at Columbia Hospital. Mrs. Clementson is the former Jane Tewksbury.

Mr., Mrs. Landis To Be Honored

S. E. C. Staff Will Give Farewell Dinner for Retiring Chairman.

At a farewell dinner dance at the Shoreham Terrace tomorrow evening, James M. Landis, retiring chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, and Mrs. Landis wil be guests of honor, with the commission staff as hosts. The party is being arranged by the social committee of the commission, with Frederic J. Casey as chairman.

Joseph B. Kennedy, former chairman of the commission, now head of the Maritime Commission, expects to attend with Mrs. Kennedy. Among other expected guests are Justice Ferdinand Pecora, of New York, a former member of the commission, and Judge John J. Burns, former general counsel of the Commission.

Mr. Landis, upon his retirement next month, will become dean of Harvard Law School.

The following representatives of the various divisions of the commission are on the social committee: Miss Mary L. Culbertson, Miss Lucille Donovan, Miss Cecilia Edwards, Miss Mary C. Sheehy, Miss Elizabeth S. Kline, Miss Mabel R. Robertson, Miss Alta M. Smith, Miss Magdalen Whitlock, Albert A. Carretta, John L. Haynes, James Hindle, Ralph T. McElvenny, W. Stuart Ramsey, George E. Reynolds and E. Forrest Tancer. Several hundred persons are expected in the company.

Couple Married on Saturday in Clarendon.

Now on their wedding trip through the Northern States, Mr. and Mrs. Rufus E. Wilson were married last Saturday in the First Baptist Church in Clarendon, Va. Mrs. Wilson is the former Miss Marjorie Ann Vaughan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Asa B. Vaughan, of Alington. With the Rev. Perry L. Mitchell officiating, the ceremoney took place against a background of gladioli and shasta daisies, palms and ferns.

The bride appeared in a white satin gown cut on slim princess lines over which was a redingote jacket from which fell the train.

Her atendants were Mrs. Paul Loessi, of Fredonia, N. Y., matron of honor, and Mrs. Harry O'Neill, of Arlington. Mrs. Loessi wore a pink gown of lace with a cowl neckline and cape sleeves. Her wide sash was of blue taffeta tied in a bow in the back and falling in streamers to the hemline of her dress.

Wingert Harrison, of Arlington, served as best man. Ushers were Leonard Alford, of Washington, and Harry O'Neil, of Arlington.

Following the wedding an informal reception took place at the church.

When the Wilsons return from their trip after August 15, they will be at home in the Buckingham Apartments on Pershing drive, Arlington.

Their plans for the future are still indefinite.

British and Boston Cousins Pay Visit To Rev. Mr. Durant

The Rev. Aldrich Durant has as his guests his cousins, R. Beresford-Durant, young British writer, and Courtenay Cabot Durant, of Boston.

Some time this week, the former will leave for Provincetown, Mass., where two of his plays, "The Halcyon Heart" and "Converge Diverge," are to be given trial performances soon. Courtney Cabot Durant will sail within the next two weeks for England where he will have the leading role in another of Mr. Beresford-Durant's plays, "Plunder From Pleiades," scheduled to open in London next season.

Lieut. Fink, Wife Will Reside At Wright Field Following Trip

Wright Field, at Dayton, Ohio, will be the future residence of Lieut. and Mrs. Rudolph Fink, who were married Wednesday and now are on a wedding trip. The bride is the former Martha Hickam, daughter of Mrs. Horace Hickam, of Washington, and the late Col. Hickam. Lieut. Fink, son of Mrs. Frederick Poteet, of San Francisco, and Mr. Albert Fink, of Chicago, is a member of the Air Corps of the United States Army.

Theirs was a picturesque military wedding, held in the Post Chapel at Langley Field, Va. Chaplain S. E. Decker performed the ceremony in a setting of white lilies, gladioli, stock and green ferns.

Mrs. Brooke E. Allen served as matron of honor and the bride's only attendant, wearing chartreuse green chiffon made with short sleeves and a matching horsehair hat trimmed with bands of pastel velvet. She carried a bouquet of spring flowers.

Lieut. William C. Bentley, of Langley Field, served as best man, and the ushers were Lieut. D. D. Hale, Capt. W. J. Davies, Lieut. T. E. Wold, all of Langley Field, and Capt. John Sterling, of Selfridge Field, Mich.

Following the ceremony, there was a reception at the Officers' Club. Among the Washington guests were Col. and Mrs. H. B. Hackett, Col. and Mrs. H. W. Flickenger and Col. and Mrs. Ross Powell.

The bride was graduated from Connecticut College in 1935, and the bridegroom attended West Point, where he was a member of the class of '29.

Underwood & Underwood.

The recent announcement of the engagement of Miss Julia Vail Rust, of Baltimore, to Ferdinand Peterson Thomas is of particular interest to Washingtonians who remember that her mother, Mrs. Breckinridge Cabell Rust, was the former Miss Julia Vail, of this city, daughter of the late Commander Holman Vail, U. S. N., and the late Mrs. James L. Marshall. The wedding will take place in October.

Corinne Neely To Rule Over Mountain Fete

Daughter of W. Va. Senator Chosen as Princess for State Festival.

Tall, slim Corinne Neely, daughter of Senator Matthew M. Neely, of West Virginia, is going to be a princess again. This time she is to put on her royal robes at the eighth annual Mountain State Festival to be held in Elkins, W. Va., the second week of next October.

Her first adventure in "princessing" occurred last summer at the Democratic convention in Philadelphia, when she was one of those chosen to attend the queen of the convention. Right there and then, when persons saw her vivid dark eyes and even darker hair, they decided that Corinne was a definite success at the job and even better than her predecessors in the story books.

Her recoronation for the Mountain State Festival was brought about by Representative Robert L. Ramsay, who appointed her to represent the First Congressional District of West Virginia.

Miss Neely, who is about 20 years old, comes to Washington seldom and now spends most of her time at Fairmont since her graduation in June from the University of West Virginia. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma Sorority.

Miss Peggy Rowe, who has been entertained by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Peck, of Woodside, Silver Spring, Md., returned last Friday to her home in Atlanta, Ga. During her stay of two weeks with the Pecks, she was guest of honor at a luncheon at Mount Vernon given for her by Mrs. Maurice K. Peck, of Woodside. Among the other guests present were Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Peck, Mrs. Joseph Mitchell and her daughter Ellen, Miss Martha Stone, of New York City, and Williard F. Peck.

Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Peck also entertained recently for Miss Rowe at a dinner party at their home. Winston Grubbs, of New York, en route to Atlanta, was also present.

Another luncheon given by Mrs. Joseph H. Mitchell, a buffet dinner given by Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Peck and a final luncheon on the day of Miss Rowe's departure for her home concluded the round of social events in her honor.

Phillips Gallery Is Consolidated With Art School

The art school and gallery conducted at Studio House under the direction of C. Law Watkins, have been consolidated with the educational activities of the Phillips Memorial Gallery and will now be known as the Phillips Gallery Art School.

Mr. Watkins, as associate director in charge of education, will continue to direct the art school the work of which will be coordinated with the Phillips Memorial Gallery program of art lectures, concerts and special exhibitions.

The Studio House gallery will continue its activities on behalf of artists of Washington, Virginia and Maryland, but as a museum function without fees or commissions. It will also supplement the educational work by carrying at all times a large stock of color reproductions and fine prints available to art students and others interested in the field of art.

Popworth—Fryer.

Of interest to Washington is the announcement of the engagement of Miss Mary Jane Popworth, of Cleveland., Ohio, and Syracuse, N. Y., to Ross Lander Fryer, of this city. The wedding will take place in Syracuse in the early autumn. Mr. Fryer is the son of the late Ross L. Fryer and Mrs. Fryer.

Mrs. J. A. Meeks Gives Party As Farewell to Mrs. Maloney

Guests Acclaim Unique Entertainment of Washington's Surprise Hostess; Wife of Representative Leaving for Pass Christian.

According to her guests, Mrs. James A. Meeks' party yesterday in her apartment at the Wardman Park Hotel in honor of Mrs. Paul H. Maloney, wife of Representative Maloney, of Louisiana was a "grand slam." Mrs. Meeks is the wife of the Representative from Illinois.

The occasion was in the order of a farewell to Mrs. Maloney who leaves this week for Pass Christian, Miss., where she will visit her daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Fernand C. Gandolfo, jr.

Mrs. Meeks, whose parties are always full of surprises, had the guests taking part in impromptu skits, answering questionnaires on world travel and giving Mrs. Maloney "suggestions" on how to spend a pleasant summer.

Among the 12 guests present were Mrs. John H. Overton, wife of the Senator from Louisiana; Mrs. John M. O'Connell, wife of the Representative from Rhode Island; Mrs. Carl Vinson, wife of the Representative from Georgia; Miss Ida V. Meeks, Mrs. Meeks' sister-in-law, who arrived a week ago from San Diego and who expects to remain in Washington until early fall; Mrs. E. Y. English of Danville, Ill., and Mrs. Charles Friend, of Alexandria.

"I've been back and forth between East and West many, many times," said Miss Meeks, "and when people ask me what contrasts I see between Washington and San Diego, I say—the weather. You know it never gets any warmer than about 72 degrees in San Diego . . . although I'd be the last person on earth to claim that California climate is 'perfect!' "

Panhellenic Groups Get New Leader

Miss Helen Martell Heads Association of Greek Letter Sororities.

Organization Has Prospered Since Its Creation in Fall of 1931.

Miss Helen Martell, of Delta Zeta Sorority, is the incoming president of the Panhellenic Association of Washington, one of the few Panhellenics in the country in which all 23 of the societies of the national organization are represented.

Pi Beta Phi, which has a large membership here, was responsible for the first move toward a Panhellenic organization in the Capital in the fall of 1931. In connection with the Washington bicentennial celebration the following spring, Pi Phi was planning a luncheon and program and invited members of other national social sororities to co-operate in the arrangements for it. The first meeting was held December 4, 1931, to discuss plans, and out of this co-operative effort grew the present association. It began with 18 member sororities and the other five have been added since, completing the national list.

Dr. Cloyd Heck Marvin was the speaker for the bicentennial function which was given in February, 1932. Since then annual luncheons have been sponsored, the largest of which was addressed by Mrs. Roosevelt in 1934. Mme. Cantacuzene spoke the following year. The speakers at the other two luncheons were both sorority members: Ruth Bryan Owen Rohde, of Delta Gamma, who addressed the Panhellenic in 1932, and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, of Alpha Phi, who was on this year's program.

Individual Groups Do Charity Work

So far, the Panhellenic has been purely a social organization in Washington. Although, in several other cities similar groups have inaugurated local charitable enterprises, here members of the board have decided the philanthropies supported by the individual sororities should have first consideration and would suffer were the groups to devote their time to a general Panhellenic project. No effort has been made to raise money for any purpose, but a surplus in the treasury following the luncheon at which the First Lady was the speaker was used to buy a talking book for the blind, which was placed with the Junior League.

Mrs. John E. Warlick, retiring president of the association, has asked delegates from each sorority to present at the Panhellenic board meetings through the year, reports of the philanthropic work of their societies. Nearly all of them give scholarships, some for their own members and others open to any student who meets the requirement of the award. In addition, many maintain schools or carry on educational projects among the mountain people of the South.

Education and Health Promoted

Pi Beta Phi has one of the best known of the mountain schools, that in Gatlinburg, Tenn., in the Smokies, where handicraft, weaving and the three R's are taught. Delta Zeta maintains a mountain school and social center at Vest, Ky. Phi Mu operates a "healthmobile" in one of the Southern mountain districts which provides health instruction to the residents and also includes a lending library.

Alpha Omicron Pi supports the volunteer nursing service in the Kentucky mountains, in which several Washington girls have worked. Alpha Gamma Delta maintains a summer camp in Wisconsin for both boys and girls, and some of the sorority members serve as camp counselors each year. Kappa Kappa Gamma recently started "The Haven," a home for older members of the sorority who are left alone and seek congenial companionship in pleasant surroundings. Zeta Tau Alpha has established a mountain school in Smythe County, Va., in honor of the founders of the sorority. A nurse and assistant are there the year around and visit the homes in the mountain districts. The assistant is a young woman whom the sorority educated and trained to work among her own people.

It is because of these and similar projects conducted by the various sororities that no local philanthropic program has been undertaken.

A regional Panhellenic conference held in New York in May was attended by Miss Martell, as delegate, and by Mrs. Raleigh Gilchrist, of Kappa Kappa Gamma; Mrs. C. M. Jansky, jr., national vice president of Alpha Gamma Delta; Mrs. Charles Krey, regional director of Sigma Kappa, and Miss Marian Boyle, of Alpha Delta Pi.

Officers of the city Panhellenic include, in addition to Miss Martell, Mrs. Joseph Roney, the former Miss Betty Chamblin, of Phi Mu, vice president; Miss Regis Dunnigan, of Kappa Delta, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Leighton Johnston, of Alpha Delta Theta, recording secretary; Mrs. Ina L. Price, Theta Upsilon, treasurer, and Miss Elizabeth Mann, of Beta Sigma Omicron, historian.

Miss Earlene Williams Slated For Business Clubs' President

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

Atlantic City, N. J., July 20.—Miss Earlene Williams, of Washington, is officially scheduled to be the next president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Club. She was selected to head the slate of officers at a preliminary meeting of the nominating committee, which will present its report to the general session of the biennial convention Thursday morning.

Although the action of the nominating committee has not been publicly announced, it is generally known and a matter of primary interest among convention delegates. Miss Williams, who is Senate Postmaster, came to Washington from Mississippi and Arkansas, where she formerly lived and helped organize several local clubs. She has also traveled widely as National vice president of the federation and since the beginning of the organization has been identified prominently with it.

Name Proposed By Mississippi

Her name was proposed to the nominating committee by Mrs. Lucia McRaven Thompson, Mississippi State president, one of eight delegates from Miss White's native State. Mrs. Patricia Solander, president of the Kansas federation, was chosen chairman of the committee.

There is a possibility of other nominations being made from the floor on Thursday, as has been done in previous years. Miss Marjorie Shuler, of New York, chairman of the committee on federation history, is being mentioned as a candidate. Her answer to the question as to whether she would accept the nomination is that she cannot accept what has not been offered her.

Both Miss Shuler and Miss White are primarily interested in the welfare of the federation rather than in the office, their friends believe, and it is thought, unlikely they would permit a division in the federation ranks if it came to an election contest.

The elections will take place Friday, and the convention closes that evening with the international night banquet at which Miss Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and several foreign guests will be introduced. Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins nd Representative Mary T. Norton will be the speakers.

President Roosevelt Sends Greetings

The opening convention sessions yesterday turned the spotlight on the federation itself, with a study of its organization and procedure. A feature of federation night, observed last evening, was a message from President Roosevelt, read by the president, Miss Charl Williams, of Wshington. Commenting on the theme which has been chosen by the federation for the next two years—"Making Our Town's Business Our Business"—the president said:

"Under our present-day life women assume and discharge an ever widening range of duties and responsibilities. If the business of our towns and local communities is to be efficiently discharged, it must be with the aid and co-operation and whole-hearted participation of our women citizens—particularly those who follow business and the professions."

Two years of effort to advance the economic status of business and professional women of the country was recorded by Miss Williams in her report yesterday afternoon.

She contrasted the membership figure of 64,594 today with the figure of 60,000 in July, 1935, when she took office. She also reported there are 1,505 clubs today as against 1,458 clubs in July, 1935, and that for the first time in its history the federation is organized in 48 States, State federations having been completed in Rhode Island and Delaware during her administration.

She explained the federation's budget for 1936-1937 totaled $128,863.90 and that the organization has a surplus of over $7,000 at the end of the year.

Among the federation "firsts" accomplished during Miss Wiliams' administration she listed the following: A Handbook of Federation Procedures; the employment of a part-time legislative worker, Mrs. Carol David, in Washington; the study of organization technique; an analytical study of biennial conventions; a handbook of legislative procedures; the assembling of representative leaders of business and professional women's organizations to launch a much-needed clearing house for women's activities in the business and professional world, and a book of program plans for the year ahead issued and distributed among the various clubs.

Another famous federation first has been the co-operation with the international labor office of the League of Nations on a study of employed women's responsibilities for dependents. This study will be completed and will make its appearance early in September.

During the last two years every effort has been made to urge members to lend their active support to the election and appointment of qualified men and women to public life, Miss Williams said.

"In November, 1935, a survey of women holding judicial office was conducted and the results presented to the public; a letter urging the availability of women for appointment and election as judges was sent to the president of the American Bar Association. The federation made a supplementary report in 1936, which showed the number of women holding judicial office in this country had been doubled."

Washington is represented on today's program by Mrs. Carol Willis Moffett, formerly of Washington and now of New York, who will report as publicity chairman of the federation, and tonight Mrs. Anna Lalor Burdick, Federal agent of the United States Office of Education, will speak in a symposium on vocational issues for women.

1,000 Veterans Will Go Abroad

Col. Kearney to Lead Foreign Wars Pilgrims to Graves in France.

Col. Bernard W. Kearney, Gloversville, N. Y., commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States, will head a pilgrimage of nearly 1,000 A. E. F. Veterans who will sail from New York City July 21 to participate in dedication ceremonies being planned by the American Battle Monuments Commission for the war cemeteries of France, Belgium and England.

Verdun, Rheims, Cantigny and numerous other scenes of battle in the World War will be revisited by the V. F. W. delegation whose members participated in action in those same sectors in 1917 and 1918.

Gen. John J. Pershing is chairman of the commission, which now is completing its labors of more than 13 years, in which 8 memorial chapels, 11 monuments and 2 bronze tablets have been erected or placed in American military cemeteries Robert C. Woodside, Pittsburgh, vice chairman of the commission, is a vice commander in chief of the Veterans of Foreign Wars of the United States and current president of the V. F. W. national home for war orphans at Eaton Rapids, Mich.

The itineraries planned for the V. F. W. pilgrimage include Verdun, Montfaucon, Somme-Py, Rheims, Tours, Lille, Flanders Field, Audenarde, Ypres, Vierstratt, Bellicourt, Cantigny, Amiens and other historic battlefields.

There are six great American military cemeteries in France—the Somme Cemetery at Bony, near St. Quentin, with the graves of 1,833 soldiers; at Suresnes, on the slope of Mont Valerien, near Paris, with 1,541 graves; at Belleau, the Aisne-Marne Cemetery, at the foot of the hill on which stands Belleau Wood, with 2,228 graves; the Oise-Aisne Cemetery at Fereen-Tardenois, near Chateau-Thierry, with 6,012 graves; at Thiacourt, the St. Mihiel Cemetery, near Metz, where lie 4,512 Americans, and the Meuse-Argonne Cemetery on the hill of Romagne-sous-Montfaucon, in the Verdon region, where the largest memorial stands guard over 14,238 American graves.

"Madame Chairman" . . .

By Suzanne.

Seen at the B. & W. CONVENTION in Atlantic City:

Charl Ormond Williams, national president, wearing a becoming black gown of chiffon and lace at the New Jersey Night reception Sunday and having a gracious greeting for the hundreds of delegates as she stood at the head of the reciving line after a long, hard day of committee meetings.

Ruth Robinson, past president of the Washington Club, arriving with Miss Edna Patton, with whom she has made her home during her residence in the Capital and introducing her affectionately as "my mommy."

Lena Madesin Phillips, president of the International Federation, and Miss Gordon Holmes, of London, international chairman of finance, attracting a group around them whenever they appear in the lobby of Haddon Hall, the headquarters.

The Rev. Margaret F. Clifford, the "preacher-president" of the Montana State Federation from Kalispell, where she is pastor of the Methodist Church.

Mississippi girls telling Earlene White what a grand time they had in Washington at the All States Banquet. In the group are Mrs. Lucia McRaven Thompson, president; Mrs. Sarah V. Garrison, Mrs. Hazel Sheldon, Mrs. Nell Hunt, Miss Jo Wilks, Mrs. Lucille Broadway, Mrs. Ethel Green and Mrs. Louise Hammond . . . Judge Lucy S. Howorth and Ellen S. Woodward, greeting their sister Mississippians.

And finally—not of the convention, but adjacent to it, the cigar-store Indian, last of his tribe, guarding the entrance to an antique shop on the boardwalk, his war paint enhanced by the addition of red to his fingernails and toenails, after the manner of a modern debutante.

Miss Dorothy Detzer, executive secretary of the W. I. L., is already in Europe and Dr. Gertrude Bussey, of Goucher College, also will attend the session aboard. They will report on peace work being done in this hemisphere.

Miss Vernon has returned from Baltimore and Wilmington, where she spent the week-end.

Bob Burns Says:

Ye've got an old tailor down home that has the reputation of being the best pants maker in seven counties, but you can't rush him.

A traveling man heard of his reputation one time, and while he was in town he ordered a pair of pants from this old tailor. The salesman left town and came back in two weeks and called up the tailor and the tailor says, "Your pants ain't done yet but I'm workin' on 'em." A month later the salesman came back to town and his pants wasn't ready yet.

Finally on his fourth trip he dropped around to the tailor's shop and found the old tailor had just finished the last stitch. The salesman was pretty mad. He turned to the tailor and he says, "It took six days to make the world and it took you 80 days to make these pants!" The old tailor said, "Yes, but just take a look at the world and then take a look at them pants!"

The Federal Diary

Reg. U. S. Patent Office.

By Scott Hart.

To the National League of Women Voters:

We think—if you will permit our comment—that an excellent point was made in your last press release, the one which seemed calculated to bring shame to congressional bosoms through a show of progress certain States have made in regard to the merit system. You pointed out:

"Four States—Arkansas, Connecticut, Maine and Tennessee—have adopted new merit system laws. This is the largest number of States to act in any one year. In nine States having merit system programs, extension legislation was enacted . . . In those States having merit system programs, greatest extension progress was made in California, New York and Wisconsin."

You pointed out that "in 15 States where the establishment of new merit systems was proposed, legislation was approved by one house of the Legislature in the following eight States: Alabama, Arizona, Florida, Georgia, Kansas, Michigan, Minnesota and Oklahoma." And then you turned to the more dismal picture in the National Capital with the comment: "Congress, ignoring election pledges, is making raids on the merit system" . . . "Despite campaign pledges by both parties to immediately extend the merit system, the present Congress is whittling it away . . . The tendency in innumerable instances to extend the right of Presidential appointment is nothing more nor less than a raid on the merit system."

Frankly Skeptical.

But we are frankly skeptical of any good coming from the obvious attempt to shame the inner men of the Congressmen by telling them to take a lesson from the progress of the States. Such an approach seems hardly calculated to make them drop the old plum bag, the old grab bag or whatever name it's called.

The truth is—as you doubtless know—the Congress will not forsake the spoils system unless the individual man of them knows his job on Capitol Hill is threatened by his advocacy of it. If they believed that the folks back home resented—to the point of action—the loading of the public service with political appointees who may be good at coralling votes but not so efficient, necessarily, in keeping Uncle Sam's business straight, the individual man of them would shy away and a pure merit system would come, as out of a magician's hat.

Your league of women, interested in good government, certainly seems an ideal device to blow the horn for the arousing of sentiment to this end. After all, the women will have to perform this service. Anyone who knows the hinterlands, away from this seat of Government, is familiar with the apathy of men toward this particular issue. Men squabble and beef and paw the ground about such goings-on as they think will affect their individual pocketbooks, but to say that one in a thousand involves his daily thoughts with the merit system in Government, or takes the issue to a troubled bed at night, is to be more imaginative than astute.

Apathy May End.

But it may not be outside of possibility these same apathetic citizens could be aroused. Don't hope that any men will beat the bushes to arouse them. It is not in the nature of men to crusade in causes of this sort. The "merit system" has an abstract sound to them, nothing, they think, that could be counted on the dark or red side of ledgers. But undoubtedly they would listen to the facts of the case were sufficient steam put behind a Nation-wide and untiring crusade. And then, maybe, they would ponder on the idea that a competent Government personnel would be an economy. It may be that they would make demands on their Congressmen to this end, with far-off election day gleams in their eyes.

But we say, respectfully, that it won't come through any petitions to Congress. It will only come through John Q. Voter back home. And John Q. Voter only when he has been aroused. It seems a job for the women. Anyone who expects the politicians to do anything about it could as easily think that the kingdom is at hand.

Navy Protests Airport Near Radio Towers

Leahy Says That Camp Springs Site Is Too Close Naval Station.

Hurried Change in Plans by Congress Indicated by Vinson.

Navy Department officials and members of the House Naval Affairs Committee yesterday expressed opposition to construction of a new municipal airport at Camp Springs, Md., "under the eaves" of radio towers which the Navy is building at Cheltenham, Md.

In a letter to Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Naval Affairs Committee, Admiral Leahy, chief of Naval Operations, and Acting Secretary of the Navy, said Cheltenham had been selected for the receiving station, because it was an out of the way spot where electrical interference would be reduced to a minimum.

The Navy's protest is expected to have immediate reaction in Congress. Vinson said he would call a meeting of the House Naval Affairs Committee today to discuss the communication, and ask an immediate hearing before the House District Committee or the appropriations committee, or whatever committee is handling choice of the airport site now that the Airport Commission has finally made its report.

Commerce Department officials last night indicated that as a result of the Navy protest, the Washington Airport might be encouraged to hasten construction of another long runway at the commercial terminal. "While the protest will undoubtedly slow up a final solution of the airport problem," Fred D. Fagg, jr., director of the Bureau of Aeronautics declared, "it may hasten needed improvements at Washington Airport."

President Interested.

Detailed regulations for the use of the air terminal have been in preparation for the last week in conferences between Bureau of Aeronautics officials and representatives of the Airline Pilots Association, which on July 8 threatened to refuse to bring planes into Washington Airport after a lapse of 60 days unless needed improvements were made.

Vinson said last night the House Naval Affairs Committee undoubtedly would back the Navy's stand. "While I would very much like to see a first-class airport here," Mr. Vinson said, "tnere is no reason it should be built near the Naval Receiving Station, where we have already spent a million dollars. Let 'em go find another place."

It has been learned unofficially, outside the Navy Department, that the President is extremely interested in the Navy's protest, and the White House is watching the outcome of the battle with more than usual interest.

Declaring he expected an announcement of the new regulations within ten days, David L. Behncke, Airlines Pilots Association president, said the detailed rules would make Washington Airport a "two-way" field, with landings to be permitted only when wind conditions were suitable. When landings could not be made safely, he said, transport planes would land and take off at Bolling Field.

Naval officials yesterday declared that use of Bolling Field would interfere in no way with the Navy's use of its air station on the banks of the Anacostia.

The Admiral's Letter.

The text of Admiral Leahy's letter follows:

"My dear Mr. Vinson:

"It is noted in the press that the District Airport Commission has recommended the establishment of an airport at Camp Springs, Md., which is about three miles from the new naval radio receiving station at Cheltenham, Md., which is in process of completion. I am informed by the radio engineers of this department that the selection is unfortunate from the naval point of view, as ignition interferences, from planes flying at comparatively low altitudes over the receiving station might seriously affect reception of radio signals.

"In addition, the future development of the station may be hampered, as it may be necessary to install steel towers 300 feet high at the radio station. Such towers would be a menace to planes making an instrument landing approaching from the southeast.

"It is considered desirable to bring to your attention the possibility of serious interference with the naval radio station at Cheltenham, which represents an investment of $1,000,000 dollars, if an airport should be located at Camp Springs.

"Sincerely yours,

WILLIAM D. LEAHY,
Admiral, U. S. N.
Acting Secretary of the Navy."

Beyer Will Meet Rail Unions Today

Efforts of the National Mediation Board to settle the wage-raise dispute between the country's railroads and the 14 nonoperating rail unions were continued yesterday with Otto S. Beyer, member of the board, conferring with representatives of the roads. Today he will meet representatives of the unions, who are demanding a 20-cents-an-hour increase.

Beyer explained he was surveying the situation with each side. Negotiations had been conducted in an amiable manner and on a high plane, he said.

Should mediation efforts fail, the board will so report to President Roosevelt, who is authorized then to appoint a special board to investigate and report on the dispute and suggest means of settlement.

610,500 Gallons of Water Nightly Keep Washington Clean, But Fail to Win Title as the Cleanest City in the Nation

Department Must Clean 500 Miles of Streets on Limited Funds.

By means of 610,500 gallons of water turned on its streets nightly, Washington manages to keep well up among the Nation's cleanest cities—although it can no longer claim the cleanliness title.

Supplemental cleaning, William A. Xanten, supervisor of the District Refuse Division, calls the extra polish provided when 12 big water trucks rumble out of their garages to wash off approximately 500 miles of solidly paved thoroughfares in the city areas.

With each truck goes two men, the driver and the helper who fills its 1,500 tank and regulates its 40 to 50-pound pressure. It's stop and go for these men from 10 p. m. until around 6 a. m. It takes 5 to 7 minutes to fill up the tank, from the fire hydrant nearest at hand, and from 5 to 7 minutes to empty it out again.

When their street is one on which no parking is allowed, like Sixteenth, the two come home pleased with their work. But the streets on which parking is permitted are the despair of the refuse division. They always have a "dirty looking fringe."

Wash Up At Night.

All the washing up is done at night in Washington because the city has so many automobiles and pedestrians. "We are afraid that if it were a daylight job, washing up would become just a wetting down," Xanten said.

Even as it is, the division occasionally has a powerful complaint from some irate citizen who got wetted down as he went about his nightly duties unsuspectingly.

For three months during the winter the big trucks—11 of which are more than 10 years old—go on partial duty. Sometimes they have shovels hitched to them and help clean up the snow. At other times they rush out in the middle of the day and wash off the streets before the mercury can get back to freezing again.

Praise for His Men.

Mr. Xanten thinks they do a fine job, considering their age, but in his office are several pictures of streamlined models "like other cities have" and like he wants for Washington.

Don' think that every street gets polished off every night, for that shows an unfamiliarity with the workings of a five-day week on a decreased budget, with the number of automobiles in the District, and with the fact that almost every package now has a double wrapping.

On a budget of $403,760, which is equivalent in actual value to about one-half of the $400,000 budget of 1920, Xanten's division is always cutting corners and in his opinion "just missing" to keep the streets clean.

"We are not nearly so clean as the Capital city should be and are living a lot on our past reputation. When we were really the cleanest city, back a few years ago, one of our white wings had to cover an average of eight blocks. Today, he has to cover an average of 3½ miles. Of course, he cannot make that distance every day. It's the same with flushing."

The downtown area gets washed up twice one week and three times the next. The other areas provide individual problems, with the division concentrating where concentration is needed. G and F streets are considered the hardest to keep clean, and so get a lot of extra attention.

In the entire refuse department are approximately 242 workers: 168 white wings, 24 with the water trucks, 18 in suburban gangs, and 32 in alley gangs. In addition to keeping trash off the street and polishing off with water, the division has to collect all refuse, ashes, and garbage—and dead animals. (This last runs to 80,000 "pick-ups" a year, including rats and mice.)

With 90 more men, Xanten believes he could put the city back on the cleanliness pinnacle. The budget of his department was up to $568,000 in 1932 and to $576,000 in 1933. When it was $400,000 in 1920 there were but 249 miles of street to be covered and the city did not have the New Deal. Workers in the division averaged $2.80 a day and now they average $4.56. Fifteen days sick leave has been granted them and 11 days added to their 15-day annual leave. Then, in April they went on the 40-hour week.

"I am glad to have the men getting more, but I wish the division's budget could be adjusted in proportion. The budget we are on now has but a $231,016 purchasing power when compared to 1920. That is too little on which to keep the city clean, in spite of the good work we have been able to do in a preventative way."

Youth Congress To Aid in Drive For D. C. Ballot

Capital Unit to Co-operate With Progressive Action Group.

A dozen serious young men and women, members of the Washington branch of the American Youth Congress, decided last night to co-operate with the Council for Progressive Action in urging votes for the District.

In an informal discussion at the Y. W. C. A., the group decided that co-operation with the other body was the best way to attain local suffrage. Here and there, however, threats of "putting pressure on Congress" were uttered.

The highlight of the evening was a report by Margaret Ostrov, local delegate to the recent American Youth Congress at Milwaukee.

Explains Session.

Miss Ostrov reported that delegates were classified as "congressmen, senators and ambassadors" and apologized for not having worn her badge as congresswoman to the meeting. She said that the rooms in which the congress was held were all filled with tables covered with pamphlets and other literature and that scattered about were tin cans into which the faithful could drop money to help Spain.

She said that the youthful representatives and senators spent about two hours arguing the antilynching bill. "Our problem now is to see that the antilynching bill comes before the Senate," she said.

Miss Ostrov was enthusiastic about the Milwaukee congress. "It was really good to see the ideas that sprang from the floor," she said. "It was really better than our own Congress." She was referring to the Congress of the United States.

Among other things, the American Youth Congress is for reducing the voting age to 18 and for Federal appropriations for scholarships. There are between 35 and 40 delegates to the local congress, most of them from church organizations.

Miss Ostrov showed the gathering a copy of the Journal of the American Youth Congress. The section of the journal devoted to labor bore the caption, "When labor sits down, youth sits down."

Automobile Victim Found Injured in Street

Theodore Mattison, 29, of 906 Hamlin street northeast, last night suffered serious injuries in an accident in the 500 block of H street northeast. The man was picked up in the street after he had been struck apparently by an automobile.

Taken to Casualty Hospital, he was found to be suffering from severe cuts and bruises and a possible fractured skull.

Grocers Plan Outing.

The Retail Grocers' Protective Association will hold its thirty-fifth annual excursion to Marshall Hall tomorrow. A long program of athletic events with prizes will be features of the outing.

3,333 of 3,501 Missing Persons Located in Year by Police Unit

Maj. Brown Praises the Work of Public Relations Bureau Which Handled 10,000 Cases in Last 12 Months.

More than 10,000 cases were handled by the Bureau of Public Relations of the Police Department, according to the fiscal report recorded yesterday.

Established only last year and employing only eight policemen, the bureau set up the most imposing record of any single unit directed by Detective Chief Bernard W. Thompson.

Most of the work of this bureau consisted of interviewing criminals and tracing missing persons.

For the fiscal year ending June 30, 3,501 persons were reported missing from their homes. Of this 3,333 were located. The other cases are being investigated.

Every prisoner fingerprinted and photographed in the Detective Bureau was interviewed by a member of the bureau which is commanded by Lieut. Horace Lineberg. A permanent record was filed giving the life history of each prisoner.

Besides tracing missing persons and maintaining prisoner's records the bureau investigated 551 licensed places. The investigation included 435 second-hand dealers, 22 auctioneers, 29 auction sales, 16 private detective agencies and one public bath establishment.

Lieut. Lineberg was responsible for police protection at Communist meetings, veterans' movements, strikes and meetings of the Workers' Alliance of America.

A survey of persons reported missing showed the largest number were white boys under 17. Records show 490 boys under the legal age left their homes. There were 428 colored youths under age who disappeared.

There were 301 colored girls under 17 who disappeared. Only 251 white girls under 17 left their homes.

The next largest age classification of missing persons was in the years over 30. There were 96 white men in this group reported as missing, and, 80 white women over 30 disappeared.

The squad made 182 arrests on charges ranging from minor traffic violations to automobile thefts. There were 65 persons arrested and held for investigation.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown spoke highly of the bureau which has been operating slightly more than a year.

"The work of this bureau," he said, "just takes that much more routine work off the Detective Bureau which has such a limited personnel."

Floridian Seized By Federal Agents In $25,000 Fraud

Arthur Wagner, 21, of De Funiak Springs, Fla., was held under $75,000 bond last night on charges of mail fraud in attempting to extort $25,000 from Florida State Senator D. Stewart Gillis.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation announced Wagner was arrested when he called at the general delivery window of the De Funiak Springs post office for a decoy package.

G-Men said Wagner promised to make Gillis Governor of Florida "in the near future" if he paid the money. They charged his letters contained an implied threat against the life of Gov. Fred P. Cone of Florida. The young man, bookkeeper for a real estate firm, was arraigned before a United States commissioner at Marianna, Fla., and following a hearing was held under bond.

Gillis, according to the agents, received two letters, one on June 12 and the other on June 22. The agents said Wagner confessed writing the notes and also admitted writing several letters to F. A. Blalock, Pensacola, offering protection in the operation of his business. All the letters, the agents said, were signed "Jan Sikorsky."

Mine Union Opens Drive to Organize Allied Crafts Here

The United Mine Workers of America announced yestreday they have moved into the District of Columbia with a large organizational drive in mind.

Asked to point out the District miners—coal, gold or platinum—John T. Kelly, U. M. W. organizer, declared that under the broad C. I. O. interpretation all by-products workers are eligible.

That means, he said, that the workers of the Washington Gaslight Co. are the first target and that from there the way can easily be found into chemical laboratories, and perhaps a few other of the District's industries.

He claimed the gas company already has felt the U. M. W. strength and boosted wages in the meter department by $15 per month "the morning after a local union was established in the plant."

Company officials, however, denied the wage adjustments were connected with union organization and said they averaged less than $15 claimed.

The U. M. W. said that through its gas and coke division, it has obtained agreements with city gas manufacturing and distributing systems in Philadelphia, New Haven, Milwaukee, Toledo and St. Louis.

Police Discard Slaying Theory In Park Death

Econom Died of Natural Causes, Autopsy Shows; Was Not Robbed.

The death of Athanasius P. Econom, 48-year-old WPA writer, at first believed murdered in a park robbery last week, was completely written off of police records yesterday.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald discarded the murder angle after an autopsy established definitely that Econom died naturally of the effects of an old blood clot at the base of the brain and a number of internal ailments.

Yesterday, Assistant Detective Chief Ira E. Keck announced investigation by the robbery squad has led to the belief that Econom was not the victim of bandits.

The lifeless body of the war veteran was found south of the State Department Building Friday night. Three young men told police they found the body lying on the grass. Other witnesses said no one was seen near the body nor had they seen anyone attack the man as had been previously stated.

Keck stated investigation disclosed Econom left his home without money. Nor was he carrying a watch at first reported missing.

"If somebody had looted that man's pockets, his pocket linings would have been pulled inside out," Keck said. "There was absolutely no possible way we could arrive at the conclusion that he was robbed. It will not be carried as a robbery on our books."

Room Rented for $40—2nd Day Ad Appears in Post

N ST. NW., 1444—Front room, kitchenette, Frigidaire, priv. bath, $40; also room, complete for housekeeping (sink), $6.

Public Librarian Opposes Pay Limit For School Work

Limitation of school librarians to the salary paid employes of the public library as provided by the District supply bill, was opposed yesterday by Dr. George Bowerman, public librarian, in a letter to Adelaide Hasse, president of the District Library Association.

Dr. Bowerman's letter complained there is no basis for comparison of the duties and responsibilities of school librarians and employes of the public libraries. Copies of the letter were distributed to school library heads.

Employes of school libraries are considered members of the school faculty, Miss Hasse pointed out, and are required to pass examinations not only as librarians but as teachers.

Bills to repeal the provision of the supply act putting public and school librarians in the same salary class have been introduced in the House by Chairman Palmisano, of the House District Committee, and in the Senate by Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York.

Fight to Bar Abattoir Is Put Up to D.C.

Ickes, Gray Believe City, Citizens Must Lead Campaign.

Strategy Parley to Be Held Today in Seal's Office.

The fight to prevent operation of a large scale abattoir in the Capital, which up to now has been led by Secretary of the Interior Harold L. Ickes and the PWA housing division, will be taken over by the District government today.

A meeting has been scheduled for 10:30 a. m. today, it was learned last night, in the office of Corporation Counsel Elwood H. Seal for the purpose of formulating a plan of battle. Representatives of the National Capital Park and Planning Commission, National Capital Parks and other agencies opposed to the slaughterhouse project will attend the strategy-making conference.

Secretary Ickes and Howard A. Gray, chief of the PWA housing division, feel that the Federal government has done all it can to block the abattoir and that it is now up to municipal heads and citizens to lead any "antinuisance industry" drive, it was said at the Interior Department.

Ickes, Gray and other Federal officials appeared personally before House and Senate committees conducting hearings on proposed legislation to control the operation of abattoirs and other so-called heavy industries here. The House bill was tabled last week and a companion measure has been shelved, at least temporarily, within the Senate District Committee.

The Adolf Gobel Co., which is building the abattoir at Benning and Anacostia roads northeast, has received a construction permit from the District, but granting of a permit to operate must await completion of the plant.

With Corporation Counsel Seal out of the city and Vernon E. West, his chief assistant, unavailable for comment last night, it could not be determined whether the purpose of today's meeting will be to push the campaign against erection of the abattoir or to draft ways and means of preventing the plant from operating once it is built.

Wentworth Group To Close Tonight

Marking their final appearance for this season, singers of the Estelle Wentworth Opera Group will offer "An Opera Rehearsal," followed by Gilbert and Sullivan's "Trial by Jury" in a joint program with the United States Navy Band at the Sylvan Theater at 8 o'clock tonight.

The singers will include Virginia Weedon, Alice Brennan, Mildred Sherman, Margaret Horn, Nina Norman, Helen Bache, Ruth Barnhart, Leah de Groot, Ruth de Jarnette, Helen Kelly, Lorraine Hiatt, Martha Hill, Evelyn Kelly, Ruth Lippincott, Eleanor McWilliams, Margie Parrish, Emma Piper, Margaret Price, Jeanne Rose, Margaret Schroebel, Florence Snellings, Sarah Steadman, Beatrice Whittemore, Agnes Williamson, Ray Baine, Ira Meyer, John Cassidy, Richard Hill, Harry Yeide, Melville Veitch, Albert Bird, Lee Conant, Penfield Connor, R. R. Edwards, Marvin Fisher, Magee Gabbert, Carl Horn, Edwin Ludwig and Walter Snellings.

Loyalist Backers to Meet.

A mass meeting in support of Loyalist Spain will be held at the Belasco Theater at 8 p. m. tonight under auspices of the American Friends of Spanish Democracy. Speakers will include Congressman John T. Bernard, of Minnesota, and the Rev. Herman F. Reissig, executive secretary of the North American Committee to Aid Spanish Democracy.

Screen Comics Consider 'Nut' Antics Normal

Ritz Brothers Have Nerve Enough to Be as Daffy as They Please.

By the Ritz Brothers.

Hollywood, July 19 (U.P.).—We're not crazy . . . We're not crazy . . . We're not crazy!

Everybody says we are. Even Darryl Zanuck, our boss, has intimated a santity test wouldn't be a bad thing for us.

But we still say we aren't. And if you could see the figures in the new starring contract he just gave us, you probably would agree that Zanuck is the one who should face the test.

And with that point in our favor, we'll proceed to prove we are not crazy. You see, that's the purpose of this column. Otherwise there would be no sense in writing it. We're not getting paid for it. And we certainly aren't crazy enough to go around writing gratis columns unless we have some point to prove.

As a matter of fact, 90 per cent of the people in this country are just as crazy as we are. The only difference between them and us is that they restrain themselves, whereas we give way to our impulses—and get paid for it.

Took Off Shoes at Party.

For instance, did you ever know a man or woman who didn't get the urge to take off their shoes while at a very formal party? But how many people have you known who gave in to that urge? We took off our shoes at a formal party here a short time ago and everyone else started talking about "those crazy Ritz brothers." Yet half of them probably would have liked to do the same thing.

We thought it would be a funny gag to dress in kilts for the opening of "Wee Willie Winkie" at the Carthay Circle Theater. So we did, and had ten times as much fun as if we had attended in the conventional manner. But again there were a lot of cracks about "those crazy Ritz brothers."

Did you ever know anyone who didn't get a laugh out of seeing a man slip on a banana peel? That's supposed to be funny, despite the fact the poor guy might have broken his leg when he fell. You're considered perfectly normal if you laugh at a thing like that. But if you drove down the street yelling your lungs out over some good fortune—people would say you were crazy, even though a lot of them probably would like to be doing the same thing.

Comfortable Insanity.

Everybody likes to do things that are unusual and will attract attention or shock someone. However, few of them get beyond the point of thinking how much fun it would be. They haven't the courage to go ahead and follow their impulses. But still they call us crazy for doing the very things they're longing to do.

For instance, we caused quite a commotion once simply because we were passing the Beverly Hills municipal fountain on a hot day and walked into the water to cool off. In five minutes, time you'd have thought there was a three-alarm fire from the way people flocked around. They all said we were nuts and all stood there wishing they were nutty enough to do the same thing.

Don't get us wrong. We like people to call us crazy. It pays good dividends. In fact, if they would scream it from the housetops we'd like it even better. The dividends would be larger. But if you want our private opinion, the real crazy people are those who are afraid to do the things they long to do.

There shouldn't be anything so very unusual about doing what you want to do. But that's all we do—and people claim we're crazy.

Boland in RKO's 'Don't Forget' Film

Mary Boland has been obtained by RKO-Radio for one of the important roles in the forthcoming production of "Don't Forget to Remember," which will team Burgess Meredith, Broadway stage star, and Ann Sothern. Meredith made his screen debut last year in "Winterset."

Miss Boland's pictures include "Danger—Love at Work," "College Holiday" and "The Big Broadcast of 1936."

Based on an original story by David Garth, 'Don't Forget to Remember" will be produced by Al Lewis and directed by Joseph Santley. Included in a strong supporting cast will be William Brisbane, Leona Roberts and Onslow Stevens.

Nelson B. Bell About The Showshops

Strange Things Happen in the New Comedy, 'Topper', But, Eerie or Not, They Are All in the Spirit of Fun!

Fine Cast Makes Unique Screen Laughmaker of Hal Roach Feature, Released Through M-G-M; Change in Hours of 'Going Native' Auditions; Notables to Swarm Ringside at Tonight's Charity Boxing Show.

BELL.

AFTER having observed a series of enthusiastic ads in the motion picture trade journals, received a telegraphic invitation to attend a preview of the picture from Rudolph Berger, a bulletin from Ray Bell—no relation—of the local Loew forces on the urgency of viewing it and a letter of some length from Oscar Doob, in charge of advertising and publicity for Loew's, Inc., in New York, regarding the marketing of the film, it was with great curiosity that your reporter attended yesterday afternoon's 2 o'clock preview of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's release of Hal Roach's feature-comedy production of "Topper," at the Ambassador Theater.

There is a marketing problem here, to be sure, because "Topper" makes use of certain story and camera devices that heretofore have "scared customers away" instead of attracting them. That should not be the case in this instance. "Topper" is a thoroughly unusual and interesting comedy of the quick and the dead. However ominous that may seem in cold type, it conveys no eerie impression upon the screen. It is not gruesome, uncanny or depressing, this "Topper"—and that, incidentally, is the name of a powerful New York banker and not a high hat.

Mr. Cosmo Topper is a giant in Wall Street, but a completely dominated and submerged Caspar Milquetoast in his home. His largest stockholder and that debonair young man's wife are devotees of the gayest sort of night life and go in for fun in a large and expensive way, as their means easily permit. Speeding along a Long Island road one day, a tire blows out, the car crashes through a fence, leaves the highway and is demolished against a hardy old tree, killing both of its occupants. But those occupants refuse to stay dead. They conserve their ectoplasms for convenient uses by becoming visible to living persons only part of the time and being totally invisible, although able to talk and exert normal physical energy to suit their whims, the rest of the time. As their one joint good deed, that is expected to gain them entrance through the pearly gates, these two departed pleasure-lovers set about reforming Mr. Cosmo Topper.

To bring this about successfully, their wraiths—and some of the time themselves—dog Topper's footsteps and induct him into the subtle allurements of swagger night life. Involved in all sorts of escapades, Topper makes the headlines and his wife is outraged—until all of the smart people she has most wanted to know begin to call upon her, assuming that she must be "regular," after all, to have such a husband! How the amusing business comes out in the end will not be disclosed here at this time. It is, however, carried to as logical a conclusion as is possible in the treatment of so fantastic a premise.

During the periods of the play in which the incorrigible ectoplasms insist upon being invisible to the human eye, "Topper" is strongly reminiscent of the similar scenes in "The Invisible Man." Inanimate objects do all manner of strange and incomprehensible things without apparent human propulsion. These intervals, however, are dedicated to comedy in the instant case, instead of to horror.

A cast of distinction has been essembled for the principal roles in this experiment in a new method of achieving laughs—Constance Bennett and Cary Grant are the deceased playfellows; Roland Young, Topper; Billie Burke, his wife; Alan Mowbray, an understanding butler, and a large number of others cast in important parts.

There may be a sales puzzle here for the promotorial gentlemen of the theater, but the customers will find "Topper" more than worth whatever it may cost to persuade them to go see it.

* * * *

Hal Roach, the producer of "Topper," has been kind to those whose luster has dimmed as cinema stars during the past few years. A close observer will discover in the cast such old-time favorites as Crauford Kent, Tom Moore, Jack Mulhall and Kenneth Harlan. Arthur Lake and Hedda Hopper are brought back in roles a little more substantial than the "bit" parts played by the others mentioned.

* * * *

Manager Gene Ford, of Loew's Capitol Theater, in charge of production of the "Going Native" local revue, to be staged at the Capitol next month, has been so swamped with applications for auditions from aspiring Washington singers, dancers, comedians, magicians, monologists and specialists in all other lines of theatrical entertainment that announcement is made of a change in hours for the auditions to be held this week.

On Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights it will be necessary to begin testing the applicants at 7:30 o'clock, instead of 8:30, as originally announced. The auditions will be held in the West Ballroom of the Shoreham Hotel.

Applications may still be filed for participation in "Going Native." Blanks are available at the Capitol Theater or from the drama desks of the local press.

Anyone with talent is eligible to enter the competition for a place in the cast or chorus of this production, provided only that he or she is over 18 years of age.

* * * *

Yesterday's preview of "Topper" by no means put even a temporary end to the advance showing of important films that the critical fraternity are urged to see. This morning at 11, Gaumont British's production of "King Solomon's Mines" will be unspooled in the private projection room of the Twentieth Century-Fox Film Exchange, to be followed at 1:30 by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's "Saratoga," the last picture in which Jean Harlow appeared. On Wednesday at 1:30 "Easy Living" will be unwound in the same bandbox theater. "Easy Living," you will remember, is the feature that follows the Marx Brothers in "A Day at the Races" at the Palace, instead of "The Good Earth," which has been set back to a later date. More of these exhibits, also at a later date. There is a luncheon at the Variety Club in honor of George W. Weeks, general manager of GB, sandwiched in between today's screenings. Since the projection room is at New Jersey avenue and K streets and the Variety Club in the Willard Hotel, one wonders just how his time schedule can be managed—if at all.

* * * *

Speaking of the Variety Club, there will be quite as much interest in certain quarters in the notables at the ringside as in the fisticuffers in the ring at tonight's big charity boxing show sponsored by the club and The Washington Post.

Al Jolson, Jack Dempsey, a large group of New York's best-known figures in the sports world, J. Edgar Hoover, chief G-Man; Marvin McIntyre, secretary to the President; members of both houses of Congress and all of Washington's sportdom will be "down in front," amply guarded against autograph hunters—I hope.

And besides all that, the fight card is tops in the history of the Capital's legalized boxing—ask anybody. And another thing—there are still some excellent seats in all price ranges to be had. Better get yours while they last.

Sudden-Realization Note.

Wheeler, Woolsey Grow Old in Night

For the first time in their long screen careers, Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey will be seen as hoary-headed old men, one with a long white beard, the other with a goatee. This strange transition is one of the amusing features of their new comedy, "On Again—Off Again."

Wheeler was so intrigued with his make-up that he visited everyone on the lot to display his beard.

Woolsey revealed that when he was a boy of 16 he played an old man of 65 in "Tennessee's Partner," a stage favorite from which Frank Bacon created his role of "Lightnin'."

Dixie Dunbar to Be Ritz Film Sweeties

Harry Ritz' first screen sweetheart will be Dixie Dunbar, pert and vivacious dancer-actress, who has been assigned the coveted role of "Polly" in the Ritz Brothers first Twentieth Century-Fox comedy starring vehicle, "Life Begins in College."

This big musical extravaganza starts the riotous comedians on their new Twentieth Century-Fox contract, which calls for their appearance in three starring vehicles a year.

Fistificuffer to Become Filmster

Washingtonians who perch around the ringside at Griffith Stadium tonight to watch Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele swap punches with Charles "Hobo" Williams, in the big Variety Club-Washington Post charity boxing show, may be viewing a future film star in action. Steele's comanager is none other than Bing Crosby, whose contract permits one independent picture a year. He plans to cast the champ importantly in his next. Above, left to right, Crosby, Ethel Merman and Steele.

Noted Rural Theater Begins Fourth Annual Shaw Festival

Hedgerow Theater, Moylan-Rose Valley, Pa, Observes Birthday of Distinguished Playwright by Adding 13th of His Plays to Repertoire.

The Hedgerow Theater, in Moylan-Rose Valley, Pa., which has graduated some of the most distinguished of the theater's stars, began the second week of its fourth annual Shaw Festival on Monday by celebrating the master dramatist's eighty-first birthday.

Though it is well known that Mr. Shaw dislikes birthday celebrations, the Hedgerow people will add the thirteenth Shavian drama to their repertory, thereby bringing their play-list up to 123 items.

Since 1934, when Hedgerow presented its first Shavian cycle, a new drama has been added each year on the author's birthday. "Saint Joan" the first year, "The Doctor's Dilemma," second; "Getting Married" last year, and the choice for this season is "Too True to Be Good," one of the newer Shaw plays to be produced in this country.

The four-decade cycle which began this week with "Arms and the Man," written in 1894, will be brought up to 1910 with a performance of "Misalliance" on Saturday, and next week the chronology will be broken Monday and Tuesday for two performances of "Too True to Be Good." Written and first produced in America in 1932, the play will bring Hedgerow's large list of Shaw productions up to the present day.

"The Dark Lady of the Sonnets," a plea for a Shakespeare Memorial Theater, will be presented Wednesday as a curtain-raiser to the two-act "Androcles and the Lion," the fable play on the early Christian martyrs.

"Heartbreak House," which Shaw began in 1913 and did not finish for six years, will play Thursday. Described as a "fantasia in the Russian manner on English themes," it shows a distinct Tchekhov influence. Jasper Deeter, Hedgerow's famed director, will play the Capt. Shotover role originated at Malvern by Sir Charles Hardwicke.

"Saint Joan," often considered the greatest piece of dramatic literature since Shakespeare, will have its forty-sixth performance at Hedgerow on Friday. Performed in nearly every country in the world, it completed Shaw's world triumph as a man of letters. He disclaims the real authorship, asserting that it was written by the maid herself, and that he only arranged it for the stage.

Saturday the first of the two cycles will be brought to a close with the third performance of the highlight production of the festival, "Too True to Be Good." The second cycle will be presented the first two weeks of August.

Actors Give UpGolf To Ascend Poles

Bruce Cabot, Edward Norris and Cliff Edwards are taking their daily dozen on telegraph poles, the next few days. They are playing linemen in "Black Lightning," and Director Edward Cahn pronounced them a trifle slow in shinnying up.

Instead of golfing, they have been ordered to climb poles as part of their training. The property department has equipped each with spikes and safety belt—just in case.

The Roadside

That enduring old romantic drama of three decades and more ago, "The Prisoner of Zenda," last night inaugurated the second week of its fortnight's run under the intelligent and painstaking ministrations of the Roadside Theater Company.

"The Prisoner of Zenda" is considerably removed from the exaggerated bombast of many of the resurrected melodramas with which the roadsiders have scored some of their greatest successes. It is a "straight" romantic drama, written in the modern manner—barring the introduction of a few outmoded "asides"—and gives its players an opportunity to demonstrate their worth in interesting and plausible roles.

The story of the king and the English adventurer, who looked so much alike that one was able to masquerade as the other, for the sake of Ruritania and the crown princess, Flavia, needs no recapitulation after all these years. Adapted by Edward Rose from the widely read novel by Anthony Hope, it presents scenes of flashing color, fast action and a climax that runs high in suspense.

The members of the cast do well by this old piece. Richard Kreuzberg, in the dual role of Rudolph V, of Ruritania, and Rudolph Rassendyll, the British soldier of fortune, who was willing to take a chance in his anxiety to aid beautiful young womanhood in distress, is especially effective. So are Lawrence Beckerman as Black Michael, pretender to the throne; J. Edmund Veitch, as Col. Sapt; Ralph Fowler, as Fritz von Tarlenheim; Virginia True, as Princess Flavia, and Betty Gray in the exacting role of Antoinette de Mauban. The large ensemble renders excellent support.

The production, settings and costumes are such as to do ample justice to "Zenda," always taking into consideration the limited area of the Roadside stage. N. B. B.

Baxter Buys Boat For Swordfishing

Fulfilling a desire he has had since he started at the bottom of the ladder to screen fame, Warner Baxter, has purchased his own seagoing yacht.

The new yacht is a 51-foot cabin cruiser, which accommodates 10 persons, including a crew of 2. The boat is equipped with every type of fishing device, with a special lookout post for swordfishing.

The cabin cruiser will arrive in Hollywood August 15, about the time Baxter completes his starring role in "Wife, Doctor, and Nurse." The finishing touches are now being put on the yacht, which has been built by the Matthews Boat Co. on Lake Erie. The boat will be shipped out by freight.

A Star-Gazer.

Director William Clemens, Warner Bros. director, knows his stars—both kinds. His hobby is astronomy and he has a fine reflecting telescope he built in his own workshop. A newly wed, he has taught his bride star-craft, so she will not be a telescope-widow.

Comb Collection.

Kay Francis has Hollywood's best collection of those tall ornamental hair combs early Californian ladies used to stick behind their heads—and girls still wear at fiestas.

The Post's New Yorker

By LEONARD LYONS

New York, July 19.

"EARLY IN 1927," writes Tosha Tolces, "I heard, for the first time, the 'Rhapsody in Blue.' I was so fascinated by its intoxicating sweep and rhythm, that, as I had been engaged by the Hollywood Bowl Orchestra as soloist for the season, I asked the orchestra manager for permission to play it there. I assured her that it really wasn't jazz. Since I was to play under the baton of Eugene Goosens, she said it would be all right, if he'd agree. So I played it for Goosens, who thought it would be fun to try it. I rushed to New York to meet Gershwin, to have him teach me the 'Rhapsody.' He told me of his delight that I wanted to introduce it on the Pacific Coast, but that he wasn't a teacher.

"I told him all he needed to do was walk around, listen, and if it didn't sound right, to holler. He did that . . . I never had played jazz, but I realized that this needed meticulous attention to the rhythm, and that all those innumerable notes were not to be played a la Chopin, but to be mathematically divided into each beat . . . The Hollywood Bowl was jammed that night, and even a moon appeared. Have you ever heard Mr. Goosens conduct the 'Rhapsody'? We had a 110-piece orchestra, and when Goosens swept out the first three chords, so broad and big—it was hypnotic."

HE TOOK a naive pride in his work and in his accomplishments, a pride he wished the whole world—or that part of it attracted to the drawing rooms to which he had been invited—to share. Inevitably, Gershwin would be asked to play an invitation he never declined . . . Once, when he asked George S. Kaufman: "Would you ever bet on me, George?" Mr. Kaufman replied: "I'll bet on you any time—in a 100-yard dash to a baby grand piano."

* * * *

KAUFMAN MIGHT have added: "or a dash to a psychoanalyst." For so frequent were the emotional disturbances of this sensitive composer that a good deal of his time was spent in the offices of psychoanalysts to whom he was recommended. Even for such a common ailment as indigestion, Gershwin sought the advice of a psychoanalyst. After long hours of mental probings, he emerged smiling and triumphant . . . "Well, George," he was asked, "has your indigestion changed any?" . . . "Oh, no, of course not," Gershwin explained. "My indigestion hasn't changed at all. But my attitude toward indigestion has changed."

* * * *

GERSHWIN WAS told of a new psychoanalyst who had worked wonders in altering the personalities and mental outlook of a number of prominent patients. So well recommended was he that Gershwin immediately sought him out and made an appointment to see him . . . "But first I want to know one thing," the brilliant composer demanded. "If I take this course of treatments from you—will it affect my genius?"

* * * *

HIS FRIEND, Oscar Levant, visited Gershwin's home one evening, arrived at 9 o'clock and remained until 5 in the morning, refusing to heed the hints that perhaps he had overstayed. Gershwin yawned, donned pajamas, and made other less guarded references to the fact that he was sleepy . . . At 5 a. m. the determined Levant went to the ice box in the kitchen and helped himself to a sandwich. Gershwin brought Oscar's hat and coat into the kitchen where Levant was munching away. He placed the hat on Oscar's head and draped his coat around his shoulders. "I'll pardon you," he stated, "—for eating and running."

* * * *

MRS. MEYER DAVIS, wife of the band leader, was one of his admirers . . . Mrs. Davis always had believed that Strauss's "Death and Transfiguration" could be adapted into a popular waltz, and wondered why it never had been done. During the Washington Centennial Celebration she made the adaptation and called the tune "Spirit of Mount Vernon"—the official centennial song . . . It was played throughout America without anybody recognizing the fact that almost line for line it was lifted from a Strauss melody . . . When Gershwin visited the Davis home in Philadelphia, Mrs. Davis asked him to autograph her music book. "From George Gershwin," he inscribed—"to the American female Strauss!"

* * * *

WHEN HE and his brother, Ira, were signed to go to Hollywood to write the score for "Shall We Dance," the Astaire-Rogers picture, the brothers tendered a party at their New York penthouse to celebrate their departure . . . After the dinner was served, a messenger arrived, bearing a copy of the script upon which they were to work . . . The Gershwins apologized to their guests, and retired to another room to study the script . . . A halfhour later they reappeared. "Gosh," George sighed, "but I wish I was back in New York!"

In Hollywood

With JIMMY FIDLER

Hollywood, July 19.—Strolling along the Boulevard I saw one of the screen's most famous glamour girls step out of her swank limousine. Her hair was tousled, she wore—flaunted, rather—the sloppiest slacks that ever offended mortal eyes and she looked about as glamorous as a waterfront blowsy.

Now, I am neither superfastidious nor clothes-conscious. I'll even agree that ordinary human beings should be cheered when they sacrifice style to comfort. But famous movie stars are not ordinary human beings in the eyes of the world, and that girl ought to be reminded of a few pertinent facts. Hollywood is a tourist mecca; dyed-in-the-wool movie fans travel thousands of miles, not to see Hollywood, which is just an ordinary little California town, but to see their favorite stars, who, in their admirers' day-dreams, at least, are the personification of everything romantic and lovely. It must be a sad disillusionment to see for the first time the object of all that dreaming—and to find her looking like a fishwife.

Stardom offers enough privileges to offset any of the "hardships" it may impose—and any screen lovely who forgets that fact ought to freshen her memory by talking with a few of the many girls who would give half of their lives for one year in the limelight. It seems to me that the least Hollywood glamour girls can do to show their common sense, if not appreciation for their good fortunes, is to wear their sloppy slacks—if they must be worn at all—in the backyard of the mansion that their movie money has bought.

Now that that tirade is off my mind, the thought of clothes reminds me of Jane Withers, a tomboy by personal taste and the co-operation of her mother. Jane likes to give parties—the rough-and-tumble sort of parties that usually start with a pony ride (the Witherses live on a ranch) and end with a game of hide and seek in the big chicken yard. The wear and tear on party dresses was so appaling that Mrs. Withers finally set about finding a preventive. She now keeps on hand several dozen suits of overalls in assorted sizes. Jane's guests are fitted out in denim when they arrive and nature then is allowed to take its course.

Private Irks: Stars who drool about "getting away from it all" and then spend their vacations in crowded, fashionable resorts.

Lovely screen ladies who spoil my illusions by telling me the sordid details of their latest diet.

That "widow's peak" with which M-G-M's beauticians decorated Robert Taylor.

Those screen love scenes in which the love birds suddenly break into song—with a symphony orchestra accompanying them.

Actresses who describe everything as "mahvelous, simply mahvelous" or "too, too divine."

Englishmen who make $5,000 a week in Hollywood—and sneer at American crudities.

Much married stars who bill and coo in public with their newest mates.

The cute screen mannerisms of Marion Davies—who is old enough to know better.

Dropped in for an on-the-set chat with Randolph Scott this morning and found him nursing a game leg. "What happened to you?" I demanded—and met a venomous glare. "I slipped on a rug, fell and turned my ankle," he said. "I thought I'd explained it to everyone in Hollywood by now."

A moment later, Bob Burns wandered by and noticed Randy's limp. Randy sighed. "Rug—slipped—turned ankle," he interrupted as Bob started to ask the inevitable question. And not five minutes later the correspondent for a New York daily appeared on the set. Randy hobbled over to the directors loudspeaker.

"I wish to explain to everyone," he announced, "that this morning I slipped on a small rug in the entrance hall of my home. I fell and I am carrying a cane because I turned my ankle." I left feeling rather squelched.

Height of Something.

Nationals Lose Ninth Straight Game as Detroit Wins Decision, 8-4

STEELE, WILLIAMS AWAIT BELL AT STADIUM TONIGHT

The Washington Post Sports

* X WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, JULY 20, 1937 17

Griffs Blow 2-Run Lead, Lose Series

Pete Appleton Victim of Bengals; Simmons Hits Home Run.

By Shirley Povich.
A Staff Correspondent.

Detroit, July 19.—Ho-hum, the monotony of it all. The Nats played another ball game today and —you gessed it—they lost another ball game. With another great display of futility, they succeeded in stretching their losing streak to nine straight games.

Today, though, they varied the procedure. They actually were in front for an inning—the first inning—but not long after they were back in their old haunts on the wrong side of the score and eventually Detroit's Tigers beat 'em, 8 to 4.

They didn't put up much resistance against young Baron Poffenberger, the Williamsport, Md., boy who is the Tigers' rookie pitching sensation of the season. They made eight hits off the baron, including Al Simmons' fifth home run of the season that set the Nats up in a 2-0 lead, but thereafter when a hit could be converted into a run, they were a helpless crew.

Appleton Is Victim.

Manager Bucky Harris, who will return to Washington next week prematurely gray, fed Pete Appleton to the Tigers this afternoon and by the fourth inning it was apparent that an Appleton a day would win the pennant for the Tigers.

At that, Appleton was almost blameless in the Tigers' big inning—the fourth—when they came up with five runs to break a 2-2 tie. A damaging wild throw by Catcher Millies was indirectly responsible for four Detroit runs that inning.

Harris' revised batting order which placed Al Simmons in the clean-up role, bore fruitful results in the first inning when with two out, Cecil Travis singled briskly to center and Simmons belted a pitch over the score board in left center. But the Nats couldn't score again until they picked up a run in the fifth.

Didn't Waste Time.

The Tigers didn't tarry with Appleton, either. Pete Fox's double to center and Greenberg's single to left cut the Nats' lead to 2-1 in the first and Appleton and Buddy Lewis contrived to tie the score for 'em in the second—when Appleton pitched a single to York, which Lewis threw away, giving York license to go to second. He went to third on a passed ball and he went home on Laabs' long fly to Almada.

Appleton had one out when things began to happen in the fourth. The first thing that happened was a walk to Hayworth and the next thing that happened was awful. Poffenberger laid down a poor bunt in front of the plate and with plenty of time to throw Hayworth out at second, Millies uncorked a heave that pulled Travis off the bag and all hands were safe.

Then the Tigers began to get out of hand. Pete Fox singled to center and one run scored. With two out, Charley Gehringer singled to center and another run scored. Then the Tigers went into mass production of runs. Hank Greenberg clouting his twenty-first homer of the season far, far over the leftfield wall, scoring two pals in advance of himself, and the Tigers had a 7-2 lead.

Muffed Big Chance.

Washington pried a run out of Poffenberger in the fifth, but it was nothing to brag about. In fact, the Nats would rather forget the inning, because that was when they muffed their big chance to get back into the ball game.

They had the bases filled, with one out, after Millies drew a walk, Wes Ferrell delivered a pinch single to right and Almada drew a walk and then they became very meek about it all. Buddy Lewis obligingly popped a foul to Hayworth, and Travis hit into a force play at second. One run scored on that play, but Simmons limited the uprising to one run by obligingly whiffing on a low ball that young Poffenberger slung down the middle.

Under almost the same circumstances in the eighth—with the first three batters reaching base—the Nats could only produce one run. Travis was safe when Poffenberger hit him on the knee and Simmons and Stone followed with sharp singles to center, but Kuhel lifted a short fly to right that was no help and Myer hit into a double play.

The only balm at all for the Nats was the relief pitching of young Ken Chase, who held the Tigers to one run in the last four innings. A cheap infield hit produced that superfluous tally in the seventh.

Yanks Trim Indians 8-5 to Sweep Series

Land on Hudlin and Wyatt for 13 Hits, Including Homer by Henrich With 2 Aboard; Gomez Wins Thirteenth.

Cleveland, July 19 (AP).—Paced by Freshman Tom Henrich, who hit a home run, a double and a single, and Sophomore Joe DiMaggio, who bagged a double and a single, the Yanks today defeated the Indians, 8 to 5, to make a clean sweep of the three-game series and maintain their six-game lead over the White Sox.

Henrich's blows, which drove in four runs, were the vital factors in a 13-hit attack that furnished Lefty Gomez with his thirteenth victory of the year and fifth in a row. Gomez eased up in the last two innings, when the Indians put together six of their ten hits for four runs, but by that time the issue was no longer in doubt.

The champions went to work on Willis Hudlin at the start, Frank Crosetti hitting the first of four Yankee two-baggers and scoring on two infield outs. Singles by Lou Gehrig and Bill Dickey, both with two out, preceded the Henrich homer for three more runs in the third, and doubles by DiMaggio, hitting safely in his nineteenth straight game, and Dickey scored another in the fifth.

Hudlin was driven to the showers in the seventh, when doubles by Henrich and Jake Powell, singles by Red Rolfe and DiMaggio and a wild pitch accounted for the last three Yankee runs. Whitlow Wyatt, who replaced Hudlin on the mound, held the American League leaders hitless the rest of the way.

Gomez was nicked for one run in the third, then turned back the Cleveland hitters until the eighth. Four singles and a walk, the only one the reedy southpaw gave up, produced three runs, while in the ninth Odell Hale's double and Lyn Lary's single brought in the final tally.

Yanks Recall Wicker For Vanished Broaca

Cleveland, July 19 (AP).—As the Yankees left here this evening for St. Louis, Manager Joe McCarthy announced that Southpaw Kemp Wicker had been recalled from the Newark International League "farm."

Wicker will replace Johnny Broaca, the right-hander who jumped the club yesterday and today was fined $250 and suspended for deserting his club. It is believed that Broaca will be placed on the involuntary retired list in order to make room for Wicker, since the squad is at its player limit of 23 men.

The Newark "farm-hand" will join the Yanks in St. Louis. Meanwhile, McCarthy had received no further word from Broaca.

Chisox Win 6-4 Victory Over Boston

Four Runs in Eighth Are Decisive; Winners Sweep Series.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—The Chicago White Sox staged a four-run uprising in the eighth inning today to give them a 6-to-4 victory and a clean sweep of the four-game series with the Boston Red Sox.

Going into the eighth behind, 4 to 2, the Chicago team drove Johnny Marcum from the box and continued the four-hit assault against Tommy Thomas and Rube Walberg.

Zeke Bonura's two doubles and home run featured the Chicago attack, while Pinch-hitter Jimmie Dykes drove in the two runs which gave the winners their margin of victory.

Vernon Kennedy held the Red Sox hitless for four innings, but Boston scored four in the fifth to put them ahead. The Red Sox got four of their five hits off Kennedy, but only one off Johnny Rigney, who pitched the sixth, seventh and eighth innings, and none off Clint Brown, who hurled the ninth.

Cubs Increase Lead, Shut Out Dodgers, 9-0

Tex Carleton Goes Full Distance for Chicagoans, Limiting Foe to Six Hits; Windy City Crew Sweeps Four-Game Series.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19.—While Tex Carlton was limiting the Dodgers to six hits for his seventh victory of the season, the Chicago Cubs today combed Luke Hamlin's pitching for 13 safeties, shut out Brooklyn, 9 to 0, and increased their lead over the second-place Giants to a full game.

The triumph gave the National League pace-setters a clean sweep of the four-game series.

Carleton, who has lost only three games, gave up six bases on balls, but scattered the Dodgers' hits over as many innings. In addition, he weighed in with a triple in the eighth that drove in two runs and scored a moment later on Augie Galan's single.

Hamlin, though he fanned eight as his four-game winning streak was broken, had three bad innings.

Ripper Collins opened the Cubs' fourth with his twelfth home run of the year, a blast over the rightfield wall. Frank Demaree then reached second as Lindsay Brown threw wild after fielding his grounder and before Hamlin could retire the side a walk, a wild throw by the Dodger hurler on O'Dea's sacrifice, a single and a long fly had scored three more runs.

Carleton's three-bagger in the eighth followed Billy Herman's single and a base on balls to Phil Cavarretta. The Cubs wound up their scoring in the ninth on a single by Stanley Hack, Collins' double and Buddy Hassett's error.

The Dodgers got men on base in every inning, but Carleton always managed to work his way out of danger and 11 Brooklyn base runners were left stranded.

Huge Crowd to See Middleweight Bout

Stellar Preliminary Card Also Arranged for Variety Club's Fistic Carnival for Benefit of Underprivileged Children.

By Bill McCormick

Middleweight Champion Freddie Steele and leading contender Hobo Williams will clash at Griffith Stadium tonight in the feature of what promises to be Washington's best fight card.

Contender Williams will boast an actual weight advantage of about 15 pounds at ringside in the big show promoted by the Variety Club and sponsored by The Washington Post.

A crowd of 15,000 is expected to dump at least $25,000 into the box office for the privilege of witnessing one of the only shows ever arranged here strictly for the benefit of charity. All profits—and everyone concerned with the promotion of the massive card is working without recompense will be used to send underprivileged children and their mothers to summer camps.

Fighters Get Less.

The fighters, of course, are not working gratis, although their fees are less than usual. Steele, who demanded a $50,000 guarantee before he would leave the Coast last winter, will receive 35 per cent of the net receipts, without guarantee.

Williams, who has been hammering at the gates of greatness for some months, will work for a straight 10 per cent of the net receipts. Neither will receive training expenses.

An outstanding supporting card has been arranged by the promoters, who are determined to give Washington it's best all-round program of punch.

In a semifinal scheduled to ten rounds, Joey Archibald, the best local drawing card at the present time, will swap swats with Harry Gentile, a seasoned campaigner from Hartford, Conn., from whom Joey has run twice in the past. The winner of this count, which would ordinarily serve as a main event here, will be matched with Lou Gevinson, the local featherweight product.

In a scheduled eight-rounder, Buck Everett, long a prime heavyweight favorite here, will make passes at Eddie Hogan, a massive lad from New England who has been selected by Jack Dempsey to serve as his No. 1 contender for the crown now worn by Joe Louis.

Walter Woods, tenth-ranking middleweight contender, who is declared the hardest right-hand puncher in the business, will attempt to level Mickey Flannegan, chief sparmate to Williams. Woods, a sensation wherever he has shown, will be making his first preliminary appearance here. In all other cities he is recognized as a main event performer, largely by virtue of his string of 39 victories since turning professional. In his last 25 fights, Woods has scored 19 knockouts.

Max Roesch on Card.

Max Roesch, the tall Texan who is regarded as No. 1 contender for Louis' crown by many close observers of affairs fistic, will return to the wars here against Eddie Caddore, of Hartford. Roesch gained national fame as an outstanding spar mate of Jimmy Braddock. He added to his fame by stealing the preliminary card to the Louis-Braddock show, on which he won a decisive victory over Steve Carr, conqueror of Nathan Mann.

Caddore also has conquered Mann—not once, but twice. In his first appearance here Caddore won a unanimous decision from Murray Kanner, former District amateur heavyweight champion. Roesch also won the duke from Kanner, but Eddie was able to put Murray on the floor for a brief count—which was more than Roesch could do.

Kayo Moseby and Prince Albert, a brace of colored middleweights, will work it out in a four-round preliminary. In a four-round curtain-raiser, Billy Bullock and Frankie DeAngelo, local favorites, will settle matters.

To get back to the main event, Williams' weight advantage will be slight at weighing-in time at noon today, but impressive when they climb into the ring for actual warfare. Under the terms of his contract, Williams is required to scale not more than 163 pounds when they step on the scale for the official testing of tonnages.

Williams will make that weight without trouble, but immediately he steps off the Fairbanks he will absorb one quart of milk—which will send his poundage soaring. Then will follow a nap and a heavy steak about 5 o'clock. The steak will be accompanied by a large glass of tea. Milk, steak and ten will send the Hobo's weight to at least 170 at ring time.

Steele, on the other hand, will weigh in at about 155 or 156. This will be top weight for him. He will not gain an ounce by ring time, and thus we will have the champion clambering through the ropes to try to subdue a challenger at least 14 or 15 pounds heavier.

Steele will have a slight advantage in punching prowess, as most authorities agree he is an even better two-fisted puncher than the always dangerous Williams. Steele will be a decided superior over Williams in the matter of experience and generalship.

Williams, who often has entered the ring sadly out of shape, has worked harder for this bout than for any other match in his entire career. In the past careless about his diet, this time he has had his meals carefully supervised by his manager-trainer, Harry Groves. In the past reluctant about working in the gymnasium, this time he has put in many long hours of pre-fight boxing. All this has resulted in his being in perfect physical condition.

Steele has been training faithfully at Griffith Farms, near here, for almost a month. At the outset, it was not believed that the middleweight champion would employ a professional trainer. After a few days in the hot weather, to which he is not accustomed, Steele's manager, Dave Miller, sent in an SOS call to New York for Ray Arcel, one of the best conditioners of fighters in the prize-fight business.

Arcel Trains Steele.

Ray arrived immediately and at once started to whip Freddie into his finest fighting fettle despite the heat. Betting odds favored Steele at 3 to 1, with few takers in either direction. Those who believe Steele will win will not offer greater odds. Those who like Williams are holding out for a more tempting price.

The main ticket office, at the National Theater, and the branches at Turner's Arena and Goldie Ahearn's will remain open until 6 o'clock tonight. After that, all remaining stock will be transferred to Griffith Stadium.

Although the demand for tickets has been unprecedented, the promoters last night announced that many choice seats yet were unsold. A new seating arrangement, perfected by the showmen promoting the contest, will make it possible to accommodate the largest crowd in the history of local larrup—which is expected.

POST PREDICTIONS.

Bouts are rated from A (the best) to G (phooey!)

MAIN EVENT—Freddie Steele, middleweight champion of the world, vs. Charles (Hobo) Williams, Alexandria, Va., middleweights; 10 rounds. Rated A. The best rating any fight has received this year because we have a great champion swapping swats with a great contender, who lacks experience, but is rough, rusged and determined. Steele, of course, has everything in his favor, but Williams is just rugged enough to take his best wallops without wilting and just goofy enough to pull the unexpected. The hot weather here has interfered with Freddie's training, but he still is in good enough shape to beat Williams, unless the Hobo is even better than we suspected. From here, it looks like Steele after a helluva fight, on a knockout in the eight, ninth or tenth round. However, don't start offering those 3 to 1 odds they're quoting, because Freddie isn't that much better than the Alexandria assassin.

PRELIMINARIES—Eddie Hogan, Philadelphia, vs. Buck Everett, Washington, heavyweights; 8 rounds; rated B. This will be a true test for Hogan, who has been highly touted as the coming heavyweight champion. He will have at least 35 pounds weight advantage on Everett, but we still like Buck, on his past performances, to pound the daylights out of Edward. Which ever way it goes it should be a great bout and we're still pickins Everett.

Joey Archibald, Providence, R. I., vs. Harry Gentile, Hartford, Conn., featherweights; 10 rounds. Rated B-plus. This will be Archibald's first real test since he came here. The little bantamweight who has zoomed into local favor has not had too many tough opponents tossed at him by a matchmaker who was trying to keep him hot for a shot at Lou Gevinson. Tas

The 'Forgotten Man' of Louis' Career.

By Shirley Povich.

Detroit, July 19.—The man who first tapped the flow of brown gold represented by Joe Louis—a paunchy little Negro boxing coach named Attler (Kid) Ellis, who taught Louis how to hold up his hands and block and hit—is, of all people, not proud of the pupil who blossomed into the heavyweight champion of the world.

POVICH.

Kid Ellis is the forgotten man in Louis' rise to fame and fortune. On the day when the papers noted that Louis was buying a brand new limousine, Ellis was being given a broom in the Ford factory here and told to sweep clean.

He was the discoverer of Joe Louis' fistic talents in the little Negro settlement house in Detroit's Harlem where Clinton Bridges, Stanley Evans and another colored lad named Useless Jackson used to belt Louis around regularly.

But that straight right that young Joe could shoot quite captivated Kid Ellis, who in his fighting days, had been a contender for Abe Attle's bantamweight title. If Louis could only develop his left—well, Ellis visioned him as a champion.

* * * *

* * * *

He took Louis to the Golden Gloves tournament, watched him win the light-heavyweight title. Then they went to the Chicago Golden Gloves tournament and that title, too, fell to Louis. At the National A. A. U. tournament, in St. Louis, Joe Louis again was the champion.

* * * *

There were no more fields to conquer in amateur ranks, so Ellis and Louis plunged into professional boxing. Ellis signed Louis to a contract. Ellis' daughter needed money for schooling and during that financial crisis, he offered a Detroit colored attorney, John Roxborough, a 50 per cent share of Louis' earnings for a sizable cash advance.

* * * *

As the story is told around the Brewster Settlement House, Ellis was dissatisfied with his profits from Louis' early fights and set about to sell his contract with Louis to a Detroit promoter for $15,000 cash.

* * * *

Hearing of that plan, Roxborough was incensed. A lawyer who knew more about court affairs than the untutored Ellis, he discovered that Ellis' contract with Louis was invalid—that Louis' mother, who signed the papers for her minor son, was not privileged to do so until she had been duly appointed his legal guardian by the Michigan Probate Court. With Louis' consent, Roxborough had himself appointed Louis' guardian, signing the fighter to a new contract with himself as manager.

* * * *

"They put me out in the cold," Ellis was saying here today. "I didn't think Joe Louis would do that. After all I did for him. Spent all my afternoons with him, and whatever I could afford when he didn't have a job. I didn't have much more, but I didn't want Joe to go hungry.

* * * *

"That big money Roxborough was showing Louis dazzled him, I guess. All I ever got as my cut out of his fights was $430. Since then, Joe has earned over $400,000. And don't let those stories about his generosity fool you. There ain't nothing generous about him.

* * * *

"Joe was in Detroit last week, I met him at the gym where I have some other kids working. Know what he says to me? Just 'hello' like he didn't know me very well. I thought he might have changed and I asked him for enough to stake me until I could get some of my young fighters some work. He gave me the go-by."

* * * *

Kid Ellis for two years has boasted as his watch charm the little diamond-studded golden glove that Joe Louis won at Chicago in 1933. He fingered the thing like he was proud of it. He said he was. "I made him the amateur champ of the country in one year and he gave me this medal. He was a friend of mine, then. One of Joe's new friends, a rich fellow, wants it bad and is offering me $500 for it. I'm going to take the five C's and try to forget about Joe Louis."

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TONY MAN, $14.00, $6.10, $4.90; NIGHT WATCH, $4.30, $3.20; PEGGY CAN, $4.60.

TONY MAN, rushed into a forward position in the opening furlong, was rated along on the outside of NIGHT WATCH and took commmand in the stretch to be going away at the end under a stout drive. NIGHT WATCH had speed to go to the front at once and continued gamely when unable to resist the winner after saving ground. PEGGY CAN, shuffled back going to the first turn, came with a rush on the outside in closing stages. ROBERTA went evenly, but could not threaten. TUGBOAT tired. DIGNITARY had early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 2:36. Off at 2:40½. Winner, A. S. Hewitt's ch. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—HURDY GURDY, $51.50, $18.50, $6.50; EMVEE, $3.60, $3.00; KING RULER, $3.30.

HURDY GURDY, forwardly placed from the start, was taken wide for racing entering the stretch, responded to punishment to take command with a rush and was under a hand ride at the end. EMVEE, closest to the pace of KING RULER after the opening furlong, disposed of the pacemaker, but could not resist the winner while under punishment. KING RULER drew out to a good lead in the opening quarter and tired gradually thereafter. FLYING FEET made up some ground in the closing stages. BONNIE MAID had a flash of good speed. MIST HAWK went well for a quarter.

DAILY DOUBLE—FIRST AND SECOND RACES—PAID $447.30.

THIRD RACE—Five furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-old maiden fillies; claiming. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:12. Off at 3:15½. Winner, E. K. Bryson's dk. b. f. Two-dollar mutuels paid—PHARA FROST, $12.30, $8.30, $4.50; FLYING LANCE, $8.70, $5.60; MAXINE, $3.60.

PHARA FROST, off in the first flight, was steadied along on the outside of the leaders to the stretch, rallied to a drive to take command inside the sixteenth pole and was drawing out at the end. FLYING LANCE ran GRAEME CRACKER into defeat and continued gamely when displaced, but could not resist the winner. MAXINE closed with a rush in the middle of the track after dropping back swinging for the stretch. MOON FOLLY closed some ground. GRAEME CRACKER stopped after setting and forcing the pace.

FOURTH RACE—Five and a half furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 2-year-olds; claiming. Start good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 3:46. Off at 3:51½. Winner, C. F. Hockley's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—AGOTARAS, $7.20, $4.60, $3.60; DEPEND, $4.90, $4.10; SETEMUP, $11.90.

AGOTARAS improved his position gradually on the outside to the stretch, responded to a drive and was up in the concluding strides. DEPEND pressed the pace of HIBLAZE before disposing of that one midway of the stretch and tired slightly in the closing sixteenth. SETEMUP, forced wide for racing room, came with a rush. HIBLAZE set a good pace, but began dropping back inside the eighth pole. SKETCH BOOK moved up menacingly in the stretch, but tired. MY DEBUT had early speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds. Start good from stall. Won handily; place driving. Went to post at 5:16. Off at 5:18. Winner, George A. Garrett's ch. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CARNARVON, $9.30, $4.80, $3.10; BAG PIPE, $5.40, $3.60; EVENING TIDE, $2.70.

CARNARVON went up on the inside to assume command after the opening furlong, opened a good lead under light urging and drew out gradually in the late stretch to win handily. BAG PIPE forced the early pace and continued gamely under pressure through the stretch, but was no match for the winner. EVENING TIDE went evenly on the outside, but could not threaten seriously after being off on top. GOLDEN ERA saved much ground entering the stretch, but hung in the final drive. HONEY CLOUD lacked speed throughout.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Start good for all but CRYSTAL PRINCE from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:43. Off at 6:47. Winner, O. H. Rowe's b. h. (7), by Crusader—Barenka. Trained by W. Casey. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:43 4-5 (equals record).

Two-dollar mutuels paid—MORALIST, $15.90, $7.50, $5.60; INACTIVE, $5.20, $3.70; MOON PENNY, $5.20.

MORALIST, rated along while close to the pace of INACTIVE, rallied to strong hand-ride in midstretch to draw clear gradually. INACTIVE, off alertly, set a good pace and closed gamely, but was held safe. MOON PENNY had speed in spots. TRIXIE LASS showed an even effort. SUN APOLLO raced wide throughout. BALAPIN was blocked entering the stretch and faltered. CRYSTAL PRINCE dwelt at the start and was steadied along when hopelessly beaten.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 6:15. Off at 6:15. Winner, H. Ribet's br. c. (3), by Distraction—Unique. Two-dollar mutuels paid—GRAND JESTER, $23.20, $7.80, $4.00; TZIGANE, $3.30, $2.60; ITALIAN HARRY, $3.90.

GRAND JESTER, steadied along within striking distance of the leaders, went to TZIGANE with good courage in the stretch and was drawing away at the end. TZIGANE went to the front without effort going to the firs urn, opened a long lead, but tired badly through the stretch. ITALIAN HARRY came with a rush in the closing stages. MORESORIS tired after going forwardly. OORA KAY closed some ground from a sluggish beginning. POLITEN stopped. FAMOUS CLAYTON had early speed.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $1,000. For 3-year-olds and upward; claiming. Sart good from stall. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:43½. Off at 5:45. Winner, C. B. Sturm's ch. m. (5), by Trohan—Honesty. Trained by J. L. Garth. Value to winner, $700; second, $150; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:49.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEST POLICY, $92.00, $28.20, $15.00; CHILLY EBBIE, $5.20, $4.10; CHILHEE, $7.00.

BEST POLICY, showing startling form reversal, went around leaders entering the stretch to take command and, under pressure, held sway to the end. CHILLY EBBIE ran FLOWER TIME into defeat and fought it out willingly. CHILHEE closed with good courage. WITTEKIND, taken back after breaking in front, was steered wide thereafter and closed gamely. NIGHT GAIL tired after a half. FLOWER TIME stopped after setting the pace.

Carnarvon Tops Mark At Delaware

Wins Six-Furlong Race in 1:11 3-5; Daily Double Is $447.30.

By the Associated Press.

Delaware Park, Del., July 19.—Carnarvon, a colt that seems to have inherited the blinding speed of his daddy, Prince of Wales, bounded over the six-furlong course to equal the track record in the Amstel Purse, feature of the Delaware Steeplechase and Race Association's program here today.

Asking Jockey Charlie Rosengarten for little more than guidance, the chestnut colt scored a handy victory with Bagpipe, in the colors of C. V. Whitney, two and a half lengths in his wake. The latter had a lengthy and a quarter the best of E. D. Shaffer's Evening Tide, the favorite. Four others were forced into the "also ran" division.

Carnarvon stepped the three-quarters of a mile in 1:11 3-5, matching the time of Mower, but today's winner carried 118 pounds, eight more than the previous holder of the mark.

A crowd of 7,500 witnessed the races, conducted over a fast track, but under a partly cloudy sky. Betting was brisk for the opening of the final week of the meeting.

Carnarvon did not break any too well. From fifth position as Starter George Palmer sent them away, Carnarvon came up along the rail with a rush, got to the front and withstood attempts of Bagpipe to dislodge him. In the stretch, Rosengarten asked the colt for additional speed and he responded to draw out and seemed to have speed in reserve at the end.

Owned by George A. Garrett and a stablemate of Aneroid, the popular stake horse, Carnarvon was second choice in the betting and paid a $9.30 mutuel.

Those in the crowd who played an "Organ Grinder's Swing" hunch, cashed a $447.30 daily double. The winning horses were Tonyman, in the first race, and Hurdy Gurdy in the second race.

Grimm Reported 'Much Improved'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, July 19.—Dr. Robert F. Hyland said Charley Grimm, manager of the Chicago Cubs, was "much improved" today and would rejoin his baseball club when it returned home next week from an Eastern tour.

Grimm entered a hospital (St. Johns) last Saturday for examination and observation for what Hyland said was a sciatic condition. Hyland said Grimm would undergo further treatment after the close of the 1937 season.

Yale Beats Glasgow.

Glen Eagles, Scotland, July 19 (AP).—Yale University golfers defeated Glasgow University, 9 to 2, today. The Americans won the foursomes, 3-0, and the singles, 6-2. Four matches were halved.

Sunphantom Scores Smashing Victory in Empire City Feature

Empire City Race Track, N. Y., July 19.—Mrs. Charles S. Bromley's Sunphantom, freshened up since being beaten off in War Admiral's Chesapeake Stakes at Havre de Grace last April, came back to the races with a bang in the Verplanck Handicap, a class "C" affair at a mile and 70 yards here today. The Genie 3-year-old, quoted at 15 to 1, won by four lengths. Johnny Longden, riding star of the afternoon, was astride the Philadelphia-owned colt for his third triumph.

C. V. Whitney's heavily weighted Roustabout, making his first appearance of the year, ran a game race under his 126 pounds to finish second, three lengths clear of J. S. Riley's Jimmie Cabaniss. Marshall Field's Swahili, the favorite, never could reach the leaders and finished last in the field of eight 3-year-olds and upward. The time was 1:44 2-5.

Sunphantom collared the fast starting Miss Rainbow in the first quarter mile, then went on to open up a long lead, making Miss Rainbow and Booming Guns, the second choice, stop. Jimmie Cabaniss had a brief fling at the pacemaker around the bend, but it remained for the 6-year-old Roustabout to supply what contention there was through the stretch.

Babe Phelps Hurt.

Brooklyn, N. Y., July 19 (AP).—Babe Phelps, hefty catcher and clean-up hitter for the Brooklyn Dodgers, was struck in the throat by a foul tip off Bill Jurges' bat in the first inning of today's game with the Chicago Cubs. After a five-minute delay, Phelps was sent to the clubhouse for treatment, and Roy Spencer took his place.

Trina Takes The Revere At Suffolk

Comes From Behind to Win; Abaddon Runs Second by Neck.

By the Associated Press.

Boston, July 19.—Entering the winner's circle for the third time during the day, Ken McCombs brought D. J. Sullivan 3d's Trina home by a neck in the Revere Handicap, 1 1-16-mile feature of today's Suffolk Downs program, to pay $9.60.

In second place was Ralph E. Fair's Abaddon, that had a neck on Mrs. Paul A. Shaw's Holluschickie, while Natty Boy, owned by D. C. Hall and Miss L. Warrender, was a half length away in fourth place.

Abaddon brought $9.40 to place, while Holluschickie paid $5.20 to show.

In annexing today's feature while being timed in 1:45 for the distance, Trine was conditioning for Saturday's $10,000 added Yankee Handicap, 3-year-old feature of the New England season. It was her second victory of the season in 16 starts.

Don Budge, Mako, Rally to Win Over Germans in Davis Cup Doubles

Mako Hero Of Torrid Court Duel

Scores Point That Turns Tide in Second Set; U. S. Seen Victor.

By Scotty Reston.

Wimbledon, England, July 19 (AP).—The powerful Californians, red-headed Don Budge and blond Gene Mako, won a heroic four-set doubles match from Baron Gottfried von Cramm and Heinrich Henkel today and gave the United States an all but insurmountable 2-1 lead over Germany in the Davis Cup interzone finals.

Beaten in the first set and trailing 5-3 in the second, the Americans uncorked as fine a rally as Wimbledon ever has seen to win four successive games in the second set, race on to take the third and the come back after the intermission to win five in a row for the fourth set and the match.

The scores were 4—6, 7—5, 8—6, 6—4 and at the end there was only 7 points difference between the two combinations.

As your gentle and patient Uncle Sam well knows, there's many a slip between the cup and the lip but the old gentleman, who hasn't had a sip from Mr. Davis' mug for 11 years, will have to take one colossal spill to lose it now.

All the Americans needed tonight to gain the right to face Great Britain's mediocre team in the challenge round is one victory in tomorrow's closing pair of singles matches. Even should Henkel trip the "Atlanta Atom," Bryan M. (Bitsy) Grant, tennis experts regard Budge as a sure victor over Von Cramm in the closing match of the series. The Oakland, Calif., sorrel top thoroughly whipped Von Cramm for the All-England Championship and the titled Teuton hasn't shown anything during the interzone finals to make him anything but a decided short ender for tomorrow's test.

Defeat Predicted.

Tennis experts take it for granted that the British, minus the services not only of Fred Perry but also of George Patrick Hughes, are foredoomed to defeat, whether by the United States or Germany, in the challenge round starting Saturday.

The two Germans, their fair hair shining, their flannels spotlessly white, were first to arrive on the center court for today's pivotal match, fought before a sparse crowd of 2,000, which included the newly crowned British Open golf champion, Henry Cotton.

The first four games went to deuce, but followed service. In the fifth, however, Budge and Mako broke through Von Cramm's delivery and went on to take a 4-2 lead behind Don's steaming service. Here the Teutons made a fine stand, broke through Mako in the eighth game to draw even at 4-all and then cracked Budge's delivery in the tenth game for the set.

After the first seven games of the second set had followed service, Von Cramm, perhaps the most graceful player in the world, almost single-handedly broke up Budge's cannon-ball delivery for a 5-3 lead.

Americans Rally.

At this point the Americans looked to be fading out. Von Cramm's superb ground shots, taken on the forward stride, and Henkel's great overhead play, were dominating the situation. However, the Californians mastered Henkel's service in the ninth game and Mako, who was supposed to be the weak member of the American combination, personally served and smashed the team into a 5-5 score in the tenth game.

With the first major crisis past, the Californians bent down like tackles on the line to face Von Cramm's service in the next game. They took it finally on a double fault and won the set, a 7-5, when Budge held his service in the twelfth game.

Service breaks, against Henkel and Mako respectively, marked the first two games of the third set but things went serenely then until the tenth game when the Germans twice were within a point of breaking Mako's service and taking the set. It was the blond star from Los Angeles who came through with a great smash and daring shot to the deep left to pull out the game. The Americans finally broke Henkel's service in the thirteenth game and then ran out the set at 8-6 on Mako's service.

Five in Row.

All even at 1-1 in the fourth set, the Germans took successive love games on Henkel's, Mako's and Von Cramm's service, for a 4-1 lead.

Just when they appeared definitely on the run, the Americans conjured up another rally. They won five games in a row for set and match. After breaking Von Cramm's delivery in the ninth game, Budge, serving for victory in the tenth, won four straight points, the last on a whistling ace to end the match on the highest possible note.

Nobody had anything but praise for Mako, who was the question mark on the American team and came through like a champion. His overhead game was perfect and when both Gemans hit a spell of poor lobbying midway through the match, the blond bounced irretrievable shots high into the stands.

Post Notes on Fishin' . . . . By Bill Ackerman

ACKERMAN

There are still bluefish aplenty at Ocean City; although there has been a considerable drop in the size of the individual fish; the largest over the week-end running less than three pounds. One marlin was taken on Saturday and another on Sunday.

JIMMIE FRANKLIN, Central Airlines pilot; Dick Dice, of Eastern Air, and Herb Shute, who makes use of the air only "to fly his own," at 9:30 Saturday evening decided that for a change they would like to have some of Milton Gordon's pastime, and left it to him to supply it.

Shortly before 11 he had them on their way, but just late enough by seconds to miss the last ferry at Annapolis, Milton had, but only for a minute, the idea that his party might be set back by the long drive around. He didn't know that bunch of sky travelers, however, for to the last one, they were for it, and arrived about daybreak at Ocean City, where they stepped aboard Capt. Dale Mitchell's Mary, ready for the business of the day.

Not long in getting at it either, for no sooner did they arrive at the grounds and they were pulling them in hand over fist. One hundred and twenty-two blues and two bonito, before they were tired enough to call it a day and decided to run off to the Jack Spot and see if there might be a marlin or two playing around. There was, but it was on the end of another boat's line.

To most of us a sky ride is just about the ultimate in the way of thrills, but for Jimmie and Dick, they say—give them blues every time.

Milton Gordon, who, when he's not fishing, caters to the tackle needs of sportsmen for Atlas, was rather intrigued at the lack of equipment of these marlin fishermen, in the way of teasers and outrigger releases, that have so helped the advancement of the sport in Florida waters, so today he is sending to several boatmen complete sets of equipment that should result in the hooking of many more of these streamlined fighters.

Several calls from anglers who fished the Chesapeake Beach section over the week-end sounded rather disgruntled and as though the boatmen who carried them knew little or nothing of the task at hand.

That is true not only of this place, but of others as well. But as it is so easy to obtain names of reliable guides of years' standing from this or the several other local fishing columns, that to some extent the fault seems to lay with the angler and not with the man trying to learn to earn a living.

Take this same section earlier on the same day, when Frank Del Vecchio, Southeast tackle dealer, and four of his friends returned from a trip to the Gooses on the Sylvia with over 150 large hardheads—one of the largest catches of this season.

Had any angler wanting to fish this section consulted any local dealer or fishing editor, they would in all likelihood have been sent to this same Capt. T. E. Jones, who has a fine fleet of Eastern Shore boats at his own pier at North Beach, and they would probably have returned with a like catch.

This note is particularly for those few local fishermen, who each year make the long 1,000-mile trek to Nova Scotia during late July and August for the large bluefin tuna.

If you remember, it was just the season before last that an ardent angler, Roy C. Haines, made the trip for the first time and hitched himself to the business end of a 725-pounder. It was only after nine hours of hard battling, which at times made it necessary for Roy to jam his thumbs under the pillars of his reel to save the last few turns of line, and being carried 32 miles offshore, before the giant fish was boated—and a seasonal record was lost because, without knowing it, Mrs. Haines had touched the rod for a short time.

Due to continual easterly winds the fish have been heading offshore, but during the past week struck in at Lobster Bay and around the shore to Halifax Harbor. Several have been hooked and lost off Liverpool. The first one, weighing 450 pounds, was landed on July 7, while the second was taken on July 13 and weighed 330 pounds, and by the 17th one sportsman had landed five. The season is termed officially open and it won't be many days before Roy and several others will be on their way.

Seeded List Advances in Longwood

Allison Has Easy Day, Moves Ahead by a Default.

By the Associated Press.

Brookline, Mass, July 19.—Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Tex., former National champion, had a day of rest as the forty-fifth annual Longwood Bowl Tennis Tournament, one of the Nation's oldest, opened today.

The top-seeded Allison, who won the final at Spring Lake, N. J., yesterday, went into the second round on the default of Modesto Alloo, of Berkeley, Calif.

The day off proved most welcome, the Texan said, for he fell on his right wrist at home two weeks ago, and last week's continuous play apparently aggravated the injury. He swings into action against Richard Harty, of Boston, tomorrow.

The rest of the seeded list survived intact. Bob Harmon, of Oakland, Calif., seeded second, and Allison's victim in four sets in the semi-finals at Spring Lake last week, scored easily over William V. Tripp, of Boston, 6—1, 6—3, while Richard Murphy, jr., of Utica, N. Y., Massachusetts State champion, and third seeded, trounced Vaughan Pipes, of Boston, 6—2, 6—1.

Other seeded players won as follows: Gardner Mulloy, Coral Gables, Fla., fourth, defeated Warren Payne, Portland, Me., 6—2, 6—4; Albert Jarvis, Tenefly, N. J., sixth, defeated Robert S. Millen, Boston, 6—0, 6—0; Paul Gulbord, of Melrose, former Dartmouth captain, seventh, defeated Horace Taylor, Boston, 6—1, 6—2, and Gilbert Hunt, of Washington, D. C., eighth, defeated John Nicholl, Boston, 6—0, 6—1.

Fifth seeded Owen Anderson, arrived by plane from New York too late to play and will catch up with the field tomorrow.

Play also will begin in women's singles, in which Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan is top-seeded.

With Bobby Riggs, of California, last year's winner, failing to defend his title, Allison and Murphy, who won in 1935, are the only former victors competing. Allison needs one more triumph to retire the bowl.

Card Complete For Nagurski, Olsen Match

Bronko Nagurski, the former all-American from Minnesota, who now rules as king of the wrestlers, and Cliff Olsen, the challenger, have been assured of a stellar supporting cast for their world's championship match Thursday night at Griffith Stadium.

Promoter Joe Turner yesterday closed for the appearance in the semiwindup of Hank Barber, himself a great footballer in his college days at Dartmouth, and Bill Sledge, another athlete from Texas.

Jack Donovan, the sorrell-thatched Bostonian, listed among the topnotchers in the game, will meet Jack Hader in one of the 30-minute bouts. Jack Kennedy, who has won his last three matches at the stadium, will engage Wally Dusek, a cousin of the Nebraskan Duseks, and George Harben, Georgia Tech's erstwhile football star, engages the Greek with the handlebar mustache, George Kondylis.

Thursday night's championship, Washington's first since Olsen became a pretender to the throne by winning by default from Yvon Robert, is being staged as a benefit for the District Softball Association, which is raising funds to send a team to Chicago for the national tournament.

Nagurski, who virtually has decided to quit playing football with the Chicago Bears and concentrate on wrestling, arrives here tomorrow morning. He will be honored by alumni from Minnesota, who have been thrilled by his performances on the gridiron.

33 Trackmen Chosen To Compete Abroad

Nation's Leading Athletes Divided Into Three Teams for Exhibitions in Europe and Orient; Woodruff, Albritton, San Romani on List.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 19.—Thirty-three athletes, composing three teams, were selected today by the Amateur Athletic Union to tour Japan and European countries this summer.

The largest delegation, consisting of 15 athletes, was named for the trip to Japan. Ten will invade England, France and Switzerland, while eight will tour Sweden, Norway, Denmark and Finland. Meets also are being negotiated in Hungary, Holland and Italy for the latter.

The Europe-bound party will leave New York, July 21, on the Berengaria. The team for Japan will sail from San Francisco on the Asama Maru, August 5.

The Japanese schedule calls for a meet on August 28-29 against an all-star Japanese team at Tokyo, another at Tokyo on September 4-5 against an all-star students team and a third with the ranking stars of Japan in Osaka, September 11-12. In addition, the invaders will hold two or three exhibition meets.

The England-France-Switzerland team has a meet scheduled for London, August 2, three for Switzerland, with dates to be announced, and another in France, August 22.

The smallest team is booked for the heaviest schedule. It is slated to appear in Stockholm August 4-5-6, has six meets scheduled for other Swedish cities, four in Finland and two in Denmark.

Four Favorites Advance Into Net Semifinals

Play Today at Chevy Chase in Playground Department's Tourney.

The same clean-cut victories that marked the early rounds of play in the girls' singles tennis tournament conducted by the Department of Playgrounds continued yesterday in the quarter-finals at Chevy Chase when Lucille McDowell, Hazel (Jimmy) Bishopp, Mary Gray and Helen Miller marched into the semi-finals without the loss of a set.

Miss McDowell, runner-up last summer to Champion Willie O'Steen who is not defending her laurels, carried the Burroughs banner along as was expected by beating Molly Thompson, of Chevy Chase, 6—1, 6—1, while "Jimmy" Bishopp, the tall Takoma Park brunette, effectively squelched the hopes of another Burroughs representative, Charlotte Mataja, with a 6—3, 6—3 defeat.

A semi-finalist last year, Miss Bishopp is regarded as one of the outstanding young players in Washington. She experienced a little difficulty yesterday with Miss Mataja's left-handed chop shots, but her own excellent form and steady stroking carried her to victory.

Helen Miller, Chevy Chase representative, advanced at the expense of Mary Simonds, of Rosedale, 6—2, 6—2, and Miss Gray, of Twin Oaks, ousted little Shirley Combs, of Happy Hollow 6—1 6—1. While Miss Gray clearly was the superior of her younger opponent Shirley, just 15 and enjoying her first success in playground tourney, was the sentimental favorite of those who lined the Chevy Chase court for the matches.

In the semi-finals today at Chevy Chase at 5 o'clock, Hazel Bishopp meets Mary Gray and Lucille McDowell plays Helen Miller. While Miss McDowell and Miss Bishopp are favored, both Miss Gray and Miss Miller have shown convincing form in their early matches.

Beermen Battle.

The "battle of the beermen" between Heurich's Brewers and Old Milwaukee Beer stands out as the highlight of today's sandlot card. Action starts at 5 p. m. on the West Ellipse, with the veteran Walter James on the mound for Heurich's and Reggie Brown on the firing line for Old Milwaukee.

Al Houghton And Sterner Golf Victors

Win Pro-Amateur Play With 64 at Rolling Road Course.

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

Rolling Road Club, Catonsville, Md., July 19.—Al Houghton, the Old Point Comfort professional, here to boost the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. tourney over his home course, picked up expense money today as he paired with Roy Sterner, a Baltimore public links player, to win the pro-amateur event with a best ball of 64.

A field of 71 pros and simonpures competed in the event that was bungled from several angles, and after a two-hour session the winners were picked from the net 67's in the best ball play and low two scores in the sweepstakes. One of the prize classes was passed up after the winner could not be determined.

Andy Gibson, a native Scotsman, representing the Bonnie View Club, near Baltimore, won the pro sweepstakes with an even par 70 round. George Diffenbaugh, despite four three-putt greens, was next with 71, accompanied by Spencer Overton, the host of the club amateur star with a like score.

Shea Second.

Frank Invernezzi, Forest Park, and his amateur partner, Jim Shea, won second prize in the best-ball affair with a 65, one stroke better than Diffenbaugh and Eddie Bean, his simon-pure partner from Beaver Dam.

Tied at 67's and splitting the fourth place prize five ways, were Bob Barnett, Chevy Chase, and Russ Hollebaugh, Kenwood; Leo Walper, the Bethesda driving range mentor, and F. M. Williams, Johnny Bass, the Clifton Park pro, who has placed in every event this year, and Donald O'Brien, a Rolling Road Club star, and former member of Georgetown University's golf team.

Willie Schreiber, the association secretary from Mount Pleasant, and Charles Beeler, were also grouped at 67, with Andy Gibson and Dr. B. Baker, of the Mound City.

Houghton Has 74.

Houghton, who picked up his tourney-winning partner on the first tee, on the advice of Alex Taylor, Rolling Road pro, shot a 74, but his partner, with six strokes handicap, used every stroke to advantage and helped Houghton on four other holes.

Gibson, the sweeps winner, recently joined the Middle Atlantic pro body and it was his tournament debut with the organization. He played the nines in 36, one over par, and 34, a stroke under. A four way tie existed at 72 in the sweepstakes, a stroke out of the money, between Bob Barnett, Ralph Beach, Frank Invernezzi and Leo Walper.

T. Kendrick (Hillendale), J. Farrell, 33, 35—68; George Diffenbaugh (Indian Spring), Maury Fitzgerald, 34, 35—69; Diffenbaugh and Eddie Bean, 33, 34—67; Diffenbaugh and Harry Peacock, 35, 35—70; William Schreiber (Mount Pleasant), Joe Schreiber, 36, 36—72; Schreiber and Charles Beeler, 33, 34—67; Schreiber and P. A. McNally, 37, 36—73; Al Houghton (Old Point Comfort), Roy Sterner, 31, 33—64; Houghton and Leftenant, no card; Houghton and Volney Burnett, 34, 35—69; Frank Invernezzi (Forest Park), Jim Shea, 31, 34—65; Invernezzi, Hogerty, 33, 35—70; Invernezzi, Harrison Oliver, 32, 36—68.

Mel Shorey (East Potomac), E. A. Merkle, 32, 36—68; Shorey and George Richardson, 34, 37—71; Shorey and Baumgartner, 34, 35—69; Ralph Beach (Suburban), Nathan Kaufman, 34, 36—70; Beach and Robert Goldman, 34, 36—70; Beach and Joseph Grant, 35, 36—71; Carroll McMasters (Woodholme), Manni Fleet, 37, 39—76; McMasters, Otto Greiner, 33, 37—70; McMasters, Jerry Goodman, 38, 34—72; Johnnie Bass (Clifton Park), Roger Pippen, 35, 33—68; Bass and Donald O'Brien, 33, 34—67; Bass and Eddie Meyers, 34, 36—70; Alex Milne (Baltimore C. C.), J. Hoffman, 35, 35—70; Milne and Bill Johnston, 34, 36—70; George Hoband, 38, 35—73; Leo Walper (unattached), F. M. Williams, 33, 34—67; Walper and J. T. Kirchner, no card; Bob Barnett (Chevy Chase) and Robert Stead, jr., 35, 34—69; Bargett and Charles MacNall, 34, 36—70; Barnett and Russ Hollebaugh, 33, 34—67; Johnny Flattery (Rodgers Forge) and Edgar Brown, 35, 35—70; Flattery and Steve Palmer, 76; Flattery and Ben Gurch, 73; Andy Gibson (Bonnie View) and Dr. B. Baker, 34, 33—67; Gibson and A. Donnell, no card.

Tommy Ryan (Belle Haven) and A. L. Willard, 38, 36—73; Ryan and Earl Rhodefick, Providence, R. I., heavyweights; 6 rounds. Rated B. Roesch is the fair-haired boy of the ring today, but he is liable to get his hair knocked off by this two-time conqueror of Nathan Mann. Both have defeated Murray Kanner, the elongated local heavyweight, but Eddie had Murray on the floor, which is more than Max could do. It looks like a real test for Roesch, but he seems to have the stuff, so we will string along with him—with a prayer.

Walter Woods, New York, vs. Mickey Flannegan, Miami, Fla., middleweights; 6 rounds. Rated C-plus. Woods is just too good for anything around these parts except Williams, who will be otherwise engaged tonight. Flannegan is a good catcher, but he should fall before the one-man gashouse gang, long before the scheduled finish.

Prince Albert, Jacksonville, Fla., vs. Kayo Moseby, Atlantic City, colored middleweights; 4 rounds. Rated D. This one should be good for a lot of laughs, with Albert winning, for a change.

Billy Bullock, Washington, vs. Frankie DeAngelo, Washington, featherweights; 4 rounds. Rated D. Bullock is a much better fighter than we give him credit for and he should win handily over the veteran who is doing well on the comeback trail. In other words, Bullock, perhaps by a knockout.

Bucs Defeat Phils, 6 to 5; Even Series

Contest Tied Up 3 Times Won by Pirates in Final Inning.

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, July 19.—Pittsburgh defeated the Phillies today by a score of 6 to 5 to break even in the four-game series.

It was a seesaw battle from the start. Philadelphia scored three runs in the first inning only to have the Pirates knot the count with another trio in the second. The locals went ahead in the third only to have the visitors again deadlock the score in the sixth. In the home half the Phils went ahead again, but the Pirates tied it in the seventh and then won in the ninth on Paul Waner's double and Suhr's single.

Four pitchers worked for Pittsburgh, with weaver the official winner. Walters went the distance for the Phils.

Klein hit his sixth home run in the first inning.

Si Johnson In Form as Cards Win

Gives Giants But 6 Hits While Mates Put Over 3-2 Victory.

By the Associated Press.

New York, July 19.—Si Johnson, smallest member of the St. Louis Cardinal pitching staff, today turned in his fourth victory in eight days as he set the Giants down with six hits and shut off an impending ninth-inning rally to win, 3 to 2.

The defeat, first for the Giants in the four-game series that ended this afternoon, put them a full game behind the leading Chicago Cubs, who won from the Dodgers.

Johnson, who gained his first triumph of the Cards' current road trip last Monday and earned credit for both ends of a double-header in Philadelphia on Friday, was in fine form. He didn't walk a man and, until Wally Berger clouted his eleventh home run of the season and Sam Leslie followed with a single in the ninth, he had given no more than one hit an inning.

Johnny Mize, who hit two doubles, also scored two of the winning runs. An infield out and Leo Durocher's single brought him home in the fifth after his first two-bagger, and he led off in the ninth with the other and crossed the plate as Harry Danning threw wild after fielding Frenchy Bordagary's bunt.

Bordagary accounted for the other tally in the seventh as he singled, stole second and just beat Mel Ott's throw to the plate on Durocher's single.

Harry Gumbert, charged with his sixth defeat, was lifted in the eighth for a pinch-hitter and Dick Coffman worked the ninth.

Wheat Prices Tumble With Jump in Supply

Increase of 21,861,000 Bushels in Week Sets New Record.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, July 19.—Largely because of a new all-time record increase of the United States wheat visible supply, Chicago wheat prices today fell 2¼ cents a bushel. The total increase for the past week was 21,861,000 bushels, against 18,600,000 bushels shown in August, 1929, the previous greatest increase. A year ago the increase amounted to but 13,739,000 bushels.

Contributing to the downward trend of Chicago wheat values were sharp setbacks of Winnipeg prices, a development ascribed more or less to heavy selling there against purchases here.

Closing prices of Chicago wheat futures were 1⅛@1⅞ cents under Saturday's finish; July, 1.26⅛; September, 1.26⅜@1.26⅝; December, 1.27⅛@1.28, with corn 2¼ off to ⅜ up; July, 1.27¾@1.28; September, 1.10¼@1.10⅝; December, 77⅞@77¾; Oats 1⅝@3 cents down; September, 35¾@35⅞, and rye showing 1⅞@3 cents drop; September, 88⅝. Provisions results varied from 2 cents decline to 15 cents advance.

Steel Again Sets Pace for More Active Stock Trading and Reaches New High Mark.

New York, July 19.—On a turnover of around a million shares, the best in several days, stocks freshened and the leaders ran up 2 to 4 points. Best prices in most groups were reached in the last hour of trading, but the firmer tone was evident throughout. Foreign exchanges were strong in the sterling area. Pounds reached a new high price in dollar terms, but the feeling toward the franc was less optimistic. Some profit taking set back grains and cotton was easier. September wheat closed 1¼ points down at 126⅝ cents a bushel.

Stocks again were dominated by two or three issues, mainly United States Steel. The shares opened with 4,000 units at a rise of over a point and after some jockeying the race got under way and the usual last hour boost took place, sending the stock to a new high price on the recovery, above 119. Chrysler did well as a running mate, going up 4 points and in the running, just behind the dust, was General Electric, which also reached a new high price since early in the year. Most stock groups were firm.

Fast Trade Pace.

Industrial news over the week-end was good enough to maintain the better feeling in the speculative markets. The sight of high prices for farm products, in a year when this country's production will on the whole be greater than for some years, stimulates the imagination of those who like to take the cheerful side. Rising commodity markets usually prove to be good running mates for higher stocks, and likewise a break in commodities usually brings stocks down, as happened this spring.

The steel industry is holding a remarkably high operating rate for this season. This week the American Iron & Steel Institute estimates a slight drop in operations, from 82.7 per cent to capacity last week to 82.5 per cent. A year ago the rate was 70 per cent. So high a rate for the summer months, after activity at above 90 per cent in the spring, and with the promise of good autumn business, has been seen but rarely in the steel industry in peace times. It must mean that industry in general is maintaining a profitable rate of operation.

If they buy and sell stocks according to their feelings on politics and business, the professional element in Wall Street must be ready to go into the market on a larger scale. Certainly the developments at Washington over the court packing bill promises the biggest setback to New Dealism that has occurred since the decision upsetting NRA.

Bigger Deficit.

Government bonds were quiet and firm. Some expansion is taking place in the investments of institutions that buy large amounts and the failure of ordinary bank loans to continue the improvement of earlier in the year suggests some replacement of bonds sold by banks in the last few months. Those operations will be based on money rates and investment needs and in no sense on rising Government credit.

Those who profess to find some encouragement in Government finances point to the decline in relief expenditure during the first two weeks of the 1938 fiscal year. It is true that such outlays have fallen from $139,491,000 a year ago to a total of $94,248,000 for July 1-14, but most ordinary expenses are higher than ever, and the RFC, instead of recovering $122,041,000 as it did in the corresponding period of the 1937 fiscal year, has made net expenditures of $17,297,000 this fiscal year. On all accounts expenditure July 1-14, inclusive, was $402,878,000, compared with $248,052,000 a year ago and the deficit was $194,155,000, compared with $99,834,000.

All this occurred despite the fact that total revenue was $60,000,000 higher. Much of the increased expenditure represents bookkeeping transfers to old age reserve, railroad retirement and Government employe retirement trust funds, but these items are money spent or eventually to be spent, and the showing is not on the whole optimistic.

Steel.

The pool in steel shows that none of the technic of the old days has been forgotten, observed an old Wall Street cynic, who for the tenth or twelfth time watched the stock quoted higher on an opening of a few thousand shares. Whether the market has closed strong, weak or dull the previous session. Steel for the past two weeks or so has had its customary strong opening, followed by enough buying to keep the price near the opening, always a new high price, and to give it a run in the last few minutes of the trading to a higher closing. The price of the stock in between runs has gone down just enough to bring in those who "buy on reactions" and who are afraid of missing a market. The common stock's profits this year are bound to be large and a good dividend also is probable, to say nothing of new financing plans. This price or even one much higher, it may turn out, is justified by profits.

Lawson Heads National Union Insurance Co.

John Saul and Floyd E. Davis Are Elected Vice Presidents.

By Thomas M. Cahill.

Alfred H. Lawson, a vice president and real estate officer of Washington Loan & Trust Co., has been re-elected president of the National Union Insurance Co. of Washington. Directors elected for the ensuing administrative year were: William L. Beale, Charles R. Brown, Floyd E. Davis, Alfred H. Lawson, William H. Marbury, Walter S. Pratt, jr., John Saul, James P. Schick and William H. Somervell.

At the directors' meeting of organization the following officers, besides Mr. Lawson, were elected: John Saul and Floyd E. Davis, vice presidents; William H. Somervell, secretary, and William H. Marbury, assistant secretary. The company was chartered in 1865.

Northeast Building Association.

The Northeast Building Association has elected the following directors for the new business year: Henry C. Althoff, Julian F. Belfield, R. John Boehs, N. T. Chaconas, Allen E. Cowles, A. L. Foster, Hazel R. Engelbrecht, J. A. Openshaw, James E. Payne, John B. Rubino, James L. Sherwood, Roy L. Swenson, Schuyler S. Symons and William S. Torbert.

At the directors' meeting James L. Sherwood was re-elected president; William S. Torbert, first vice president; Henry C. Althoff, second vice president; Schuyler S. Symons, secretary; Allen E. Cowles, assistant secretary; James E. Payne, treasurer; Hazel R. Engelbrecht, assistant treasurer; William S. Torbert, counsel.

President Sherwood has headed the association since its organization in 1916, and has seen it grow from an institution with a few hundred dollars to one with more than $1,000,000 in assets. Mr. Sherwood is also manager of the Brookland branch of Hamilton National Bank. Mr. Torbert has been with the association since its founding and Mr. Symons also assisted in its organization.

Local Air Record.

The largest air passenger transport ever recorded for a month in Washington is reported by American Airlines, Inc., for June. According to Herbert D. Ford, district sales manager for the corporation locally, it carried 1,851 passengers in and out of Washington, a 16 per cent gain over May, when 1,594 were transported. It also was a 77 per cent gain over the 1,041 passengers in June, 1936. Installation of new nonstop 21-passenger plane service to Chicago and the use of skysleepers between here and the West Coast are mentioned as factors causing the increase. Air express originating here showed a substantial gain. In June, 1937, 3,833 pounds were sent from Washington as against 3,584 pounds in May and 1,620 in June last year, an increase for the year of 137 per cent.

Mortgage Bankers.

A. D. Fraser, president of A. D. Fraser, Inc., of Cleveland, is slated for election to the presidency of the Mortgage Bankers Association of America at the organization's twenty-fourth annual convention next October in Cleveland, according to an announcement by the nominating committee headed by W. Walter Williams, of Seattle.

Mr. Fraser was named the nominee by the committee in its report and his nomination is tantamount to election. Mr. Fraser, a member of the association's board of governors since 1931, succeeds James W. Collins, president of the Tracy Loan & Trust Co. of Salt Lake City. He is a trustee of the Cleveland Real Estate Board and former president of the Cleveland Apartment House Owners Association. He has been engaged in mortgage banking and real estate development in Cleveland for the past 20 years. He was born in Cleveland.

Life Insurance Sales.

For the fifth consecutive month this year, new life insurance sales show an increase over the corresponding month of 1936. This is the latest report of the Association of Life Insurance Presidents which states that total sales during June aggregated $825,288,000, as contrasted with $768,076,000 in June, 1936, an advance of 7.4 per cent. For the first six months of the present year a gain of 8.9 per cent was reflected over the 1936 half year.

For the first half of the current year aggregate ordinary insurance written totaled $3,006,164,000, as against $2,747,594,000 in the 1936 half year. Industrial insurance during the first half of 1937 totaled $1,376,158,000, in comparison with $1,359,563,000 in the corresponding period a year ago, while group insurance for the first six months of 1937 was $379,903,000, as against $266,130,000 in the similar period last year.

Banking Notes.

President Floyd E. Davis, of Lincoln National Bank recently completed his twenty-fourth year as chief executive of that institution.

A. E. Henze, chief of the order department, W. B. Hibbs & Co., has been on his annual vacation. Mr. Henze is also editor of Dollars and Sense, publication of Washington Chapter, American Institute of Banking.

Banks Are Selling Government Bonds

By the Associated Press.

Th Federal Reserve Board reported yesterday that member banks in 101 cities continued to liquidate holdings of direct Government securities during the week ended July 14. The board's weekly condition statement showed that these holdings, which have been declining steadily in recent months, dropped $39,000,000 to $8,258,000,000. This was $1,230,000,000 under the same week last year.

Holdings of fully guaranteed Federal issues increased, however, rising $9,000,000 ot $1,150,000,000. The total was $126,000,000 under the same week last year.

The banks loans to commerce, industry and agriculture advanced on securities as collateral, increased $14,000,000 for the week to $572,000,000. Similar loans otherwise secured and unsecured climbed $62,000,000 to $3,853,000,000.

Declines were listed for other types of loans with advances to securities brokers and dealers showing the greatest drop—$69,000,000 for the week to $1,356,000,000.

New York, July 19 (AP).—Arrangements have been made for sale of two New York Curb Exchange memberships today at $19,000 each, $800 below the previous transactions and the lowest quotation since March 15, 1935, when a sale was made at $12,000.

Great Lakes Shipping Tops Boom Records

Season Promises All-Time High Movement of 70,000,000 Tons.

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, Ohio, June 19.—Great Lakes navigation at mid-season has surpassed nearly every record established in the banner year of 1929—and there is every indication that 1937 will close as the greatest in history. With steel mills operating at near peak capacity demand for iron ore has been more insistent than in 1929.

Shipping interests believed that the records of 1929, when 66,000,000 tons were brought down from the northern Michigan and Minnesota iron ranges, never would be equaled. But the season, opening April 10, one of the earliest in history, had scarcely got under way until predictions of a 70,000,000 ton movement were heard. Weekly and monthly iron ore movement reports are bearing out these predictions. Some of the 1937 records are:

April coal movement, 5,318,395 tons.

April movement through the Sault Ste. Marie canal, connecting Lakes Superior with Huron, 4,620,186 tons, the best for any month excepting April, 1927, with 4,697,643 tons.

French Franc Drops To Another New Low

New York, July 19 (AP).—The French franc, reflecting the continued financial difficulties of the Chautemps government, broke sharply today, reaching the lowest point since 1926. Continuing the decline of the past week, the franc was offered in New York at 3.75¼ cents, off .01⅛ of a cent from Saturday's close.

Steel Output Dips To 82.5 Per Cent

New York, July 19 (AP).—Operations in the steel industry for the current week declined .2 of a point to 82.5 per cent of capacity, compared with 82.7 per cent last week the American Iron and Steel Institute estimated today. A month ago operations averaged 75.9 per cent of capacity while a year ago the rate was 70.9 per cent.

Woman Seized As Kidnaper of Beltsville Boy

car, but once in the machine she began to fight back again. By this time State policemen from all over the county were converging upon the scene and over the route taken by the green sedan.

State Policeman Vernon Spicer arrived just as the men were pushing the woman into the car and his strength was enlisted to help hold her there.

Meanwhile, Philip's father, notified that his child was safe, came to Berwyn, about two miles from Beltsville and drove his son back to his mother.

At Hyattsville the woman declined to talk or give her name. Throughout the ride to the station she continued to struggle with her captors, who bore deep scratches on their arms and face.

The woman weighed at least 180 pounds. Her hair and eyes are light brown and her clothing, white sweater and skirt, of good quality.

According to Dr. W. E. Malin, of Riverdale, who was summoned to examine the woman, she probably is a mental case. Police said they were informed she had stopped at Berwyn to buy a glass of beer.

Residents of the suburban community told police they had seen the woman in the neighborhood during the last two or three days, but none knew who she was. The mystery of her identity was further deepened when it was learned the single license tag on the machine was issued for another car to a Washington school teacher.

Washington and Maryland authorities joined in attempting to trace the auto and to identify the woman.

At the station the woman remained standing, her clothing disheveled and a portion of it removed, her eyes staring vacantly. The first words she uttered were spoken when an officer told her to sit down.

"I don't want to," she shouted.

Her hands were then handcuffed behind her and she was forced into the chair. Later she was locked in a room, the door of which she beat incessantly.

Over and over again the woman repeated, "He is my brother's child," but the Shanes said they had never seen the woman before.

At the Shane home, Philip, unmoved by his experience, which he appeared to enjoy, was put to bed. The Shanes have six children. Shane is employed in the dairy section of the Agriculture Research Center, at Beltsville.

Boston, Mass., July 19.—This looks like a boom year for the farmer—crops are good and prices high. The prices received by framers in June for their crops were up on the average 16 per cent from a year ago. Grains jumped 60 per cent, fruits 36 per cent, truck crops 25 per cent and meat animals 14 per cent. Prices for chickens and eggs declined.

Rites to Be Held For O. O. Kuhn At 4 P.M. Today

Messages of Condolence Pour in After Death of Journalist.

Services for Oliver Owen Kuhn, managing editor of the Star, who died Sunday, will be held at 4 p. m. today at the National City Christian Church, Thomas Circle. The Rev. Raphael H. Miller, the pastor, will conduct the services. Burial will be in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Honorary pallbearers will be Theodore W. Noyes, Frank B. Noyes, Fleming Newbold, Newbold Noyes, Victor Kauffmann, Samuel H. Kauffmann, R. M. Kauffmann, George Adams Howard and Crosby N. Boyd.

Active pallbearers will be G. A. Lyon, B. M. McKelway, Herbert F. Corn, G. Gould Lincoln, LeRoy W. Herron, William Galt Burns, J. Russell Young and William Drew.

Messages of condolence yesterday poured in from journalists, statesmen and men high in the political and publishing worlds. All agreed the death of Mr. Kuhn was a great loss to the city, the country and to the newspaper profession.

Mrs. Titus' Rites To Be Held Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Elizabeth Marian Titus, 46, who died at Garfield Memorial Hospital Sunday after a long illness, will be held today at 10 a. m. at her home, 9414 Georgia avenue, North Woodside, Md. Burial will be in Union Cemetery, Leesburg, Va.

Besides her husband, she is survived by her mother, Mrs. Kate D. Maples, who made her home with her daughter, and a stepson, Louis Titus, of Leesburg, Va.

7 Defendants Testify Today In Racket Trial

Upper Marlboro Jury May Get Bail Fraud Case on Thursday.

The Prince Georges County jury which will assemble at Upper Marlboro, Md., again today to continue hearing testimony in the trial of seven men charged with conspiracy will get the case Thursday, it was indicated yesterday by attorneys for both sides.

Attorneys for the indicted men said they expected to occupy about two days. Taking the stand in their own behalf today, the defendants will deny the charges they conspired to defraud Washington motorists arrested on traffic charges and to obstruct justice in the county police court.

Those on trial are Herbert J. Moffat, former justice of the peace at Hyattsville, Md.; Elmer Pumphrey, bondsman, of Suitland, Md.; Warren Peake, Claude Reese, Albert Anderson and Arthur Brown, former county policemen and Frank Bell, former desk clerk at the Hyattsville substation.

Rebuttal testimony is expected to be introduced by the prosecution Thursday morning. The jury, it was said, will probably get the case late Thursday.

The circuit court recessed Friday after a five-day session. Yesterday the court was at La Plata in Charles County.

Lehman Urges Wagner Fight Court Change

N. Y. Governor Says Bill Would Set Dangerous Precedent.

on the eve of a "finish fight" on the bill threw a bombshell into political circles, coming as it did as the first opposition to any Roosevelt Administration policy since he succeeded the President as New York Governor in 1933.

Mr. Roosevelt was credited with influencing Lehman to accept a third two-year term, which he began last January 1, after he originally announced his intention to retire.

Friendship of Mr. Roosevelt and Gov. Lehman dates back to 1928, when they were nominated as New York's Democratic candidates for Governor and Lieutenant Governor, respectively. They served two terms through 1932, when Mr. Roosevelt, looking toward Washington, supported Lehman as his successor.

Letter to Wagner.

Today's letter to Senator Wagner was made public by Walter T. Brown, secretary to the Governor, during his absence at Hot Springs, Va., where he is on vacation. At Hot Springs Lehman declined to further discuss it.

Lehman has planned and seen executed many social and economic reforms since he became Governor, most of them co-ordinating State efforts with plans initiated by the Federal Government under Mr. Roosevelt.

Only this year Lehman succeeded in having the politically-divided Legislature's complete approval of a social security program patterned after the Federal agenda.

Supported New Deal.

The Governor, in his annual message, said, "I believe it to be sound for New ork to co-operate wholeheartedly with the programs instituted by the Federal Government," and pledged "to go forward rapidly in our march of progress."

The Capitol office of Republican Assemblyman Abbot Low Moffat, New York City, disclosed soon after Lehman's letter was made public that the State legislator wrote Senator Wagner last February 15, also asking him to oppose the court bill.

Moffat said he received a reply, in which the Senator said, "Let me assure you that I am considering this transcendent issue with a full sense of its importance."

Only State legislative leader in the city, Republican Assembly Speaker Oswald D. Heck asserted, "I am very much surprised at the Governor's action, although I believe it is much in line with the views of the general public."

A Republican resolution calling on Congress to defeat the President's court reorganization died in committee this year after efforts were made to seek nonpartisan support.

Lehman repeatedly was asked his opinion of the court proposal at press conferences, and each time smilingly casting aside the queries with a "no comment."

Foes of Bill Cheered.

Opposition of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman, of New York, to the President's court plan was hailed yesterday by rejoicing opponents as a devastating blow to the bill.

Friends of the measure either declined comment, or refused to concede the Lehman statement will affect the outcome of the court fight.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, to whom Lehman addressed his letter, was in Avon, N. J., but had "nothing to say about the letter until I read it," the Associated Press reported.

Wagner, after a long noncommittal period, had been reported ready to come out for the substitute plan and make a speech for it, before Lehman asked him to vote against the measure.

Senator Josiah W. Bailey, of North Carolina, expressed "gratification" at the letter.

"It will necessarily have a powerful effect on the fight," said Bailey. "Such a statement coming from a warm friend of the President will disarm those criticizing Senators who hold the same views."

Copeland "Not Surprised."

Senator Royal S. Copeland, of New York, Wagner's colleague, said he was "not surprised."

"As a patriot, an intelligent citizen and a good American, Gov. Lehman would be against anything that would be a blot on our national life," said Copeland.

Senator William H. King, of Utah, said "Gov. Lehman's courage will animate others to follow his course."

There was no immediate comment on the letter in White House quarters. But on the homeward-bound Robinson funeral train the Governor's announcement was an animated topic of discussion.

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, of Montana, leader of the opposition, said Lehman is "an outstanding liberal and friend of the President" and he was "exceedingly pleased" with his letter.

Senator Edward R. Burke, of Nebraska, another opposition leader, declared the letter "completely and finally disposes of the bill."

Farley Not Concerned.

Few advocates of the measure had anything to say, but Postmaster General James A. Farley remarked he "was not at all concerned" when he read it.

Senator Robert La Follette, Wisconsin Progressive, another ardent supporter of the bill, said "it will not make the slightest difference in the outcome."

"The letter was a waste of postage," La Follette added.

Other comment:

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, jr. (Republican), Massachusetts: "Gov. Lehman's views will command wide respect. It stresses a point that has been uppermost in my mind."

Senator Bennett Champ Clark (Democrat), of Missouri: "A remarkable manifestation of public sentiment."

Senator H. Styles Bridges (Republican), New Hampshire: "I am gratified. It is just one more bit of evidence of the deep concern of men in trusted position."

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney (Democrat), Wyoming—"It sets at rest any contention that opposition to the bill involves either any lack of sympathy with the general aims of the Administration, or lack of personal loyalty to the President."

Senator Arthur H. Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan—"Gov. Lehman's intellectual honesty has driven him to a courageous and invincible conclusion. All that remains is to call the coroner."

Opinions Divided.

Senator Pat McCarran (Democrat), Nevada—"It is significant of what the country thinks."

Senator Elbert Thomas (Democrat), Utah—"It just shows how even our great leaders have not studied the subject deeply. We need judicial reform."

Senator Prentiss Brown (Democrat), Michigan—"I think the Lehman argument is strong. It always has disturbed me. We are trying to bring about an adjustment, and we are still hopeful."

Senator Tom Connally (Democrat), Texas—"The Governor has taken high and strong ground. His statement is sound and expresses the essence of all of us who have opposed the plan from the beginning."

Senator Theodore F. Green (Democrat), Rhode Island—"It contains nothing new. The same argument has been advanced previously and successfully refused."

Comment was declined by Senators Harrison, of Mississippi; Barkley, of Kentucky; Minton, of Indiana, and Byrnes, of South Carolina, all Democrats, committed to the court plan.

Maine Warden Ousted For Prisoner Junket

Augusta, Me., July 19 (AP).—Asserting he had learned two convicted murderers had left State prison for a day's outing at a public beach, Gov. Lewis O. Barrows tonight appointed John H. Welch, of Houston, former Aroostook County sheriff, to succeed Ward P. Johnson, of Saco, as warden of the prison.

First Melon Boat Comes In With Customers Aplenty

The Good Ship Elva C kept a date yesterday with the two young men in the picture and about 500,000 watermelon lovers in Washington. For the last six years, she has been the first to come into Washington Harbor with a load of the Southland's finest summer eating.

The Elva C. Arrives in Capital With First Watermelon Cargo

Nosing her way into Washington Harbor, the Elva C kept a tryst with tradition yesterday.

For the sixth consecutive time she was first ship in the Capital with her cargo of watermelons. There was excitement at the Seventh street wharves. There was scattered cheering.

Skipper of the Elva C is windburned, sunbronzed Harry Self, a melon of a man who knows how to pick his wares as well as he knows how to sail a ship. First mate is Jesse Abbott. Both come from Whitestone, Va., on the Rappahannock River, as does their vessel.

This time, to delight palates long hankering, they brought a cargo of 1,600 melons—weight, 21 tons. The Elva C poked her way out of the fog at 7:15 o'clock, and as soon as she was moored the customers began to appear.

The skipper and his mate leave their home port on the river each summer before anyone else gets the idea, and travel down the Rappahannock to Chesapeake Bay and to Moorehead, N. C. They go out to the sandy-bottomed farms and select their melons from the farmers for $18 a 100.

As business got brisker at the wharves yesterday Capt. Self observed:

"My favorite character is Melanie Wilkes in 'Gone With the Wind.'

"Me-lo-ny Wilkes, you understand!"

Lehman Stand Aids Hopes of Court Bill Foes

contention was that some Senators who might vote against the court plan would wish to show loyalty for the Administration and try to even up things by voting in the leadership fight for Senator Alben W. Barkley, regarded as the White House candidate. The Democratic opponents felt, moreover, that they had everything to gain and nothing to lose by waiting until the conclusion of the leadership fight for a show-down on the court plan.

Aside from the fact that it became generally known that Senator Harrison has the promise of 34 Democratic votes for the leadership, the only development in that contest was a statement by Vice President Garner that he is following a hands-off course.

"In this contest over the Senate leadership," asserted the Vice President, "there has not been on my part any manifestation by even the nod of the head or the bat of an eyelash of any preference. I have told that to Senators Harrison and Barkley and I have even told it to my wife. There is not a human being to whom I have indicated any preference."

Poses for Photographs.

Having taken that neutral position, Garner posed for photographs with Harrison and Barkley. President Roosevelt last week informed Senator Harrison he had no preference, although his "Dear Alben" letter was widely interpreted as indicating his preference for Senator Barkley.

The Vice President declined to be interviewed regarding his plans. He said the length of his stay in Washington would be "controlled by the situation." When asked "what is the situation," he replied: "That is what I am trying to find out."

It is evident that the Democratic division over the leadership will not follow the lines formed over the court fight. Many of the court bill opponents plan to support Harrison, as do a number of proponents of that bill. On the other hand, some court opponents will vote for Barkley for personal or other reasons.

For instance, Senator John H. Overton is expected to vote against the court plan, but for Barkley. Incidentally, it became known on this trip that the Administration had tried very hard to get Overton's support on the court bill by bringing pressure on him through Gov. Richard Leche of Louisiana.

But while lieutenants of the two candidates for the leadership continued their fight to win over doubtful Senators, the chief topic of conversation aboard the train had to do with Gov. Lehman's action. It came as a shock to most of those aboard the train and several believed the news was a hoax until they were shown press association telegrams quoting excerpts from the New York Governor's letter.

Immediately, Senator Edward R. Burke, one of the opposition leaders, sent to Gov. Lehman the following telegram:

"Have just read your courageous and statesmanlike telegram (sic) to Senator Wagner. You have rendered a public service of immeasurable and lasting value. I congratulate you."

Senator Burton K. Wheeler, another of the opposition leaders, asserted he was "exceedingly pleased" and added "Gov. Lehman is an outstanding liberal and friend of the President."

Senator Prentiss Brown, one of the doubtful Senators on this issue, said: "I think the Lehman argument is strong. This measure has always disturbed me. We are trying to bring about an adjustment and are still hopeful."

Postmaster General Farley asserted that "it does not mean anything," while Senator La Follette thought "it was a waste of postage."

Lewis Appeals For Agreement On Court Plan

Democratic Whip Asks Party to Bury Hatchet; George Attacks Bill.

By Robert C. Albright.

An appeal for Democrats to bury the hatchet and settle differences at tomorrow's Senate leadership caucus was heard at the Capitol yesterday, as Administration leaders girded for resumption of the court fight that has ripped party unity.

Adjustment of the conflict at tomorrow's Democratic conference was proposed by Senator James Hamilton Lewis, of Illinois, Senate party whip, following a call at the White House.

Later, Attorney General Homer S. Cummings, one of the court plan authors, and Senator Hugo L. Black, of Alabama, advocate of the court plan, was called to the White House by the President.

Wants Early Showdown.

Both declined comment. But there were clear intimations in Administration quarters that an early showdown on the substitute court plan would be welcomed.

Following close on the heels of Gov. Herbert H. Lehman's announced stand against the court plan, the Black and Cummings call inspired talk of further compromise, but there was no indication the President is willing to yield.

As the Senate prepared to resume business today for the first time since Senator Robinson's death, Senator Walter F. George, of Georgia, took the radio last night to warn of "the futility and uselessness of further consideration of the bill now before the Senate."

"Nevertheless," said George, "since we are warned that the fight must go on to the bitter end regardless of consequence, we must assume that the consequences to the solidarity of the party in power and to the country has been subjected to that same scrutinizing care which preceded the sudden springing of the original court bill upon the American people."

George declared the Judiciary committee's arguments against the original bill are "unanswerable," and the "time has passed" when the substitute bill could be defended. He said the bill sanctions "carpet baggery" by permitting transfer of judges into districts with which they are unfamiliar.

"The concentration of judicial power; the administration of the law of the land in the Chief Justice is made possible by this plan," said the Georgian. "It is carpet baggery raised to the nth power; it is carpet baggery glorified."

Resumption of the court fight will be in order at 2 p. m. today, after the Senate concludes its routine "morning hour," but there is a strong possibility the court measure may be laid aside temporarily for consideration of the vetoed farm land bank interest bill.

Accord Is Disclosed.

The farm bill veto of the President already has been overridden by the House and faces an almost certain override by hte Senate. Debate on the measure, should it be called up today, may consume one or two days, after which the court fight would go on.

There appeared little disposition on the part of court bill opponents remaining in Washington to move immediately to send the court bill back to committee. At least a few days of debate appeared in prospect before any such attept is brought to a show down.

Although the opposition claims enough votes to recommit the bill, they are unwilling to hazard defeat and want to be certain their poll in favor of recommittal is ironclad before making the test.

In addition, some 20 Senate opponents are anxious to get their speeches in the Record before the question is disposed of. Senator Black and other friends of the bill also are anxious to speak. Others feel the caucus called for 10 a. m. tomorrow to select a new majority leader should precede any test vote on the bill.

Pointing out that no party conferences have been held in the Senate this session since Robinson was re-elected leader, Majority Whip Lewis said yesterday he believed tomorrow's caucus should serve the double purpose of selecting Robinson's successor and assuaging party differences.

Lewis, who called on White House officials, rather than the President, predicted the court issue would be settled this week "without leaving a rift in the Democratic Party."

Senator George, in his radio speech, declared the purpose of adding new justices to the Supreme Court and lower Federal benches "is to affect, if not to control, judicial decision and determination."

The Georgian said the "simple truth remains" that Judiciary Committee majority arguments against the bill are "unanswered."

Senator George said "in reality, the proposed substitute is the old bill in principle and consequence."

The Georgian denied the fight was a fight against the President, but declared "we nevertheless recognize the issue is above party lines, and, if we may be pardoned, we humbly believe we represent Americanism in our opposition to this bill."

"It is still a bill to wipe out State lines," George said. "It is still a plan which would impair the independence of the court and destroy the system of checks and balance essential to the preservation of the rights of individuals. Minority and local governments, in short, the liberties of the citizen.

"It is still a plan for the rapid and complete concentration of political power in central government—absolutism which was hateful to the men who fought the Revolution to establish American liberty upon impregnable foundations."

George said an "easy precedent" would be established for succeeding Administrations if the bill is passed, pointing out that "this next Administration" could be Republican, Socialist, Communist, "or a peculiar combination of two or more political breeds."

MAYBE you don't know it—but every mile you drive today is going to cost you more than usual if you are using ordinary gasoline. Why? Because ordinary gasoline boils on hot days and part of it is wasted.

The thermometer at the left shows you the temperature at which ordinary gasoline begins to boil—and the carburetor and fuel pump will get hotter than that on a hot summer day. But—if you're using Betholine—you'll get all the mileage you pay for. For Betholine's boiling point is above fuel pump and carburetor temperatures.
